Administration Won't Ask Boost In Debt 'Ceiling'

Morgenthau Calls Increase Desirable, But Leaves Action Up to Congress

By Felix Cotten.

Avoiding a showdown battle, Secretary Morgenthau announced yesterday the Administration would not ask Congress to increase the $45,000,000,000 public debt "ceiling" at this session.

It should be increased, he said, but Congress will have to take the initiative if it is done. He remarked, incidentally, that the way to economize—if Congress is bent on economy—is to cut appropriations instead of voting huge sums and then refusing to give the Treasury authority to spend the money.

A discordant note, meanwhile, was injected into the Administration-sponsored movement to overhaul the corporation tax structure to remove "deterrents" to business. Senator Barkley, Kentucky, Democratic leader, said the effort to reduce the existing five corporation levies to a single tax involved the vexing problem of whether to boost substantially the income tax on large corporations or to increase taxes on small corporations.

SEC Relaxation Sought

Other developments in the Administration's business expansion drive were:

A national conference of stock exchange leaders, meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, agreed tentatively on a legislative program to relax prohibitions and requirements of the securities acts as a means of stimulating new capital flotations through expanded market activity.

A group of four Senators, following a call at the White House, insisted the President's business recovery drive should not "back up." The President's request for an additional $150,000,000 for relief, they declared, is an essential part of the recovery program.

Morgenthau disclosed that Congress would be asked to remove the "partition" in the debt limit law whereby not more than $30,000,000,000 of the $45,000,000,000 can be outstanding at any one time in bonds.

The $30,000,000,000 bond limit, Morgenthau declared, will be reached next September. Unless Congress removes or advances the limit, he said, the Treasury will have to confine new borrowing to notes and bills.

May Halt "Baby Bonds"

If the partition is removed, Morgenthau said, he will be able to get along until next January or February. But it will be necessary to increase the debt limit at that time, he intimated, for the Government will have to curtail spending drastically.

If the $30,000,000,000 bond limitation is not removed, the Treasury will have to discontinue "baby bond" sales in September. Numerous small investors buy these bonds regularly.

The Treasury, if necessary, Morgenthau pointed out, could borrow substantial sums through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The RFC owes the Treasury a large sum, and has been borrowing money on its own account to pay it back. Borrowing of independent agencies, now on the increase, is not affected by the debt limit.

Bonds Total 28 Billion

The public debt is now close to $40,000,000,000. Bonds outstanding after the March 15 refunding operation will total $28,169,000,000. Morgenthau's statement that the figure will reach $30,000,000,000 in September means that an additional $1,831,000,000 in bonds will be issued by that time, either through new borrowing or refunding of maturing issues.

The $30,000,000,000 limit, it is understood, will not be reached until after the September 15 income tax payment date.

Barkley said that if the corporation taxes are reduced to a single tax, the income levy on large cor-

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU revealed the Administration will not ask to boost the public debt limitation of $45,000,000,000 at this session.

Thomas to Ask Delay in Labor Act Hearings

See "Peace Comes First," an editorial, Page 10.

Chairman Elbert D. Thomas, of the Senate Labor Committee, will ask committee backing today in his move to postpone hearings on Wagner labor act amendments, pending further peace negotiations between rival labor factions.

Thomas, who recently told the Senate it would be "unfortunate" if the Senate hearings interfered with progress toward labor peace, called a meeting of the group following a protest by President Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Meanwhile Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, sponsors of two sets of amendments to modify the Labor relations act, signified their willingness to postpone hearings until April 1, "but not later."

Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, a member of the Labor Committee, said Congress should give C. I. O. and ... F. L. peace negotiators "every chance to get together, but we should not postpone hearings so long it will interfere with needed amendment of the Wagner act."

Feeling that hearings on the controversial Wagner act amendments would "muddy the waters" if conducted concurrently with peace negotiations, Thomas on February 27 told the Senate he was moving

Labor's Peace Conferees Meet 6 Hours, Adjourn

New York, March 13 (AP).—The peace committees of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations spent nearly six hours behind closed doors today, trying to compose their differences, and then adjourned until tomorrow night. When the session broke up Harry C. Bates, chairman of the A. F. L. committee said: "All the statement I can make is that the conference is recessed until 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night."

6 Cities to Try Relief Food Stamps

U. S. Plans to Grant $1.50 in Trade for $1 in Cash in Effort To Use Farm Surplus

By Walter Fitzmaurice
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

The Department of Agriculture yesterday formally unveiled its newest farm recovery program—the eating of the Nation's surplus foods by the unemployed.

The department declared the plan will be initiated experimentally in six cities of 50,000 population or more within a few weeks. If successful, it will be extended to the 7,000,000 families receiving Federal, State or local aid.

A conference of food processors, wholesalers and retailers who heard details explained by Secretary Wallace and his aides yesterday are said to have unanimously indorsed the Government's first effort to use commercial channels to get Government-purchased food to families on relief.

$1.50 in Food for Dollar

Basically, the department said, the plan provides the grant by the Government of $1.50 in food orders to the beneficiaries for each dollar of the WPA wages or dole money they expend.

Twenty-five cent food stamps will be the medium of exchange. Three variations of the system will be tested out.

Under the first, the beneficiary agrees to accept a fixed percentage of his weekly WPA wage in stamps. For each cash dollar surrendered he gets $1 in orange stamps and 50 cents in blue stamps without extra charge.

Orange stamps are good for any grocery item the purchaser elects, except drugs, liquor and items consumed on the premises. Blue stamps, however, will buy only surplus foods—dairy products, eggs, citrus fruits, prunes, fresh vegetables and the like.

The grocer pastes the stamps in books holding $5 worth. These he deposits at his bank. The bank, in turn, collects from the United States Treasury.

Variations of Plan

Variations of the plan provide for issuance of blue stamps only. In one case, the recipient would take a fixed percentage of stamps in lieu of wages. In another, he has the option of buying for cash. In no case will relief workers receive less than $1 a week in stamps. With regard to orange stamps, the maximum a worker receives will be governed by the size of the family.

Sale or transfer of stamp books is prohibited.

President Asked To Limit Shingles From Canada

The presence of turbaned Hindus in Canadian woods, and irritation in the Northwest over the Canadian reciprocal trade treaty, yesterday caused President Roosevelt to receive a present of three red cedar shingles.

The shingles were brought to the White House by a delegation of six Representatives from Washington State who called to request that the quota in the 1935 Canadian trade treaty on red cedar shingles be continued in the 1938 treaty.

Cheap Hindu and Chinese coolie labor employed by British Columbia shingle mills, the Congressmen declared, is responsible for heavy red cedar shingle imports from Canada. Absence of a quota restriction, they said, threatens the existence of the red cedar shingle industry in this country.

Mrs. Stinson Was Drugged At Marriage, Court Is Told

The wealthy Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, four lawyers and her husband, Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, settled down in Justice Luhring's court yesterday to thresh out whether Stinson drugged her and married her for her money—as she claims—or she ran after him and forced money on him—as he claims.

The lawyers' opening addresses promised two complete and detailed revelations of the Stinson romance, wedding and estrangement—one to back up her story and another to support his.

A well-dressed, socially prominent gallery was present to hear the revelations get under way. Also present were half a dozen newspapermen and women, who kept their places when Justice Luhring rejected Mrs. Stinson's lawyers' plea that the couple be allowed to wash out the matrimonial linen in private.

Attorneys Alvin K. Newmyer and A. K. Shipe appeared for Mrs. Stinson, who inherited $700,000 from

Barkley Relents on Labor Provision of Army Funds Measure

Forging of a co-ordinated defense system for all the 21 American republics is expected to be stimulated by steps taken here yesterday, which included:

The Administration introduced resolutions that would permit construction here of warships, coast defense and antiaircraft artillery and ammunition for Latin-American countries at cost and make available to those countries Army and Navy secrets that would aid hemisphere defense.

The United States and Panama elevated their respective legations to the rank of embassies, following the example set by this country with several other American republics recently. The President appointed experienced William Dawson, now minister to Uruguay, to be the first Ambassador to Panama.

In the Senate, meanwhile, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, called for information on what, if anything, this country was doing under the Monroe Doctrine to assist Guatemala in a territorial dispute with Great Britain over Belize (British Honduras).

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee last night pressed the State Department for full data on charges that Japan has fortified mandated Pacific islands.

Nearing a showdown on an Administration proposal to improve air facilities on the island of Guam, the committee decided to write Secretary of State Hull again on the question of alleged treaty violations by Japan in the nearby mandated islands. In response to an earlier inquiry, Hull wrote yesterday that so far as the State Department knew there had been no violation of the 1922 treaty.

Meanwhile, Senator Barkley offered to compromise on his controversial plan to restrict Army and Navy contracts to firms complying with the Wagner Labor Relations act. Following a conference with President Roosevelt, the Majority Leader proposed a substitute to the contested rider attached to the Army expansion bill in the Senate. The President was reported to have backed the compromise plan.

Under the original proposal, the Secretaries of War and Navy would have to pass on the question of whether bidders were interfering with the rights of their employes to

WPA World Fair Exhibit Draws Blast in House

A bipartisan attack on the Works Progress Administration, stemming from its announced plan to spend $250,000 on "exhibits" at the New York World Fair was launched in the House yesterday.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, read the announcement of the plan by Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, WPA administrator in New York, and commented:

"This WPA follies will put on folk dancing and puppet shows . . . Isn't it about time Congress decrees a house-cleaning in WPA?"

Others criticizing the project included Representatives Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin.

Milk Inquiry Authorized By House

Trial of Dairy Head On 'Bootleg' Charge Is Expected to Be Postponed Today

By James D. Secrest.

A broad investigation by the House District Committee of the District's source of milk and cream was authorized yesterday by the House after Midwestern members teamed with the minority bloc to defeat a limitation on the inquiry to alleged violations of the 1925 milk act.

The resolution was sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, but before it was passed the measure was amended to the satisfaction of the Midwestern members who complained against District restrictions against the importation of cream from outside this milkshed for fluid consumption.

Inquiry Broadened

Under the leadership of Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, the Western Representatives rallied and with Republican support broadened the inquiry to include the feasibility of permitting the legal sale of milk and cream from Midwestern dairy farms in Washington.

A resolution was introduced in the Senate by Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, to authorize an even more sweeping investigation of the local milk dispute to determine whether or not trade barriers against interstate commerce are being established in the District.

The House investigation, which was authorized as a direct result of the seizure of 2,040 gallons of cream a week ago by police on the charge that it was brought into the plant of a local dairy contrary to the District milk act, will get under way as soon as funds are made available.

Trial Scheduled Today

Trial of James J. Ward, president of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy Co., and an employe of the dairy, on charges of violation of the milk act in connection with the seizure is scheduled to begin before Judge Hobart Newman in Police Court this morning. It is understood, however, that a continuance will be asked by defense counsel.

The Smith resolution, as amended, authorizes the House District Committee to make its investigation along seven specific lines:

1. The sources and purity of the District's milk and cream supply.

2. Violation of the milk act in the importation of milk or cream "and

Dionne Relents; Quints Will Visit King at Toronto

Callander, Ont., March 13 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets are to meet King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at Toronto May 22, travelling 180 miles for their first trip away from home.

Their father, Oliva Dionne, reversing his stand of a week ago when he first received the invitation, announced today he had accepted.

Tuesday he had said "I am not in favor of it" and added "I cannot see why the government cannot arrange to have their majesties visit the nursery here."

He said today he had a "keen desire" to have his little girls, who will be five years old May 28, meet the King and Queen, and he would like to take his entire family to Toronto. There are seven other children.

The journey to Toronto will be in two special railway cars provided by the Ontario government.

Einstein Advances New Theory As Key to Creation's Mystery

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—A new solution of one of the great mysteries of science, a single law to explain all the phenomena of the material universe, has been found by Prof. Albert Einstein.

He announced this today in an interview, on the eve of his sixtieth birthday.

Einstein calls the solution the unified field theory. It aims to bring together gravitation, magnetism and matter under one "unifying mathematical concept."

For four years, since leaving Germany an exile, he has been working on this problem at the Institute for Advanced Study, endowed by the Bamberger family, of Newark, N. J., at Princeton University.

He does not make public the nature of his announced discovery. But its main outlines are known to science generally.

"The mathematical constructions for a unified field theory devised by me heretofore," he said, "have not

Ruthenians Also Win Independence; Pro-Nazi Cabinet Likely for Bohemia

By George Langweil,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Prague (Tuesday), March 14.—Bowing to Berlin's ultimatum, the Czecho-Slovakian government today virtually agreed to the separation of Slovakia and Ruthenia and creation of three independent states hewn out of the 20-year-old republic.

President Emil Hacha, under strong pressure direct from Reichsfuehrer Hitler, agreed to summon the Slovak autonomous parliament in Bratislava at 10 a. m. today (4 a. m. E. S. T.). There the Slovaks are expected to proclaim their independence and creation of a new state under the aegis of Germany.

Ruthenia, the narrow eastern section of Czecho-Slovakia, presumably will fall in line with Germany's demands within a few hours thereafter.

Cabinet to Reorganize

Official announcement of changes within the Prague government, in accordance with Hitler's demand that a cabinet more favorable to Germany be formed, was expected today. The cabinet held a second meeting which was still in session at an early hour.

Official comment in Prague practically confirmed that today Slovakia would split away from the federation.

"The session of parliament will mark an historic event for Slovakia," said a spokesman. "The Slovaks themselves will decide their fate through their representatives."

Both Prague and Berlin, official quarters heard, will announce their approval of the anticipated independence proclamation. Reorganization of the Czech government, with the participation of elements more favorable to Germany, is a part of the bargain.

Disorders Continue

As disorders continued in Bratislava and other points where Hlinka Guards, separatist "Storm Troops," staged demonstrations, the fiery Slovak leader, Ferdinand Durcansky, broadcast from Vienna:

"The historic moment of decision is near. Liberation of the Slovaks under the protection of Hitler will soon come."

Six persons were killed during the night in a series of explosions that shook Bratislava.

A powerful time bomb damaged heavily the Jesuit monastery in the Rathausstrasse. Four other explosions occurred simultaneously in various parts of the Slovakian capital.

The request for the momentous meeting of the Slovak Parliament was made by Joseph Tiso, ousted Premier of Slovakia, after his two-hour conversation with Hitler in Berlin.

Guarantees Asked

He was seconded by Karl Sidor, the moderate leader whom the central Republican government appointed to the premiership in Tiso's place.

The Prague cabinet met for three hours yesterday, and it was reported Sidor asked for the resignation of the central government.

Germany's demands, it was understood, called not only for dismemberment of the Czecho-Slo-

Hotels, Union Reject Plan To End Strike

Walk-Out May Go On Indefinitely, Labor Conciliator Admits

The strike of service employes at 13 Washington hotels may "last indefinitely," Dr. John R. Steelman, Government conciliator, declared early today after both hotel operators and union representatives failed to agree on Federal conciliation proposals that yesterday were believed to have closed the controversy.

A walkout threatened, meanwhile, at a fourteenth hotel, the Washington. Only a telegraphic plea by Steelman, head of the Labor Department Conciliation Service, forestalled the move. Union officials threatened twice in the space of two hours to order out service employes of the Washington after operators failed fully to accept mediation proposals.

Union officials also threatened to revert to their previous demand for an absolute closed shop, original issue in the 13-day strike. Strikers had receded from the closed shop stand after concessions by hotel operators.

After a study of statements of their positions submitted by both sides Dr. Steelman declared:

"I am definitely pessimistic. The strike may last indefinitely. There is not one chance in ten that the parties may be brought together for some time to come."

Pointing out that a "conference to end all conferences" has been called for 10 a. m. today in a last desperate

Over the Coffee

It's amusing to see how many of our fellow passengers think Hawaii (which has our largest Army post) is foreign soil. They turn in their postcards at the purser's office, addressed to the "U. S. A." Some of them have Hawaii vaguely confused with Tahiti.

But you can't blame them. A ship's officer tells me that an American gentleman whose family has lived in Honolulu for 100 years prizes an envelope addressed to Hawaii by Jim Farley in his own handwriting after he became Postmaster General.

The envelope carries 5 cents in stamps, as if it were addressed to a foreign land, instead of the necessary 3.

A lady who lives in Virginia, across the Potomac from Washington, heard that oral injections of champagne cocktails were best for seasickness and, though the sea was as calm as the Reflecting Pool between the Lincoln Memorial and Washington Monument, she did a good job at preventive medicine.

"—slumming in Europe"

Next morning she looked a little wan and confessed that her head felt a little like a medicine ball.

"How's the hangover?" inquired the Captain, solicitously, a little later.

"Sir!" she said. "In Virginia, ladies don't have hangovers."

Two delectable little movie models from Hollywood are on the ship, on their way to have their pictures taken at Waikiki. They are slim, athletic, wide-eyed and clear-eyed, obviously the fittest people aboard. If your curiosity gets the best of you and you can't wait till you get to Hawaii, try to get hold of some brown mucilage for a rough idea of poi.

Who am I to say that it tastes like paperhangers' paste, which I've never tasted? They tell me poi is partly responsible for the good humor of Hawaiians, and for their white teeth, and that it comes now in cans.

So I'll mail a couple of cans to Hitler and Mussolini; not that I care whether their teeth are white.

Police Boys Club Planting Garden To Feed 1,000

Vegetable seed for produce sufficient to feed 1,000 boys this summer at the Metropolitan Police Boys Club camp, Scotland, Md., will be planted the coming week, it was announced yesterday by Forrest L. Binswanger, club director.

Averaging ten-day visits starting July 1, underprivileged Washington boys will be cared for at a cost of 76 cents a day each. Expenses will be raised in a $75,000 drive now going on.

Binswanger said several improvements will be made at the camp this year, including a wire net along the Chesapeake Bay bathing frontage to keep out sea nettles.

Woodrum May Be Ousted to Speed Relief

Authority Suggests New Deal May Drop Him as Committee Head

As Congress awaited a message from the President today requesting $150,000,000 for emergency relief needs, it was reported in the House that Administration leaders were beginning to "turn the heat" on wavering members of the Appropriations Committee.

Although a stiff committee fight was anticipated on the question of "relief vs. economy," Majority Leader Rayburn said yesterday he thought the President's recommendation would be accepted, but "every vote counts."

After conferring with the President, both Rayburn and Speaker Bankhead indicated he would not retreat from his previous demand for $150,000,000 to finance the WPA until July 1, when a new fiscal year begins. If granted, this sum would restore the reduction voted by Republicans and "economy" Democrats in the President's January request for an $875,000,000 supplemental appropriation for the WPA.

Woodrum May Be Ousted

It was suggested on good authority to The Post yesterday that the Administration's anxiety to obtain the relief funds quickly, without extended hearings, might be reflected in the ousting of Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, from his position as acting chairman of the Appropriations sub-committee handling relief.

Representative Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of both the full Appropriations Committee and the sub-committee on relief, might resume active leadership of the sub-committee to forestall Woodrum's expressed desire for an exhaustive inquiry into the WPA as a prerequisite to voting any supplemental funds.

Since hearing on the appropriation—whatever its size—are not likely to get under way before next week, the committee will have to move quickly if Congress is to grant the WPA any additional aid before April 1. Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, has stated that unless extra funds are provided, 400,000 persons will be dropped from relief rolls early in April.

More Investigators Sought

Aside from the relief question, the urgent desire to eliminate unnecessary governmental expenditure is moving some members of the Appropriations Committee to work for enlargement of the committee's staff or re-establishment of the old Bureau of Efficiency.

Representative McMillan (Democrat), of South Carolina, one of the ranking members of the committee, suggested yesterday that a number of trained investigators be added to the committee staff to make independent inquiry into needs of the various departments and agencies that annually ask the committee for funds.

"As it is now," McMillan told The Post, "the members of the committee have to decide on appropriations after hearing only one side of the case. The only people we hear from are the representatives of the departments and agencies. We have no means of forming an independent judgment, as the proceedings are entirely ex parte."

Agreeing that the committee has inadequate information in fixing the size of appropriations, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, proposed that either a "wholly independent" agency such as the former Bureau of Efficiency, be set up or that qualified investigators or accountants, under civil service and entirely separate from the committee staff, be instructed to report on needs of the various agencies. Cannon emphasized, however, that he did not think the relief question could be treated in this manner.

Taber Indicates Battle

That the Presidential request for additional WPA funds may have some difficulty in the Appropriations sub-committee was indicated by an observation of Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member. "There should be no appropriation until we know what has happened to the $725,000,000 already voted," said Taber.

However, an informal poll of the Democratic members of the sub-committee yesterday lent strength to belief that they would agree on the WPA appropriation for the balance of the fiscal year without insisting on settlement of the Government's future policy toward WPA. When that question finally is taken up for consideration, the House is likely to witness a fight it will not soon forget.

Fear Too Much "Appeasement"

Members of the Democratic "liberal bloc" already are expressing apprehension that the business "appeasement" policy may seriously interfere with continuation of WPA at full strength. Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, said yesterday he hoped the Democratic Party, in its efforts to ease the feelings of businessmen, wouldn't turn into a second Republican Party.

A group of four Senate stalwarts, Senators Lee, of Oklahoma; Ellender, of Louisiana; Schwartz, of Wyoming, and Mead, of New York, stressed their desire that the President demand the full $150,000,000 from Congress, in a visit to the White House yesterday. Majority Leader Barkley also expressed approval of this amount.

On the other hand, Senators Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Taft (Republican), of Ohio, announced opposition to the appropriation.

Gene Tunney One of 37 Subpenaed by Monopoly Group Studying Whisky Industry

By the Associated Press.

The Monopoly Committee announced yesterday it had subpenaed Gene Tunney, former world heavyweight champion, as a witness in its investigation of the whisky industry scheduled to begin this afternoon.

TUNNEY

Tunney, now chairman of the American Distilling Co., was one of 37 witnesses summoned. Another is James M. Doran, former Commissioner of Industrial Alcohol. Phillip E. Buck, general counsel of the Federal Alcohol Administration, will give the first testimony and supervise the inquiry for the Federal Trade Commission.

Hearings are scheduled for tomorrow morning on the sulphur industry. Federal Trade Commission experts who will present a study of the industry will include Dr. Robert H. Montgomery, University of Texas professor.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, observed that when it comes to paying their debts, "there is no difference between dictatorships and democracies."

"They both default in the same way," said the ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

"Great Britain and Italy stand side by side in their refusal to pay their honorable debts contracted during the World War."

The Senate approved two compromise appropriations measures—the $1,870,000,000 independent offices bill and the $20,000,00 deficiency bill.

The deficiency measure was approved over protests of Midwestern Senators against a decision by conferees to limit an appropriation for eradication of grasshopers and other insects to $3,000,000. The Senate had voted $5,417,000 and the House $2,000,000. The measure now goes to the White House.

The compromise independent offices bill, carrying funds for various Government agencies, goes back to the House for final approval. Included is a $39,000,000 allocation for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to permit Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept a decoration offered by the government of Greece in recognition of his services in the rescue of the crew of the Greek steamer Tzenny Chandris. The vessel foundered off Cape Hatteras November 13, 1937. Of the 29 crew members, 22 were rescued by the Coast Guard.

Asserting that Communists seek overthrow of the Government by force and violence, Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, introduced a bill in the House making advocation of such a political credo unlawful.

On the heels of his recent appointment as first secretary to President Roosevelt, Col. Edwin M. Watson, veteran Presidential military aide, today was approved by the Senate to be brigadier general in the Field Artillery. Watson was chosen to fill the place of James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, in the White House secretariat.

Senate Group Votes Today on Reorganization

Byrnes Forecasts Quick Approval of House-Passed Bill

A Senate reorganization committee today is slated to vote quick approval of the compromise Government reorganization bill passed last week by the House, it was learned last night.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Committee on Government Organization, called a meeting of the nine-member group for this morning and forecast immediate action, without further hearings.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who has a rival reorganization bill on the Senate calendar, said he will delay his fight for modifying changes in the House measure until the bill reaches the Senate floor.

Wheeler Amendment Revived

Chief test is expected to come on the Wheeler amendment, included in the Byrd bill, and to be offered again by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana. This amendment, defeated in the House, but claiming strong Senate backing, requires affirmative action by both houses within 20 days before merger proposals submitted by the President may take effect. The House bill allows reorganization orders to become law within 60 days unless "vetoed" by a majority vote of both houses.

Announcing his support of the House method, Byrnes said he will offer only one or two "minor" amendments to the bill, and attempt to call the measure up in the Senate before the end of the week.

Byrd Urges Economy

The South Carolinian said no effort will be made in the Senate to add controversial civil service and General Accounting Office features abandoned by the House after contributing to defeat of the omnibus merger bill last session.

Senator Byrd said House changes in the bill had taken care of all but two or three of his objections. In addition to the Wheeler amendment, he said he will ask a stronger declaration for economy, and extension of the reorganizing power beyond the term of President Roosevelt.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, and Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, who drafted the House bill, yesterday were invited to the White House. It was learned the President expressed satisfaction with the bill as passed by the House and expressed pleasure with their handling of the measure.

Security Taxes 'Steal,' Printer Tells Hearing

Levy Unjust Toward Small Business, House Witness Charges

By the Associated Press.

A Philadelphia printer told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday "the Government by the social security act is stealing from the small businessman."

The witness, T. J. Priestly, jr., declared social security taxes were "unjust and inequitable" because, he said, the small businessmen pay more for each employe's insurance, in proportion to dollar sales, than do the larger corporations.

He testified at hearings on proposed amendments to the social security act.

Priestly agreed with Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, also a publisher, that social security levies were forcing small printing establishments "to the wall."

"It is not your idea that the social security act was enacted to put anybody out of business?" Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, inquired.

"I don't believe any New Deal act was enacted for that purpose," Priestly replied, "but they've done it."

The witness proposed present taxes on business be replaced with a single tax, graduated on gross business in proportion to the total amount of business done in each line.

Harry Spiro, representing beauty parlors belonging to the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, told the committee the social security taxes worked a "hardship" on these establishments because they cannot be passed on as in other businesses.

Tourists of 1938 Spent $50,000,000 Here, Report Says

The more than 3,000,000 visitors to Washington in 1938 spent an estimated $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 in the city according to the annual report of the Greater National Capital Committee, Washington Board of Trade, released yesterday.

Tourist and convention expenditure is second only to the Government pay roll as a source of local income, the report added.

Forty motion pictures were circulated throughout the country and 400 radio broadcasts were presented as part of the committee's activity.

Sigma Delta Chi to Meet

The annual "round-up" meeting of Washington alumni of Sigma Delta Chi, national honorary journalistic fraternity, will be held tonight at 6:30 o'clock at 1208 F street northwest. Raymond Clapper, national honorary president of the fraternity, will speak.

House Drafts Billion-Dollar Farm Bill

Committee Measure Includes 250 Million Crop Parity Item

By Robert C. Albright.

A $1,060,000,000 agriculture appropriation bill, carrying $250,000,000 for farm parity price payments not included in the President's budget, has received tentative approval of a House agriculture appropriations sub-committee, it was learned last night.

The bill, providing the parity price payments in addition to $500,000,000 for soil conservation benefits, was said to run about $61,000,000 under last year's appropriations, but approximately $244,000,000 over the Administration's budget figure.

His Economy Drive

The measure was expected to intensify the search for revenue to provide for the payments and to run headlong into the recent Congressional drive for economy and business tax relief.

Congress last session inaugurated the parity price policy, appropriating $212,000,000 for that purpose, but failed to provide the taxes asked by the President to finance the program. In his opening message to Congress, the President again recommended taxes to meet the cost of the payments. No estimate for continuing the payments was included in his message.

Subsequent proposals by Secretary Wallace for processing taxes to carry the load were dropped after reputedly meeting Treasury and White House opposition.

Payments, under the bill, would be made to corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco, and rice farmers, proportioned on the level these commodities are selling below parity. Similar provision was made by Congress last year, and corn, cotton and wheat farmers were found to be eligible for the payments. Current year's checks are now being mailed by the AAA.

Action Expected Thursday

The sub-committee bill is expected to be submitted to the full House Appropriations Committee for final action Thursday noon. A secrecy agreement was reached by sub-committee members on provisions of the bill.

Regular budget estimates were said to have been pared in several instances to partially offset the parity price increase. Appropriations for regional research laboratories are understood to have been trimmed about 25 per cent; $4,000,000, was cut from forest road appropriations, and some $15,000,000 pruned from sugar benefit payments, the latter said to have been offset by funds already on hand.

Funds for rural rehabilitation under the Farm Security Administration, included in the original Agriculture Department budget, would be handled in a later deficiency bill instead, but some $25,000,000 is reported to have been included for tenant farm purchases under the Bankhead-Jones act.

Court Upholds Power to Fix Wage Scales

Denies Injunction Asked By Steel Firms Seeking Federal Contracts

Justice Bailey yesterday upheld the broad authority claimed by the Labor Department to set minimum wage scales for employes of companies receiving Government contracts.

Seven independent Eastern steel producers were denied an injunction against enforcement of Labor Department wage scales. They claimed the scales would disadvantage them in bidding and that the orders were void because the department had a right only to require payment of wages prevailing in a bidder's locality.

Justice Bailey rejected the "little steel" contention that the order designating 13 States as a "locality" was beyond the department's power.

Although only seven companies filed the action, it was said 40 others were affected with a total of 25,000 workers and a capital investment of $100,000,000.

$210,740 Bid On D. C. Sewer

A low bid of $210,740 for construction of 1,800 feet of new sewer as part of the Rock Creek Park pollution program was submitted by Leo Butler Co., of Katonah, N. Y., to District officials yesterday. The high bid was $288,668.

The project calls for construction of an 8½-foot storm sewer from near Twenty-second and M streets northwest to Rock Creek. Later a sanitary sewer will be constructed to take care of the same area.

'Jimmy' Gone, Gamblers Hunt Laurel Site

Friends Say Gangland Forced Him to Act As 'Front' for 7 Years

Threats of gang vengeance by Philadelphia mobsters who "moved in" on him have kept "Jimmy La Fontaine as "front" man at the famous Bladensburg road casino for the last seven years, his friends said yesterday.

These sources said "Jimmy" had no "regrets" at closing of the gambling resort which has been associated with his name since 1919. One Prince Georges County resident said:

"Now, he has a good excuse to 'get out.' He wanted to quit seven years ago, but that Philadelphia bunch compelled him to stay because they needed his name."

The Philadelphia "partners" of La Fontaine were reported to be seeking a new location in Howard County, 2 miles north of Laurel.

With closing of "Jimmy's Place," Prince Georges County's unemployment problem became more acute. It was estimated there were more than 400 employes of the casino, including "numbers runners."

Famed for his magnanimity, "Jimmy" paid handsome salaries. Not even those who performed such small tasks as parking cars received less than $35 a week and those with responsible "inside" jobs got $10 a day.

Many Prince Georges County residents found it profitable to rent automobiles to "Jimmy" for transportation of his patrons, and county employes have found work at the casino when the fortunes of politics turned against them.

"Jimmy" reputedly was a large contributor to the campaign chests of both political parties.

The anti-gambling drive in the county, which started under direction of State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., struck a lull yesterday. No slot machine arrests or gambling raids were reported. It was believed authorities were awaiting outcome of a test case in police court at Hyattsville tomorrow.

Three men, arrested in a raid last week at Riverdale, will stand trial on gambling charges. The court will have to decide whether gambling paraphernalia seized by police will be admissible as evidence. According to a statute now in force, gaming evidence obtained by "unlawful search and seizure" is inadmissible. The raiding squad which descended on the Riverdale establishment had a warrant for one of the defendants but did not have a search warrant.

Perjury to Convict Innocent Man Admitted Here

Joseph Roddey, colored, 27, of 1618 Seventh street northwest, admitted in Police Court yesterday he had committed perjury last week which resulted in conviction of an innocent man.

His confession that he told an untruth about Ossie Brooks, colored, 41, of 1542 Eighth street northwest, in connection with the theft of an overcoat and his subsequent plea of guilty to the theft, landed Roddey in the District jail for one year. He also was ordered held to the grand jury for perjury.

Roddey testified before Judge Curran last week that Brooks had given him an overcoat to pawn. Brooks was convicted and placed on probation when it was shown the coat was stolen. Despite Brooks' conviction, police continued their investigation. Brooks' sentence was nullified.

Alimony Ordered After Divorce

Justice Bailey yesterday ordered Dr. Mark O. Davis, a dentist, to continue to pay Mrs. Maude E. Davis $300 a month alimony. Dr. Davis got a legal separation here more than a decade ago. Later he moved to Virginia and got a divorce there which was challenged but recently was upheld by the Supreme Court. Justice Bailey said this did not affect the power of District Court to order alimony paid in the original case.

Missouri Bill to Make Women Wear Only Shoes That Look Like Shoes Draws Female Fire Here

Post Staff Photos.

These two wearers of modern, heelless and toeless shoes joined other wearers in protesting the Missouri Legislature's proposed ban on the ventilated footwear. Left—Norine McCarran, daughter of the Senator from Nevada, said she wears them just because she likes them. Right—Kay Overton, a size two wearer and daughter of the Senator from Louisiana, is in hopes that the new styled shoes will make her feet grow

If members of Congress ever get around to debating the right of women to wear shoes without toes or heels they can be certain of one development:

Trouble at home.

Washington women heard yesterday that the Missouri Legislature is considering a bill which would make illegal anything by the conventional foot covering.

"Shoes," they said in effect, "should be immediately identifiable as—shoes." It was suggested they were thinking of what has happened recently to women's hats.

Local reaction to the proposal was immediate and loud. The protest came, furthermore, not only from nonofficial smart-set members, but from every Congressman's No. 1 constituents—his wife and daughter.

Kay Overton, daughter of Senator Overton, of Louisiana, admitted the air-conditioned models might not be so "pretty," but, she reflected, "they are certainly more comfortable." Miss Overton had a very special reason for keeping legal toeless-and-heelless shoes:

She wears a size two and hopes to make her feet grow by keeping her toes exposed.

She can count on the support of Charlotte King, daughter of Delegate King, of Hawaii. Those Missourians, Charlotte said, "surely have a nerve."

"This is supposed to be a free country, isn't it," she asked. "What right have they to try to tell us what to wear?"

Norine McCarran, daughter of the Nevada Senator, wears ventilated footgear "because I like it." Anyway, she said, traditional shoes "don't keep us from getting our feet wet."

Mrs. McCarran viewed the controversy from a more practical angle, observing that shoes without toes or heels don't wear out stockings so fast.

Miss Peggy Townsend, queen-to-be of the Cherry Blossom Festival, said she thought the legislation "perfectly ridiculous."

"I think the shoes are comfortable," she declared, "and am in favor of women wearing them."

Grand Jury to Get Ott Case This Week

The District grand jury is to hear this week embezzlement charges against Thomas E. Ott, 44, former chief deputy United States marshal. It was learned yesterday, as Ott entered a plea of not guilty before United States Commissioner B. D. Nicola in Cleveland.

Ott, who waived preliminary hearing in Cleveland, was dismissed last year. Former Deputy Marshal John B. Upperman, now in jail in connection with the Warring jury-tampering scandal, testified Ott withheld $800 in campaign fund collections from fellow workers.

Miss Galloway Wins Poster Prize

Miss Virginia Galloway, student at the Stuart Art School, yesterday was awarded first prize in the Connecticut Avenue Association's contest for a poster for the fashion promenade and exhibit at the Mayflower Hotel March 24.

The judges also picked a poster by Miss Galloway as runner-up. The association will have a dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock tonight at 1701 Twentieth street northwest.

Announcement was made that the National S. A. R. Congress will meet on May 28 to 31 in New London, Conn.

Comedian's $3,000 Cure For Hiss Disallowed

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals ruled yesterday that the Government was entitled to an additional bite from Ned A. Sparks' $54,416 income for 1935.

It disallowed the radio-screen comedian's claim that $3,000 he spent for false teeth was a business expense. Sparks said the teeth eliminated an objectionable hiss in his speech.

$2,500 Asked in House For Portrait of Hoover

A resolution was introduced into the House yesterday asking an appropriation of $2,500 to purchase an oil painting of former President Herbert Hoover to hang in the White House. The resolution requires that an American artist paint the portrait.

Utilities Body Studies Gas Merger Plan

Grants Hearings on New Proposal to Purchase Two Suburban Firms

A new proposal by the Washington Gas Light Co. to purchase the Hyattsville Gas Co. and the Alexandria Gas Co. for $1,250,000 in preferred stock was reviewed yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission. The commission announced it would hold hearings on the plan.

The new proposal was the third submitted in three years, Commissioner Richmond Keech said. In October, 1936, the Public Utilities Commission rejected the Capital firm's plan to purchase the two suburban firms for $1,375,000 in cash. In March, 1937, the firm submitted and later withdrew a proposal to buy the properties at a cash price $100,000 below the first offer.

All three firms, officials explained, are owned or controlled by the Washington and Suburban Cos., operating as a trust. Under Securities and Exchange Commission regulations governing holding companies the trust company must combine the three separate utility firms into an integrated system, or divest itself of control, officials explained.

The Washington firm's purchase plan would permit payment of the $1,250,000 for the suburban firms with 12,250 shares of preferred stock, with the value of each share estimated at $102, carrying 4½ per cent interest.

The utilities commission also agreed to reconsider its order of February 27, cancelling registration of the Town Cab Association. The registration was granted early in February, after permission to form the association had been asked in a petition carrying more than 100 signatures. Officials said the cancellation was ordered because the original petition contained signatures of some persons who had no intention of continuing with the association.

The association's suit for an injunction to prevent enforcement of the cancellation order was denied in District Court. Keech said the association would be allowed to operate pending the new hearing.

Wife Wins Right To Sue Husband

Justice Edgerton in the Court of Appeals, deciding a case heard also by Justices Stephens and Vinson, yesterday granted Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Ewald the right to sue her husband, John C. Ewald, jr., a North Beach, Md., businessmen, and several others for $25,000 damages for conspiracy to accuse her falsely of adultery.

The District Court rejected the suit because the common law forbade a wife to bring a damage suit unless her husband joined her in it. Justice Edgerton said nobody but wrongdoers would be served by continuing to enforce such a rule. Sued with Ewald were his lawyer and a detective.

D.C. Heads Ask 1,800 More Parking Meters

House Group Queries Them on Issuance of Congressional Tags

The District Commissioners have asked Budget Bureau authorization to purchase 1,800 more parking meters, it was learned yesterday, as the House sub-committee on District appropriations questioned municipal officials on handling of Congressional tags.

The Commissioners indicated they intend to make them permanent, if Congress approves, pointing out that the 300 experimental instruments paid for themselves in the first 20 weeks.

Out of a return of $12,000, moreover, they said the District took in only 82 slugs.

The commissioners and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer were called before the Collins sub-committee because of the complaint of a member of the sub-committee that he had been accused falsely of driving a hit-and-run car because it bore Congressional tags issued in his name but not placed on his auto.

It was learned that District officials were instructed to scrutinize requests for the special tags more carefully in the future and to prune present lists of all persons not members of Congress.

Might Cut Funds

The law limits Congressional tags to members of Congress, and 500 have been issued for this year. Yet records show, it was learned, that of the 100 District-licensed cars 14 are held by other than members of Congress.

Van Duzer and the commissioners were told, it is understood, that unless the situation is straightened out, the House sub-committee may withhold part of the Traffic Department's appropriation.

'World's End' Has Drastic 'Revere'

Bogota, N. J., March 13 (U.P.).—Robert (Paul Revere) Carter, 30, nursed badly cut hands in the psychopathic ward of Bergen Pines Hospital tonight. The reason:

Carter, an iceman, smashed 34 windows in as many residences here today before police finally caught up with him. At each residence he drove his fist through a window and shouted, "Run for your life before it is too late—the world is coming to an end."

PWA Assures Headquarters For D. C. Fire-Alarm System

Construction of the new District fire alarm headquarters building in McMillan Park, near Fourth and Douglas streets, at a cost of $183,994 was approved yesterday by the PWA.

The building contract was awarded to Jeffress-Dyer, Inc., of 1719 K street northwest. Funds will come from a $500,000 combined loan and grant in PWA funds authorized last fall.

The building will house the fire alarm system, storage room, repair shop and offices for H. A. Friede, fire alarm superintendent, and his staff. Power conduits already have been completed. Officials said the new system would be in use by June next year.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has long recommended that the municipal fire alarm system should be in a building devoted to that one purpose, at least 150 feet from any other structure.

$2,889,000 Left Of Doheny Estate

Los Angeles, March 13 (A.P.).—A petition filed today in probate court asked approval of a final accounting of the estate of the late Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, and distribution of the remaining $2,889,963 to his widow, Carrie, sole beneficiary.

When Doheny died in 1935 his estate was valued at $9,042,563. This was only a portion of his original holdings, however, an estimated five times that amount having been given to charitable institutions and relatives before his death.

Presbytery Backs Bearing of Arms

New York, March 13 (A.P.).—Freedom of individual choice in the bearing of arms was approved by the New York Presbytery today as an amendment to the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, which hitherto has offered no support to the conscientious objector.

Acceptance of the change does not mean, said the Rev. Dr. J. V. Moldenhawer, "that the church has gone pacifist." It merely recognizes, he said, the right of an individual to refuse to fight.

Worst Blizzard Since '88 Grips Massachusetts

Snow Paralyzes Shipping, Traffic; 32 Reported Dead

One of the heaviest March snows of the century blocked highways and paralyzed shipping in New England yesterday.

The storm—the worst in Massachusetts since the historic blizzard of 1888—left a sticky blanket of snow that averaged a foot in depth over most of the area. Drifts whipped by a northeast gale reached 6 feet in some sections.

The fall measured 16 inches in Portland, Me., more than 14 in Boston, 14 in Montpelier, Vt., and more than 11 in Providence, R. I.

At least 10 deaths were reported. Many roads were clogged. Planes were grounded. More than 60 Massachusetts schools were closed. Navigation approached a standstill in the port of Boston. Seventeen steamers were due but only about a dozen fishing craft came in.

The storm occurred on the fifty-first anniversary of the blizzard that deposited 42 inches of snow in Massachusetts.

Other States in the Northern belt beset by snow, rain and sleet since Saturday counted 22 dead, raising the national total to 32. New York State reported 11 and New Jersey six.

Traffic in New York State was encumbered by 2 to 14 inches of snow. The storm whisked out to sea in the metropolitan district.

Montana also had a heavy snow. Snow flurries and sleet slicked Pennsylvania highways. Linemen labored to restore normal communications in southern Michigan in the wake of a Sunday sleet storm termed the worst since 1913.

Most of the small streams in Midwestern flood areas receded after approximately 300 families evacuated their homes over the week-end. Rains ceased. No more showers were in prospect for 24 hours at least.

porations will have to be increased to 25 or 27 per cent unless taxes applicable to small corporations are to be increased appreciably.

His statement, it was learned, does not indicate that the Administration will abandon its plan to overhaul the corporation tax structure in the interest of business appeasement. The President now has under consideration, it is said, a plan in this regard.

Stock Leaders Confer

The National Stock Exchange Conference, presided over by John Hancock, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange committee on stock listing, will meet again today, it was announced, to draw specific proposals for changes in the securities acts.

Hancock said conversations centered around the following: Elimination, to save bookkeeping costs, of voluminous detail which the securities acts require corporations to file with the Securities and Exchange Commission; more specific definition of market manipulation; and relaxation of the "goldfish bowl" provisions which impose restrictions on and require reports from "insiders," that is, officers, directors and principal stockholders of corporations.

The Senator group, consisting of Senators Lee, Oklahoma, Ellender, Louisiana, Mead, New York, and Schwartz, Wyo., all Democrats, discussed with the President the entire Administration recovery program, including loans to small business, housing, farm aid, expansion of social security benefits and aid to tenant farmers.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, yesterday urged creation of a special committee of five Senators and five Representatives to investigate monetary policies and fluctuating commodity prices.

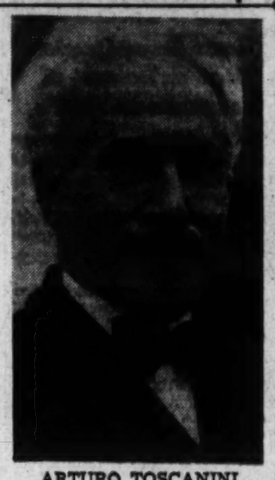
Toscanini, Fiery Seeker of Perfection in Music, To Conduct 'Farewell' Concert Here Tonight

Brings NBC Performers, Reputedly World's Finest Symphony



ARTURO TOSCANINI

Arturo Toscanini, slight, sardonic-faced conductor, wrathful at musical imperfection and humble as a pilgrim when moving through the shrines of the composers, comes to Washington today to conduct the National Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra at Constitution Hall tonight.

Toscanini, whose right arm is giant strong from the use of the baton and whose defective vision has turned his mind into such a depository of all orchestration that scores are seldom required before him, is to appear here before sailing for London to conduct the British Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra.

The orchestra he faces tonight will come to Washington in a special train, carrying instruments valued at more than $300,000. In combination they are said to comprise the finest orchestra in the world. Their conductor tonight is a strange character from the podias of all concert halls of the world. A freak fixed the baton in his hand, when he was 19, in a Rio de Janeiro opera house.

The freak was the walkout of the conductor, just before the curtain was to rise on "Aida." The old Latin custom to get excited when the likes of that occurred cast the management into an equivalent of the modern jitters. Then, in the mounting tempest, Toscanini was brought out to lead.

Immediately, he removed the score from before him and sat upon it. Then he stood and conducted out of memory, as he will tonight.

Washington last night had just about bought out the house. The sponsors were awaiting arrival of the three Pullman coaches and two baggage coaches that carry the 105 musicians and the $300,000 worth of instruments.

Toscanini shuns publicity, was frantic the night of April 29, 1926, when a photographer's flash bulb exploded in his face as he made his last appearance as director of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. He was blinded, but not hurt, and left the stage as a thunderous ovation surged about him.

Someone came out and stopped the wild cheering, which lasted seven minutes, and announced: "The photographer who took the maestro's picture as the program ended nearly blinded him with the flashbulb. The maestro was severely shocked. He wants you to know he loves you all and wants to thank you for everything."

And, again, much was made of the time the sparrow flew into Carnegie Hall and zoomed about the heads of an audience lost in the dreams of Brahms.

The strange career and temperament of Toscanini were discussed in Washington music circles yesterday in advance of his arrival. The genius who took the baton in the Rio Opera House in 1886 reached a new ascendancy in 1930 when he became the first foreign conductor ever invited to direct Wagnerian opera at Bayreuth.

His character, regarded as tender when the musicians react to the conceptions of the composers, is swiftly changing to fury at a slovenly performance. These spasms leave him limp. He is known to have hurled music stands, his face agonized, when once a violinist lazily played an intricate part which Toscanini, no score before him, was feeling in his photographic memory.

"A passage badly played strikes him as stingingly as the lash of a whip," a commentator has written.

And others here yesterday remembered his patience when the musicians, like himself, were trying, though faltering at moments, to find and interpret the mystic stuffs the composers left.

His insistence that all praise should go to the composer and not to himself was remembered here yesterday. One commentator, David Ewen, has written of the rehearsal of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," when the orchestra failed to respond, that the maestro himself "laid bare the soul of the music for the men."

In a wild burst of enthusiasm for their director, the musicians began cheering. Then Toscanini became pathetic. It was recalled, and reminded that it was not he who was entitled to praise. It was Beethoven, he said.

To Sail for England After Appearance In Constitution Hall

Hyattsville Police Reinforced for Easter Egg Roll

Precautions to protect Hyattsville police from possible injury at the hands of children rolling Easter eggs in the municipal park April 10, were taken by the town council last night.

A resolution to augment the force by four temporary policemen for the egg-rolling was adopted after Robert T. Plitt said that 22 State, city and municipal policemen were unable to handle the 7,000 children last year.

Several officers were trampled and the remainder had their uniforms spattered by overly ardent egg rollers, it was said.

Reds Reported To Have Seized Cartagena

Arsenal and Port Said To Have Been Captured; Hold Madrid Suburbs

By International News Service.

Hendaye, French-Spanish Frontier, March 13.—Communist-led troops, fighting to force continued "Republican" resistance against Gen. Franco, tonight seized the port and arsenal at Cartagena, according to French reports from Valencia.

These messages belied claims of Gen. Jose Miaja and his Madrid "peace" junta that the week-old Communist uprising was suppressed.

Advices through the Franco lines outside Madrid insisted that Communists were holding out in a ring of suburbs virtually encircling Madrid.

From his headquarters at Burgos, Gen. Franco went ahead with arrangements for an offensive against the remaining "Republican" quarter of Spain.

Franco Moves Up Men

As he moved up men, munitions and equipment, it was evident Franco plans no hasty campaign, but will lay the military groundwork carefully for the drive with which he expects to wind up the war.

Gen. Miaja, in announcing for the third time in a week that the Communists were crushed, implied he soon would make some new gesture for "peace with honor" toward the Franco government.

The council Miaja heads, which ousted Premier Juan Negrin so peace might be negotiated, met last night. Communist representatives were removed from the Madrid municipal government, and it was announced principal Communist military leaders had surrendered. Communist casualties have been heavy, it was stated.

Cartagena, where the French dispatches reported a Communist coup, was the scene a week ago of a short-lived rebellion in which the "Republican" fleet escaped to Algiers and was interned by the French.

4 Foreign Reds Seized

Madrid, March 13 (AP).—Four foreigners accused of directing the Madrid Communist Political Bureau were seized today as Gen. Jose Miaja's republican defense council cleaned up the remnants of last week's revolt.

The four seized were three Russians and a Frenchman. They were charged with directing the Communists here from behind the scenes.

ments with Brazil.

Of interest, also, in Pan-American affairs was a statement by the Pan American Union, showing that, contrary to widespread belief, the United States' percentage of sales to Argentina increased in 1938, while that of Great Britain and Germany declined.

The Mexican Embassy here announced inauguration of a series of "good neighbor" broadcasts, beginning Thursday, when Josephus Daniels, United States Ambassador to Mexico, will speak.

The measures relating to defense weapons for Latin-American lands were introduced by Senator Pittman, of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Bloom, of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Administration support for the move was shown by Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who said:

"There should be no serious objection to it. It merely would tend to aid industry and give employment in this country, and it should serve to improve relations with the Latin American republics."

Bloom said:

"They (American republics) would prefer to make these purchases and to obtain this co-operation in the United States, but when they approach American arms manufacturers they find these manufacturers are not equipped to manufacture artillery or armaments of the types desired, and when they approach American shipbuilders they find these shipbuilders cannot construct or co-operate in the construction of vessels of war, except at prices, which, compared with prices charged by European manufacturers, appear exorbitant.

"Co-operation between the United States and other American republics in the defense of this hemisphere would be to the distinct advantage of this country. To make possible such co-operation is a logical corollary of the good neighbor policy."

The Pittman-Bloom measures would authorize manufacture of warships, guns and munitions in American shipyards and arsenals. The southern countries would bind themselves not to permit the war implements to go to any non-American country, and the transactions, it is provided, would result in no expense to the United States.

The Secretary of War would be authorized to communicate to the purchasing government plans or any other information relating to the munitions that would be sold.

Meanwhile, spirited debate broke out in the Senate over the $120,000,000 credits and loan to Brazil, entered into last week by this Government.

Slovakia and Ruthenia Split by Berlin Ultimatum

Outline map shows Slovakia and Ruthenia, in narrow eastern section of Czecho-Slovakia, which were separated by Berlin's ultimatum to the Czecho-Slovakian government. vakian state, but for additional guarantees for the remaining German minorities in Bohemia and Moravia.

In Vienna, it was learned, Durcansky began recruiting a "free corps" of Slovakian residents of Germany, paralleling the corps which Konrad Henlein founded on German soil prior to the Reich's annexation of Sudetenland.

The first regiment already has been formed, composed of Slovaks living near the frontier, and several thousand Slovaks who went to work recently in German labor camps.

Tiso was released from imprisonment in a monastery so he could go to Berlin and see Hitler. He conferred with his successor, Sidor, before leaving.

Sano Mach, former Slovakian propaganda minister, and Vojtetch Tuka, separatists who were detained in an alleged plot, also were liberated.

They addressed a mass meeting of Hlinka storm troops in Bratislava last night.

100 Wounded in Riots

The session ended in complete disorder, Prague was informed. Troops were called out and charged the streets with bayonets fixed, and hurling tear-gas bombs.

More than 100 Germans and Czechs, including policemen and soldiers, were injured, some seriously, during clashes at Iglau, Deutschbrod and neighboring villages.

Police stations in four villages on the outskirts of Iglau, the Czechs charged, were occupied by members of the German minority, who disarmed the policemen.

German Reserves Called

London, March 13 (I. N. S.).—German reserves of the class of 1913 were suddenly called up for service tonight, Reuters Agency reported in a dispatch from Munich. Many were summoned straight from work, the message said.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's ultimatum to Prague, calling for division of Czecho-Slovakia into three separate states, demanded an answer within 48 hours, the London Daily Express said.

Expectations were that Slovakia would split from the republic by tomorrow, and Ruthenia immediately thereafter.

Reuters said the propaganda ministry in Berlin explained that troop movements seen in Bavaria were connected with this week's observance of the first anniversary of the Austrian anschluss.

Anglo-French Move Unlikely

London, March 13 (AP).—Britain and France watched the Czecho-Slovak crisis with some anxiety tonight, but it was not expected they intended to intervene.

The speaker of the House today spared the government comment on the issue when he ruled out of order a question by Laborite Philip Noel-Baker as to whether Prime Minister Chamberlain would make representations to Berlin on any German interference in the crisis.

The British view is that a direct march on Prague would bring up the issue of guarantees, but it would have to be decided whether the invasion was "unprovoked."

Puerto Ricans Ask Plebiscite

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 13 (AP).—A convention of 73 business, professional and civic organizations last night adopted a resolution calling for a definition of Puerto Rico's political status and recommended a plebiscite to determine the island's future.

The convention, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and representing many of the island's leading business organizations, directed the Puerto Rican legislature to forward its recommendations to Washington.

Hitler Speaks and Nation Of Slovaks Takes Form

Carpatho-Ukraine at Eve of Realizing Century-Old Longing for Free Statehood As Map of Central Europe Changes

Slovakia was virtually an "independent" nation last night, because Hitler had spoken.

Carpatho-Ukraine also was at the eve of realizing century-old longings for free statehood because the Fuehrer's voice had rasped again.

And Czecho-Slovakia, already sheared of its limbs, like a glass lizard, was undergoing a strange process of dividing into head, torso and tail.

First Utterance at Munich

Hitler first had uttered his magical formula of transformation at Munich some months ago. The result—backed by the moral force of "peace," two dictators, and two premiers of democracies—lopped off approximately one-third of the 20-year-old republic, both in area and population, with Germany claiming most of the spoils and throwing a few territorial bones to Hungary and Poland.

The Fuehrer's abracadabra shriveled the Versailles-created democracy into a hyphenated Czecho-Slovakia of 39,912 square kilometers. The new adjustments of independence will leave the head—the section which includes Moravia-Silesia-Bohemia—an area of 49,000 square kilometers.

Population of 6,500,000

The newest Czech nation will contain more than 6,500,00 people; but even in this truncated segment future trouble is assured, for there will still be some 230,000 Germans for whom Reich policy will extend a "protective" wing, according to statistics released last month by an official Czecho-Slovakia bureau.

Slovakia, with an approximate area of 38,500 square kilometers, has a little more than 2,000,000 Slovaks, and minority of 134,000 Germans. The presence of 65,000 Magyars gives Hungary extra reasons to back her appetite to digest once more her one-time Slavonic province.

Since, according to the last official count, Czechs in Slovakia were polled as Slovaks, and a similar system was followed in Bohemia, there's really no knowing how many of each "nationality" there are in the new Czech and Slovak domains. Autonomous Slovakia, however, already has taken formal steps against its resident Czechs by refusing them representation in the latest elections.

Berlin's Greatest Attraction

Smallest of the three tony states will be Carpatho-Ukraine, also known as Carpatho-Russia and Ruthenia, which despite its small population of half a million has the greatest attraction for Berlin.

Ruthenia, which like Slovakia, was given autonomy following the collapse of the democratic government after the debacle of Munich, is center for a Pan-Ukraine movement which seeks to coalesce into a single nation pieces of Poland and Rumania plus the vast grain belt of Russian Ukraine. Most enthusiastic of the extremists foresee a Ukraine with 50,000,000, and a power in European affairs.

Hitler, however, has different ideas, planning a Ukraine which, like the short-lived country formed by the German imperial command following the collapse of Czarist Russia during the World War, will serve as a satellite and food basket to the Third Reich.

Slovaks Favored Unity

When a national committee of Czechs proclaimed in Prague on October 28, 1918, the independence of the state from Austrian rule, Slovaks were quick to act likewise, and two days later a council voted in favor of unity into a single Czecho-Slovak state.

The Slovaks had been almost completed Magyarized by their Hungarian rulers, and the Czechs found it necessary to take over the leadership in administration of affairs. Many Slovaks wanted immediate autonomy, but the wiser heads knew that there were not enough Slovaks educated and trained for governing a body of people.

First rift in the democratic paradise appeared in 1922 when the central government, dominated by the Czechs, refused to open three new Catholic high schools in Slovakia. The result was that Father Hlinka withdrew his party from the government and joined the opposition. In 1927, the country was divided for administrative purposes into Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia, and Ruthenia, with the evident hope of solving the question of autonomy.

Some Opposed Autonomy

Not all Slovaks wanted separation, or even autonomy, in the 20-year honeymoon of the Wilson-fostered republic. Many desired a strong central government, and joined with Masaryk and later Benes in fighting division of administrative power. Masaryk, who founded the nation, himself was half Slovak, and Premier Hodza, who served under the presidency of Benes, Vladimir Hurban, Minister to the United States, and other leading officials, are Slovaks.

In fact, until Hitler forced a pro-Nazi government into Prague, the Hlinka party was regarded as embarrassing rather than dangerous. The same could be said of the Ruthenian autonomists.

Hlinka stated his position during the Sudeten crisis of last summer. He said: "If we cannot have autonomy, we must say good-by to Czecho-Slovakia." Father Hlinka died before his prophecy was fulfilled.

Girl Imitates Brother's Suicide

Chicago, March 13 (I.N.S.).—Daily and many times a day, pretty Jean MacKenzie walked through the door where her brother Kenneth had hanged himself on July 15, 1934.

Today her body was found hanging this from that same fateful door.

Both tragedies occurred in the offices of the Engineer's Publishing Co., owned by the family. Jean, 24, was the circulation manager. She left a note blaming a fear of going blind.

Former U. S. Judge Found Dead in N.Y.

New York, March 13 (I.N.S.).—Former Federal Judge Nathan Lieberman was found dead late today in a mid-town hotel with a small box, marked "poison" containing two pills, in his pocket.

Lieberman, about 50, had served on the Federal bench as a revocation referee on liquor hearings during prohibition. He was elected State Assemblyman and city alderman as a Republican.

Britain Again Offers Hitler 'Friendship'

Halifax Makes 3d Overture in 5 Days; Pledges 'Sincerity'

By Frank R. Kelley
Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 13.—For the third time in five days the British government made friendly overtures to Germany when Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax tonight promised Britain would "neglect no opportunity of friendly and sincere approach to or by the governments of other countries which may hold real promise of removing misunderstandings or suspicion and so strengthening the forces that make for peace."

Halifax, speaking to a political meeting, did not mention Germany by name, but it was clear he addressed Berlin. The speech followed "feelers" for a disarmament conference put out from No. 10 Downing street last Thursday and backed up Friday in a speech by Sir Samuel Hoare.

Lord Halifax also chose to make his speech on the same day that a group of powerful British businessmen, representing the Federation of British Industries, left for Germany to seek cartel agreements with large German concerns for the peaceful exploitation of world markets, in which they are rivals.

After inviting Hitler to talk about peace, Lord Halifax recalled the words of the French philosopher, Pascal: "Justice without power is unavailing; power without justice is tyrannical. We must therefore combine justice and power, making what is just strong and what is strong just."

While seeking peace, he said, Britain would continue to rearm in order to give itself "the strength of self-confidence that its position and circumstances demand."

Japanese Capture Two Towns, Sink Fleet of Junks

Shanghai, March 13 (AP).—Japanese columns on the Han river 100 miles west of Hankow reported capture of two towns today and the sinking of a fleet of junks in which Chinese troops were attempting to flee across the river.

The Japanese said they had wiped out all Chinese forces on the east bank of the Han and were in position to advance toward Shasi and Ichang.

In February Japanese units fought 61 engagements against Guerrillas in the vicinity of Soochow, 50 miles east of Shanghai, in which they say they killed 1,004 and took 84 prisoners.

Democracies Must Progress, Briton Says

Must Fight Fascist 'Retreat From Reason' To Survive, He Avers

The tradition of democracy living countries of English origin was described last night as "the Anglo-Saxon way of living" by Dr. George E. G. Catlin, British writer on political science. His lecture at the Department of Agriculture Auditorium was sponsored by the British-American Committee of the Hall of Nations, American University.

"Anglo-Saxon is the name of a culture, not a race," Dr. Catlin emphasized and added that the three "golden words" afoot in the world today are class, race and culture, the last of which he deprecated as full of significances foreign to democratic thinking.

Declaring that democracy cannot last by the mere uttering of ancient pieties on Jefferson, Dr. Catlin pointed out that it is a philosophy of experimentation and must live by groping after new ideas or succumb to the dogmatic rigidity of the totalitarian social concept.

"We are living in an age of faiths," he concluded, of totalitarian crusades, a period in full retreat from reason. If 'Anglo-Saxony' is to survive, it must, together with the great Catholic tradition of France, experiment fearlessly with new ideas and cease harping on the past."

The second in a series of three lectures will be given in the auditorium next week by Dr. Catlin. Proceeds will be used to provide one or more Hall of Nations fellowships for students from the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Paris Economists Weigh Questions In Lippmann Book

Paris, March 13.—French economists opened here today a series of conferences on questions raised last August at an international meeting of economists in which Walter Lippmann, special writer for the Washington Post and other newspapers, took part. The question discussed today was "Government Intervention and the Mechanism of Prices."

The August conference was held to discuss ideas mentioned by Lippmann in a book which was published in France as "La Cite Libre." It was agreed to form from this conference a center of international studies, the first meeting of which was held today.

Japan Orders Fishing Parley

Tokyo (Tuesday), March 14 (I.N.S.).—Ambassador Shigenori Togo in Moscow today was instructed to confer again with Soviet Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff in a final effort to adjust the long dispute between the two countries regarding fishing rights off the Siberian coast.

While diplomats maintain there still is hope of a settlement, the Japanese cabinet met in emergency session to decide on measures in the event the last-moment negotiations fail. It was reported 30 Soviet submarines were patrolling the fishing areas.

Air Line Asks $2,758,213 for Mail to Europe

Would Carry 52 Loads, 1,600 Pounds Each, for That Sum

By International News Service.

Pan-American Airways last night asked the Government to pay $2,758,213 a year for 52 air-mail trips with a maximum mail load of 1,600 pounds per trip between the United States and Europe.

The company, however, announced it plans four round trips a week, and proposed a downward scale of payments for the additional trips, ranging from $6.82 per mile down to $2.73 for the second, third and fourth trips.

2,500 Passengers Expected

In its application to the Civil Aeronautics Authority for a certificate of convenience and necessity to establish transatlantic passenger, mail and express service, the company estimated that, without mail payments, it would lose $3,500,000 the first year of operations if it obtained 2,500 passengers.

The application proposes two routes, one the northern "great circle" course from New York via Newfoundland to Southampton, England, a distance of 3,375 miles; the other via the Azores and Lisbon to Marseilles, France, a distance of 4,451 miles.

Estimating its planes would carry a total of 132,000 pounds of mail to Europe the first year, rising to 192,000 pounds for succeeding years, the company asked payment of $1 a pound for all over 1,600 pounds carried on any one trip.

Six Planes Getting Ready

CAA experts estimated, on this basis and with the sliding scale payments for second, third and fourth planes each week, total annual payments for carrying the mail would be between $5,000,000 and $5,750,000.

Pan-American's first superliner designed for the transatlantic service is scheduled to be exhibited at New York tomorrow, after a flight from Baltimore. Another ship is to be delivered by the manufacturers, the Boeing Co., at Seattle tomorrow. A third ship is now making test flights over the Pacific route, while three others are under construction.

The CAA is expected to call a joint hearing within a few days on the Pan-American applications.

Farmer Trades Wife With Land, Mules as Boot

Russellville, Ala., March 13 (AP).—Police arrested four persons today in what they described as a wife-swapping deal that included the trading of two children, two mules and 80 acres of land.

The warrants charged bigamy against W. D. Johnson and Odell Brand, neighbors, and their wives.

Police Chief L. A. Jackson, of Red Bay, Ala., said Annie Fay Johnson Brand told him her former husband, Johnson, deeded 80 acres of land to Brand and her and gave them two mules in the swap. Johnson and his new wife were to receive custody of two of the five Brand children. Johnson has two children, by a former wife, the officer said.

Californian Keeps 2 Wives in Trailer

Los Angeles, March 13 (AP).—Walter V. Thurman, 29, Long Beach salesman and tennis star, pleaded guilty to bigamy charges today after his arrest in a 6 by 12-foot auto trailer, where police charged he was living with both wives.

Police Lieut. Charles Gouthro said Thurman admitted marrying Ruth Louden, 18, in Santa Ana, Calif., last October 21, and Agnes Thrush, 23, in San Francisco, February 4, but wouldn't explain why.

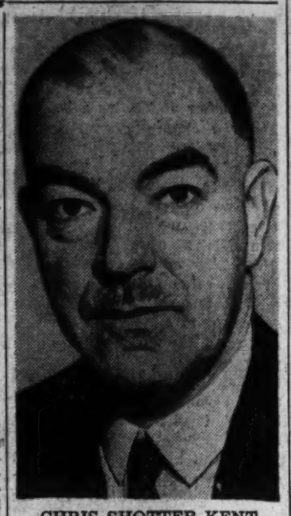
Briton Plans to 'Propagandize' United States in England

Seeks to Improve Relations Before King and Queen Come



CHRIS SHOTTER KENT

When the King and Queen of England come to America this summer, they will not be the only Englishmen to learn things about this country, if plans revealed yesterday by C. S. Kent, general manager of the London Times, are successful.

Kent, who in 1918 was financial controller of the department of propaganda in enemy countries, is now using his experience to promote "American propaganda in England." As a means of cementing friendly relations between America and England, the Times is preparing a special "American supplement" to be published simultaneously in American and England on the day the King and Queen set foot in this country.

England's position in international relations is not as dangerous as Americans seem to think, Kent remarked yesterday. American newspapers "overdrew the picture" during the crisis last September, and people here are "more perturbed about us than we are ourselves," he said.

Admitting that was partly because of the "philosophical" temperament of the British people, he added, "It is rather surprising to see them making all these preparations for defense today; traditionally we muddle through, but we win our wars eventually."

"Every phase of American life will be described in the proposed American supplement, according to Kent. Articles on the history of the United States, her Constitution and the operation of the Government, her industries, natural resources, culture and education, sports, law and justice, transportation, natural beauties, national parks and vacation resorts, and especially Anglo-American trade relations, will be written by leading authorities.

The object of the magazine will be to portray America to Europe, explaining and interpreting the American scene as impartially as possible, and avoiding all controversial questions.

Now engaged in laying the groundwork by contacting American leaders, Kent declared yesterday that the idea had been enthusiastically welcomed wherever he had been. Arriving in New York on January 30, he visited Philadelphia before coming here, and plans to go to Chicago, Boston and Canadian cities before returning.

Einstein Advances New Theory As Key to Creation's Mystery

Einstein

stood the test of experience. A year ago I discovered a new solution and I am now engaged with two collaborators in developing the results to a point where they could be checked with experimental facts."

Einstein a year ago, with Leopold Infeld, published a book, which pointed out that scientists have believed of late in two realities in the material universe. These he said were matter and "field." Field means the fields of gravitation, magnetism and electricity.

In the book he asserted that now "field" is the only reality left. Support for this subordination of matter is found in physical experiments indicating solid matter may be only radiation in a changed form, that all matter is made of particles which seem to be nothing but bits of electricity, and a few experiments where rays have been detected changing themselves from radiation into solid particles.

In the attempt to unify these "fields," which seem to permeate everywhere, gravitation has been a chief missing link. It has no yet measurable waves like electricity; it does not come and go like magnetism.

Another gap is the link between relativity and the quantum theory. The latter shows that immaterial things like energy and light really are made up of separate particles.

Science has been compelled to accept as a fact an incredible situation, in which immaterial waves are sometimes particles and apparently real particles sometimes are waves. Experiments proved this contradiction. A "unified" theory might explain.

If the "law" Einstein seeks is found, it may also supply a better understanding of the link between mind and matter. For it deals with a nonmaterial world as much as with the material.

Einstein was asked whether he believed that a "supreme court of wisdom," suggested at the Harvard Tercentenary two years ago, could smooth the world's troubles. He replied that if organization difficulties could be overcome, it should function as a "conscience" for mankind.

"Such a body," he said, "could, by expression of its views, exert a highly beneficial and, in course of time, even a standard-setting influence, on development of the social and economic affairs of the world."

Bolivian Oil Trial Held Subterfuge

New York, March 13 (AP).—W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, tonight declared the Bolivian government was seeking to confiscate company properties through a legal "subterfuge."

Inspired by the decision handed down by the Bolivian Supreme Court last week, canceling the company's concessions, Farish said the purpose of the court's ruling was to "defeat the company and despoil it of its property," and indicated protest would be made to the State Department.

ArmyLists Sites For Wartime Training Units

Staff Asserts Action Is Simply Measure To Assure Mobilization

The Army General Staff has listed 1,000-acre tracts of Government-owned land throughout the country for use as wartime training camps and mobilization centers, it was learned yesterday.

Although few details were forthcoming, officers explained that the list was compiled nearly a year ago by the Department of Agriculture and that selection of the sites was a routine peacetime activity.

Under existing War Department plans, each corps area has certain designated centers where troops would be prepared for active duty, it was said.

Some of these centers are peacetime Army posts which would be expanded in time of war, but other camps also would have to be established to meet greatly increased training programs, officials stated.

Army officers emphasized there was nothing unusual in the request and characterized it as a normal measure to insure efficient training and mobilization in time of war.

U. S. Slovaks Hit Separation and Nazi Interference

Pittsburgh, March 13 (AP).—V. S. Platek, president of the National Slovak Society, declared tonight Slovaks in America were "bitterly opposed to any such separatist movement" as contemplated in Czecho-Slovakia.

He made public an answer to a request from a European news agency (Havas) for the views of American Slovaks on the Czech crisis. His cable said:

"We are categorically opposed to any brutal interference on the part of Germany in Slovakia . . . The radical separatist movement does not come from the heart of loyal Slovaks and is detrimental to Slovaks."

Western Mayors Hear LaGuardia

Treasure Island, San Francisco, March 13 (I.N.S.).—Mayors of the West's 40 largest cities and New York met at Treasure Island today to map policy lines on important Governmental problems.

New York's Mayor LaGuardia, president of the United States Conference of Mayors, keynoted the conclave.

"Relief seems our most important problem," said LaGuardia, 'Congress' cut out of the relief bill will cause a great deal of hardship and suffering unless additional appropriations are made. No city is now able to take on the burden of additional local relief."

Contemporary Painting Exhibit Being Judged at the Corcoran

Paintings from all over the country entered for the sixteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings are being considered by the five-man jury of selection and awards, which met yesterday for the first time in the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Headed by Maurice Sterne, California painter and sculptor, the jury in the next few days will decide what paintings are to be hung, which are to receive prizes, and how the pictures are to be arranged in the gallery.

With entries from practically every State and possession of the United States, the exhibition aims to present a "true cross-section of the work of living American artists," according to C. Powell Minnegerode, director of the gallery. Both modern and conservative schools will be represented.

All types of subjects have been submitted, including landscapes, marines, portraits and still lifes. Four W. A. Clark awards will be made, including a first prize of $2,000 and the Corcoran Gold Medal; second, $1,500 and the Cocoran Silver Medal; third, $1,000 and the Corcoran Bronze Medal, and fourth, $500 and the Corcoran honorable mention certificate.

Besides Chairman Sterne, the jury consists of Randall Davey, of New Mexico; Jerry Farnsworth, of New England; John C. Johansen, of New York, and Carroll Tyson, of Pennsylvania. Including only original oil paintings by living American artists not previously exhibited in Washington, the show will have a private view on Saturday evening, March 25, and will be open to the public from March 26 to May 7.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Famous Figures Coming To Life on Screen

Warners Plan Eight Biographies for Production; Republic Completes Its Biggest Picture; This, That and the Other About Amusements

AN ELABORATE production schedule was announced over the week-end from the Warner Brothers' studios, in Burbank, Calif.

The Freres Warner, it seems, are about to launch a pretentious program of "shooting" that will embrace 48 feature releases. Eight of them will be biographical dramas. The lives of famous men to be perpetuated in celluloid will present Paul Muni, as Beethoven; Claude Rains, as Disraeli; Errol Flynn, as Don Juan; James Cagney, as John Paul Jones, and Edward G. Robinson in "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich."

BELL

Other features will be based on the life of Knute Rockne, John Dillinger and the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, German pastor, now in concentration camp. Bette Davis will appear as Queen Elizabeth, opposite Errol Flynn, as Essex—if anybody can find Mr. Flynn—in a camera version of Maxwell Anderson's stage play.

Picturization of popular books will include "The Sea Hawk," by Rafael Sabatini; "All This and Heaven, Too," by Rachel Field; "The Old Maid," by Edith Wharton; W. Somerset Maugham's "The Moon and Sixpence;" "Dust Be My Destiny," by Jerome Odlum, and Warden Lewis E. Lawes' "20,000 Years in Sing Sing."

This is a partial list that revives a few mellow memories, since several of the subjects down for new treatment by the Warners will be recognized by the initinte as remakes of former successes.

Take Claude Rains and Errol Flynn, for example. As Disraeli, Mr. Rains will be following in the footsteps of George Arliss, whose "Disraeli," as fashioned by Louis Napoleon Parker for his stage use back in 1911, was one of the distinguished British star's greatest successes and later was converted into an equally successful picture, with Mr. Arliss still in the title role. As Don Juan, the handsome and stalwart Mr. Flynn will be succeeding to a role that was created for the screen in the early days of sound—but not dialogue—by John Barrymore, soon to be seen at the National, with Elaine Barrie (Mrs. Barrymore) in "My Dear Children." Then there is the matter of "The Sea Hawk." This will be remembered by the veterans of the cinema as one of Frank Lloyd's most successful silent productions, with the late Milton Sills in the title role, supported by Wallace Beery and a long list of other notables in an earlier day of the screen's eminence. It would appear that the gelatins more or less swing in a circle, bringing the old-timers back, from time to time, to points they have enjoyed visiting before.

There is an interesting story in connection with the original stage production of "Disraeli."

"Disraeli" was not too brisk a hit at the beginning of its career. One curtain line was especially dull and left the audience cold and uninterested. It followed Disraeli's threat to bring the whole power of the Bank of England against those who opposed his plan to gain possession of the Suez Canal for Britain and the Queen. Two lines remedied the situation. After his fiery speech, the ingenue of the play said to "Dizzy," "I think it is wonderful that you have such power." To which Disraeli replied, "I haven't, but they don't know that." The play immediately took its rank among the foremost successes of its season.

Upon such seeming trivialities sometimes rests the fate of a worthy drama.

Comes a cordial note from Forrest Orr, importantly cast in one of the chief comedy roles in support of Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story." Mr. Orr is happy to have been remembered as a former mainstay of the National Theater Players. Who could forget him?

Perhaps Richard Dix has changed his mind. What I mean is that when Dix was present on the stage of RKO-Keith's Theater in this city, with Wesley Ruggles, the director; Estelle Taylor and numerous other members of the cast, on the occasion of the premiere of "Cimarron," he made the declaration that it was in the role of Yancy Cravat that he wanted to be remembered. Now, maybe, he would prefer to go down to posterity as Sam Houston.

"Man of Conquest," in which Sam Houston is the principal character, was completed yesterday by Republic Pictures. It is the most pretentious production the company ever has undertaken. Two years were devoted to preliminary research, story preparation and casting. The script was finished in December, 1938, under the joint ministrations of five of Hollywood's most able scenarists. By January of this year, all pre-camera work had been completed. Actual filming consumed more than two months.

As I say, after this, Richard Dix may prefer to be known as "Sam," rather than "Yancy." But it is only a guess.

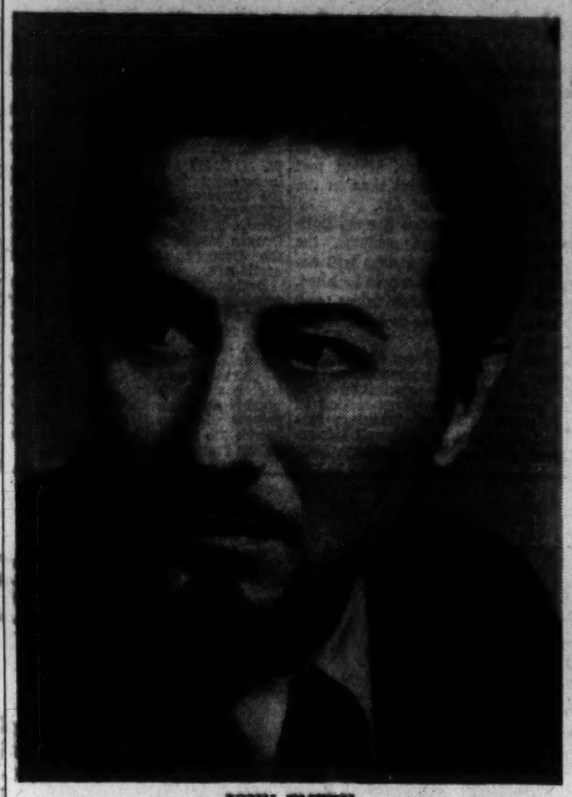
Dots and Dashes

Owing to the labor difficulties encircling our leading hotels, yesterday's luncheon, at which Attorney General Frank Murphy was to have been guest of honor, was postponed by the Variety Club of Washington . . . Mr. Murphy will be honor guest at a later date . . . Those Earle Roxyettes are reported to have struggled with those ladders for weeks on end before mastering the art of balance . . . The plump young coryphee who falls off persistently, does so for comedy effect—just as that other gal fell off the big rolling globes with such hilarious results . . . Frank Capra's production of "Lost Horizon" has had its effect on the real estate market . . . Harry Huffman, Fox-Skouras executive, has modeled his new home in Denver as nearly as possible after the famous Lamasary of Shangri-La . . . The house and grounds cover four blocks . . . "Call It Fun," a musical satire in 16 scenes, will be presented by the Arts Club Drama Guild on March 28, 29 and 30 . . . "What Price Glory?" by Lawrence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, will be revived by the Film Society of Washington in Pierce Hall tomorrow night at 8:30 . . . "Der Postillion von Lonjumeau," a tuneful musical comedy, will be presented by the Foreign Language Cinema in Pierce Hall on Saturday night at 8 . . . So Charlie Olive, Washington independent picture exhibitor, is getting sun-burned down at Miami Beach . . . Heigho!

Not According to Hoyle Note

What kind of deck is it in which "Five Kings" turn out to be an ace?

Returns to Town in Classic Role



JOHN EMERY,

who appears in the role of Hotspur, in support of Orson Welles and Burgess Meredith in the Mercury Theater-Theater Guild production of Mr. Welles' "Five Kings," which opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night. In private life, Mr. Emery is the husband of Tallulah Bankhead, enjoying a Broadway hit in "The Little Foxes." He was last seen here with her in "I Am Different" and before that in Katherine Dayton's "Save Me the Waltz"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

THURSDAY EVENING when John L. Lewis went to see himself portrayed in "Pins and Needles"—produced by David Dubinsky's I. L. G. W. U., which quit the C. I. O.—Lewis met R. J. Thomas, head of the C. I. O.'s auto union . . . Earlier that same day Thomas had issued an attack against Dubinsky and accused him of backing Homer Martin's rival group . . . "Say, what are you doing here?" Lewis demanded of Thomas. "After your attack on Dubinsky today I should think you'd stay away from anything connected with his union" . . . Thomas was silent. He made no reply because of an excellent reason . . . He was seeing the show—on a pass.

SINCLAIR LEWIS still is trying to get back into an acting role in his play, "Angel, Is 22." Lewis has rewritten the play six times, always including a part for himself—but in vain. In the meantime he's understudying Philip Merivale and six other parts . . . George Jessel, who relinquished his "Little Old New York" exhibit for the fair, has revived it . . . Beth Brown completed her new play, "Riverside Drive"—a five-year job.

SAM GOLDWYN is very much satisfied with his newest employe, James Roosevelt . . . At a meeting of Hollywood producers Goldwyn discussed Jimmy's accomplishments . . . "And, you know," the surprised Goldwyn confided—regarding the eldest son of the President of the United States—"you know, he has entree everywhere."

AN AUTOGRAPH hunter who secured Nancy Carroll's signature at the Longacre pleadingly told her: "I'd like something more than just your autograph. I want something to remember you by." Nancy obliged. "Come along," she beckoned to him—and escorted him into McGinnis' for two juicy hamburgers . . . Eddy Duchin's band will be featured at the Waldorf roof for the summer . . . Teddy Hart, of "The Boys From Syracuse," broadcast twice this week, but without pay. "Once I got paid for a broadcast," he boasted. "I did a scene from "Three Men on a Horse" for Louella Parsons on the Campbell Soup program. I got paid 100 cans of tomato soup. I was told that next time I'd go on that program I'd get a raise—to 100 cans of asparagus soup."

VICKI BAUM, the noted writer, has sailed for Europe on the S. S. Paris . . . Ten days ago in Hollywood she arranged for the issuance of her passport, with instructions to forward it to her hotel in New York, the St. Moritz . . . Although her secretary phoned to assure her that the passport had been forwarded, Vicki was told by the hotel officials that it hadn't arrived . . . And so, desperate for time, her publishers, Doubleday, Doran, yesterday had an emergency passport issued to her . . . When she returned to the hotel Vicki Baum—whose writings are so distinctive that they've been banned and burned in Germany—discovered that the original passport had been forwarded to her . . . but was returned to Hollywood, with the envelope notation—"Unknown."

PAUL CADMUS, whose "Riverside Drive" mural brought criticism from Navy officials because it showed sailors flirting, was assigned to paint the murals for the postoffice in Richmond, Va. His first mural was scrapped, and his second one, "Pocahontas and John Smith," has been accepted.. Cadmus' scrapped mural, indelicately enough, was captioned "Bombardment of Richmond" . . . The Chez Paree in Chicago now is featuring two Morgans—Band Leader Russ Morgan and Helen Morgan. The management now is seeking to hire the midget that once sat on J. P. Morgan's knee . . . Oscar Levant, whose orchestra is heard at "The American Way," has christened the band "Ozzie Levant and his Sabateurs."

GROVER WHALEN went to the Colony Club to address the members regarding the New York World's Fair and to answer all questions . . . "Why," asked Alma Clayburgh, "will the German government have no exhibit at the fair?" . . . "Because of the Bad Exchange," was Whalen's bland answer. "They couldn't afford the money."

ALFRED HITCHCOCK, who won the Film Critics' prize for best direction this year and who is the best customer of the New York restaurants, is flying to Washington for one hour Sunday just to test the Capital's food . . . Frank Fay, whose vaudeville enterprise now is an assured success, will revive the Sunday evening shows he helped make famous during the Winter Garden's heydey . . . Jerome Zerbe, who photographs the celebrities at El Morocco, never photographs a customer who asks him to. Only once did he waver from this rule—when a lady who supped there quite regularly insisted that he do it. . . . And that was the one picture all the papers front-paged, when that lady got into smuggling difficulties—Mrs. Edgar Lauer.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 13.—Bette Davis is Hollywood's problem child. There's no doubt about it, she'll have to have another Academy Award for "Dark Victory," making it three straight. I've never seen anything like it on any screen. She's topped everything she ever attempted. And unless I miss my guess, Bette will be amazed herself by her own performance if and when she sees "Dark Victory." As you know, she never attends previews or sees her own rushes.

HEDDA HOPPER

Bette has a perfect quartette: herself, Eddie Goulding, Casey Robinson and David Lewis. I hope she won't lose this combination. It's by far the best thing George Brent has ever done. And they've got a new star in Geraldine Fitzgerald.

Since the preview they've cut out the anti-climatic finish. You see only the triumph of Bette's face. My only criticism is that that fade-out should have been silent, without strains of a violin coming from nowhere.

When scenes intrude into your private life, for days after you've witnessed a picture, and you can't push them out of your mind, then you've got something. That's what "Dark Victory" does. Whatever happens, don't miss it.

An unusual combination of people gathered at Frances Marion's party to honor Bette after her preview. Mrs. Salisbury Fields, 80-year-old step-daughter of Robert Louis Stevenson, was one guest. By the way, the play her son, Austin Strong, wrote will be given at a command performance for the King and Queen of England this summer. She was getting and giving the low-down to Elsa Maxwell. Elsa became a great pet of the dowagers up at Santa Barbara, when she said, "I hope you'll like my gab. They didn't in Los Angeles, you know." Such frankness won them hands down.

There, too, were the Hal Wallises, Mary Pickford, the Casey Robinsons, David Lewis, Jimmy Whale, the Harry Joe Browns, Marion Hollis, Eddie Goulding, Count Rossi and a dozen others.

The curried lobster was the best thing you ever tasted. But Bette didn't come.

America's still the land of the free. Richard Tauber sang an entire group of German songs, in German. And the audience demanded five more encores. Marlene Dietrich not only cheered, but wept when he sang "Vienna, City of My Dreams."

Sidewalk fans got quite a kick out of her rushing out to her car, parked in the middle of the street. She opened the door herself, leapt in and was followed by Von Sternberg. Ernst Lubitsch followed with Diana Napier, but an unruly motorist behind honked and honked and they made the quickest get-away ever seen.

Heard Gladys Robinson greet an acquaintance thus: "Mother taught me not to stare rudely, but I was sure I knew you."

Vincent Sherman, Warner writer, got a phone call yesterday from a New York friend. We'll call him Mr. Smith. He said he was coming out for dinner at Sherman's expense. Agreed. Five minutes later the Roosevelt Hotel called, asking Sherman if he'd vouch for Mr. Smith who had engaged an expensive suite and charged it to him. Then his wife called. Yes, you guessed it—"Smith is here, says he's moving in with us—his hotel threw him out." Frantic, Sherman stormed into Byron Foy's office. What to do? The phone rang again. The gentleman was downstairs, wanting to borrow some money. Foy and Sherman dashed out, prepared for instant murder, and found the Epstein twins laughing themselves sick. (The twins wrote "Four Daughters.")

Our actresses are in revolt these days. There's such an unfair cycle of men's pictures going on—"Beau Geste," "Juarez," "Great Enemy," "Stagecoach," "Stanley and Livingstone," "Each Dawn I Die." Wonder if "The Women" with Norma Shearer will prove a balance wheel?

The armchair brigade at a Hollywood hotel is having fun watching Wally Beery sneaking in "unnoticed." Under the gal's a writer.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 13.—"Witch in the Wilderness," with Joan Crawford sounds like what it "isn't." As a matter of fact it's a book by Desmond Holdridge and is the story of a crowd of society people who go a-yachting up the Amazon River. They are stranded and each is thrown on his own resources. And you can imagine the comedy with the idle rich being put to the test.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Joan isn't the only high-salaried star in this coming Mervyn Leroy production. According to the bosses on the M-G-M lot it will have a "Dinner at Eight" cast with all big names. King Vidor, who is as cheesey as any star when it comes to accepting vehicles, is crazy over the Holdridge novel and will direct it. Since "The Citadel" received the praise of so many people, King is more careful than ever over his directorial assignments.

At long last, Eddie Albert has been released from his stage engagement in "The Boys from Syracuse" and arrives in Hollywood shortly. Jack Warner, who was able to free young Mr. Albert, is casting him in "On Your Toes," with Zorina. Eddie gets the James Cagney role and it will be rewritten to suit him. Equally important is the deal Jack Warner is discussing with Kate Smith to play one of the leading roles.

Why Hedy Lamarr for second fiddle in "The Women?" I just can't see it, even though Joan Crawford did ask to be allowed to play the part and it is almost as important as the role Norma Shearer is playing. I'd like to see Hedy cast more sympathetically. It's so long since we saw "Algiers." I had almost forgotten how really beautiful she is and how sweet until she came to Marsons Farm Saturday with her bridegroom, Gene Markey. A well known man from New York who is widely traveled, said he thought she had the loveliest face of any woman he had ever seen in Europe or America. She will still do "Lady of the Tropics" which is being prepared for her by Ben Hecht but M-G-M wants her to appear on the screen even sooner.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ginger Rogers' first husband, Jack Pepper, here in town; Janet Gaynor and her mamma, home again, met at the train by Adrian; Douglas Fairbanks, jr., voted the most romantic character actor of 1938 by New York University, will receive a plaque; Buddy Ebsen, heading for New York, may remain there because he feels Hollywood didn't do right by him; May Robson's friends are planning a beog soiree for her April 15—her seventy-fifth birthday; Joy Hodges and Joseph Pasternak talking as seriously at Victor Hugo's; Gertrude Nielsen cheered to the rafters at the West Side Tennis Club "Showboat" party when she sang "My Heart Belongs to Daddy;" Gertie taught Mrs. Eddie Robinson the rhumba and Gladys proved an apt pupil; Cesar Romero voted as wearing the most outstanding costume, a leather Daniel Boone outfit; the Eddie Robinson party, Miriam Hopkins and Anatole Litvak, Kendall and Lewis Milestone and the Ernst Lubitsches really had fun. Ernst, as gay as a lark, danced every dance.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Local Group Offers New War Drama

'Angels of War' Given Premiere by King-Smith Studio

There is no reason why last night's first American performance of "Angels of War" by the King-Smith Playhouse should not mark the start of a long and vital success on the American stage. Certainly its second performance tonight at the intimate theater in Rock Creek Park should not mean the end of this stirring drama.

The play is by Muriel Box and it has been produced in England, but with what success or for how long a run, your reviewer has not been able to learn.

It is the "Journey's End" of the women at the front; it takes place in the barracks of a group of women ambulance drivers and exposes their characters and their reactions to the horror around them. Their petty natures, their dearly-paid-for pleasures and their actions in the face of death are so compellingly set forth, that the pleasant and natty audience which filled the playhouse was almost shocked into applause.

Perhaps it was the excellent work of the cast which played a trick on your reviewer and the play is not so full of life as it appeared to be. The care and workmanship of this studio group has been evident to its audiences in times past and last night's performance was so tellingly played that it was by all odds the finest amateur performance the writer has yet seen in Washington.

Ways of the Battlefield

Nobby, something of a snob, has come to the barracks as a complete greenhorn, but she is soon to be broken in by the rest of the drivers. The ways of the battlefields have taught them how to swear, to smoke and to drink and they pass them on to her. There is the forceful commandant, a biting, terrible, but duty-bound woman, hated by all, but feared for her power to dishonorably discharge. From the daughter of the nobility to the Cockney chambermaid, they have all come to France for love of their country, but the ruthless ways of war life, the air raids, the stench of the battlefields and the deadening routine of assignments have made them all ironic and distrustful even of each other.

When two of the girls switch duty and the one who requested it is killed in a sudden air attack, the pent-up feelings of the years take their toll. It is no pleasant toll, for they descend to savagery and hate. The commandant threatens dismissal. After the Armistice and its mad hilarity, it is a somber and frightened group that prepares to return to England and a life which, they hope, will be far different as a result of their sacrifice.

Many Forceful Scenes

There are several scenes so smartly played, that the effect on the audience is one of complete amazement. There is a terrible fight between two of the girls when one accuses the other of causing the death of their cronie. The resounding slaps that Ellen Moore, as Jo, gives Dot Ramspeck, as Moaner, are real and electrifying. Bette Ryder, Evelyn Crump, Patricia Irwin, Pauline Leveque and Nancy Kenna are completely individualistic in their contrasting roles of the other ambulance drivers. A scene in which the lights are doused during an air-raid is immensely forceful. Martha Nash, as the stiff commandant, is efficiently hateful. One of the girls has an effective speech with her back to the audience. Another of them is boy-crazy and knows how to lure them with gay clothes. Joyce Pretzfelder is vivid as the cockney Lizzie. Gregory Crawley makes a brief, but interesting appearance as an M. P. with an umbrella.

The direction of Keinert Wolff is resourceful and complete. The costumes and sound effects by Ellen Moore, Mickey McCann and Bette Ryder are important to the background of the performance. An unprogrammed scene-designer deserves high praise.

Willis, Defeated by Van Nuys, Contests Seat, Charging Fraud and Intimidation of Voters

By the Associated Press.

Charging fraud, intimidation of voters and violations of the corrupt practices act, Raymond E. Willis, Indiana Republican who missed election as Senator from that State by 5,197 votes last November, yesterday contested the balloting which seated Senator Frederick Van Nuys.

He petitioned the Senate for a thoroughgoing investigation and asserted there would never "be a fair election in Indiana until the methods by which this particular victory has been won are completely exposed and the perpetrators of such methods are punished."

There was "tampering," he alleged, with both voting machines and written ballots; registration lists were padded; voters in the cities were intimidated; relief workers were forced, and money for the Van Nuys campaign was collected by illegal methods.

Names "2 Per Cent Club"

The money, he said, came in part from Indiana's "2 Per Cent Club" and in part from corporations which apparently contributed a fixed percentage of their profits on State and municipal contracts. The 2 Per Cent Club, he asserted, was an organization by which State employes were forced to give 2 per cent of their salaries to the Democratic war chest.

"I believe—and thousands of other Indiana citizens believe," he said, "that I was defrauded of the seat in the Senate that now is occupied by Frederick Van Nuys."

Van Nuys spent the day studying Willis' 359-page document and promised a formal statement later. Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Elections Committee, called a special meeting for Thursday.

Two years ago Van Nuys was a leading opponent of the Roosevelt Supreme Court reorganization bill. From the steps of the White House, the then Governor of Indiana, M. Clifford Townsend, announced that the Senator could expect no support from the Democratic organization of the State in seeking re-election.

Meanwhile, the organization began advancing the 1940 Presidential candidacy of former Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

After numerous acrimonious exchanges, Van Nuys broke openly with the organization, and announced plans for an independent candidacy.

But suddenly the breach was healed during the Democratic State Convention last year. The Democratic nomination was given to Van Nuys, and the regular organization supported him.

The final figures on the Willis-Van Nuys election were 788,386 to 783,189.

Giannini Aide Fights SEC Order To Testify

Harry Friedman, an attorney, said he had asked District Court yesterday to dismiss proceedings by the Securities and Exchange Commission to compel four San Francisco residents to testify in the investigation of Transamerica Corporation.

The attorney said he represented Miss Margaret Mallory, personal secretary of A. P. Giannini, chairman of Transamerica, and Charles J. Smith, a broker.

Ford Offers Proof He Is Labor's Friend

Claims Innocence Of Wrongdoing At River Rouge

By the Associated Press.

The Ford Motor Co. asked the Labor Relations Board yesterday for permission to offer new testimony to prove its friendliness to labor and its innocence of wrongdoing in the May, 1937, fight at Ford's River Rouge plant.

Several organizers of the United Automobile Workers of America were severely beaten in the fight, but yesterday's motion said:

"The persons who participated in the riots of May 26 were persons assigned to no duties by the respondent (the company) in connection with its preparations and a few persons were assigned to such duties but who departed from their instructions."

Those beaten had attempted to pass out union literature and, the motion continued, on no subsequent occasions "were the persons who participated in the distribution of literature molested by any employes of respondent."

The document said that for months previously the company was "apprehensive of an attempt by the U. A. W. to inaugurate a sit-down strike" at River Rouge.

"For over 25 years," it added in a general statement of policy, "respondent and its predecessor companies have been pioneers in paying higher wages, in shortening working hours, and in bettering working conditions."

Asking for permission to submit new evidence, the company said this was needed to establish that Henry Ford, "in stating that, although his men are free to join a union or not as they choose, he believes they would be better off without one, and that respondent, in making similar views known to its employes, were exercising in a reasonable manner the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press."

FHA Chief Defends Insuring Of Loans on Existing Houses

McDonald Tells Senate Group He Fears Return of '2d Mortgage Racket' in Plea For Bill Doubling Limit on Agency's Power

By the Associated Press.

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, told a Senate banking sub-committee yesterday elimination of the FHA's authority to insure mortgages on existing homes would bring a return of "unsound practices, including the second mortgage racket," and high interest rates.

He made the assertion at a hearing on legislation which would double the present $3,000,000,000 limit on FHA mortgage insurance and continue the agency's authority to insure mortgages on existing construction, due to expire June 30.

He expressed the opinion that "opposition to the pending bill originates largely among a comparatively small group of lenders apparently deeply interested in maintaining home financing costs at rates higher than those permitted under the FHA regulations."

Among those who had opposed the measure was John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board.

McDonald said there was a reservoir of $50,000,000,000 for home financing which would be reduced to $5,000,000,000, "so far as easy payment mortgage is concerned," if Congress should fail to extend the provisions for existing construction.

Thomas S. Holden, a member of the Commerce Department's business advisory council, told the House Banking Committee the advisory group believed enactment of the proposed FHA amendments "are essential to continued recovery."

Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, credited the FHA program with aiding a marked recovery in residential building.

George C. Johnson, Brooklyn banker, who also advocated enactment of the proposed amendments, said the FHA had put home ownership on a sound financial footing.

It took an "International Loan" to create this different Bonded Whiskey

In Scotland it's as traditional as kilts.

In France, for centuries, it's been as familiar as vineyards in the sun.

In Canada, too, they've been doing it for time without end.

Meaning, a method of aging liquor to produce the most delicate flavor, light body, ripeness without "woodiness," and exquisite bouquet.

No American whiskey was ever aged that way.

Not in all our history! And we borrowed this age-old aging method from our own distilleries in Canada and Scotland to bring you the new taste thrill of Signet.

For Signet is aged in aged wood! Aged in casks pre-mellowed and enriched by years of prior use in aging other fine whiskies in the Hiram Walker distilleries.

Your taste will tell you the difference! Ask for Signet today at your favorite bar or liquor store.

Practical And Fair

As hearings begin on the Overton bill today, it appears to have the unanimous support of the community. Most of the citizens' associations of the District as well as various other civic bodies have indorsed the measure. Since it would give Washington a smaller Federal payment than many groups believe it should have, this response indicates how eager the District is to settle the annual controversy on this subject.

If the Overton bill is to win the approval of both houses of Congress, however, the campaign in its behalf must be handled with both tact and restraint. Local groups may be tempted to make an appeal simply for more generous treatment of Washington at the hands of Congress. Experience has shown that such pleas are singularly ineffective. To interest Congress in the Overton bill it must be shown that the measure provides a simple and practical formula for division of the National Capital's expenses between local and Federal taxpayers, and that it would be fair to both groups.

No persuasion should be essential to convince Congress of the desirability of ending the present uncertainty over the Federal payment. Valuable time is wasted every year in going over the same old dispute. Moreover, the present hopeful movement for creation of a genuine municipal government here, thus relieving Congress of its duties as a city council, will be under a handicap so long as the fiscal relationship issue remains unsettled.

The task for local citizens, then, is to show Congress the necessity of making some allowance for the excessive amount of property exempt from taxation here. Two years ago the Jacobs committee pointed out that 55 per cent of the land area of the District is nontaxable. As the Government takes more and more of the remaining 45 per cent for nontaxable uses, the city is confronted by a gradual diminution of the area from which revenue may be derived. Surely Congress must recognize the equity of compensating the District for this increasing loss of revenue at a time when its expenses are steadily mounting.

Aside from this situation, the necessity of enacting a major District tax bill this year should emphasize the fairness of the Overton formula. The chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations does not ask that Congress step in to prevent a rise in taxes here, but only that it assume a reasonable share of the burden.

The practicability of the plan is not open to question. It can be understood by everyone. It could be readily applied year after year by simply determining what portion of the District is owned by the Federal Government. If these aspects of the Overton formula are properly brought out in the hearing and emphasized in the debate, it is difficult to see how either house can reasonably vote it down without devising a more acceptable proposal of its own.

The Milk Probe

The investigation of Washington's milk supply ordered by the House yesterday should prove beneficial from at least two viewpoints. First, because of unlicensed shipments of cream into the District recently the people should be assured that their supply of dairy products is pure. Second, Congress ought to know whether it has erected unnecessary barriers to the free movement of good quality milk and cream into the Nation's Capital.

Only a few days ago the Bureau of Agricultural Economics called attention to the fact that the milk inspection laws of various States are used to protect local dairy interests. That unwarranted interference with interstate commerce cannot be too quickly stopped. It is particularly important for Congress to make certain that no such condition exists in the supplying of milk to Washington by producers in nearby States.

In introducing his resolution Representative Smith of Virginia was particularly interested in checking unlicensed shipments of milk and cream into the District. In that cause he will have the full support of the local community. The milk supply is so closely related to community health that bootlegging by unlicensed producers cannot be tolerated. But every fair-minded person realizes that this is only one side of the problem. The House did well to broaden the resolution so as to insure the exploration of monopoly as well as bootleg charges.

Berlin And Prague

Unmistakable evidence of the controlling power in Czecho-Slovakia, as reconstituted by the Munich Agreement, is afforded by the events in that country during the past few days.

After the loss of the Sudetenland the unitary state created by Masaryk and Benes disappeared. Its place was taken by a loose federation consisting of Bohemia, Slovakia and Ruthenia. Under the new constitution each of these areas was given a fairly complete measure of autonomy, with common action limited practically to foreign affairs, defense and finance.

Tiny Ruthenia, with its most fertile regions lost to Hungary, now has no other reason for existence than to serve as an eastern bastion for German influence. In Slovakia, long jealous of the Czechs, German influence has also become paramount since Munich. There the one-party system was established, the Hlinka Guards took over the uniform and technique of Nazi Storm Troopers and anti-Semitism was given official encouragement. In the Czech portions of the truncated republic, however, the spirit of Masaryk and Benes have continued to survive in a degree.

Czecho-Slovakia's struggle for survival has since Munich been difficult in the extreme. In view of the sober and determined manner in which the Czechs went about the business of adjusting themselves to the new situation, economically and politically, there can be no questioning their will to independence. But the odds against them have been tremendous. At every stage they have been hampered by pressures from without coupled by pressures from within.

The internal pressures have come very largely from Slovakia. The Slovaks soon discovered that there was a large and unpleasant fly in the ointment of autonomy. That fly was Bratislava's dependence on Prague for money. Never the richest part of the republic, Slovakia became poorer than ever after the loss of nearly 5,000 square miles of land to Hungary. On the other hand what was left of Czecho-Slovakia's industrial wealth remained for the most part in Bohemia.

Late last week the difficulties between Prague and Bratislava came to a head. Hearing of an impending Slovak stroke for actual independence, under the leadership of the Slovak premier, the national government acted with dispatch. The premier was forced out and with him the entire Bratislava government. There were no serious disturbances. But the ousted Slovak premier, like Henlein before him, has now fled to Germany, and was yesterday received in lengthy audience by Hitler. On the heels of this, report has it that Slovakia is to become an independent—that is, a vassal Nazi state.

It is not necessary for Germany to proceed to a further assimilation of Czecho-Slovakia, adding the Slovak portion of the republic to the areas she has already annexed. Such a venture would complicate the Third Reich's already grave financial and economic situation. But it is on the cards that there will at least be established at Bratislava a regime wholly willing to do Berlin's bidding, and capable of serving as a club to bring Prague in line. The effort of Czecho-Slovakia to preserve even a shadow of the independence that liberal republic once enjoyed may soon be ended.

Beyond State Authority

The New York Assembly recently passed a bill requiring imported articles sold within the State to be conspicuously marked to indicate the country of origin. The proposed legislation might at first glance appear to be merely superfluous, in view of the fact that such marking is already required under Federal law. The protest made to Gov. Lehman by Secretary Hull last week brings out some of the broader implications.

That the New York proposal was designed to serve ulterior ends is fairly obvious. As a device for handicapping the sale of articles from a particular country "conspicuous" marking might prove most effective. It is not, as Secretary Hull intimates, within the province of a State government to attempt boycotts of this nature. Where the procedure would probably lead can be visualized by imagining the confusion if some foreign country should retaliate by demanding that all our exports should be marked with the name of the State in which they originate.

Rapid multiplication of interstate barriers to shipment of goods already threatens to deprive us of the inestimable advantages of free-trade markets of Nation-wide extent. Concern over this development can only be intensified by State efforts to obstruct international trade.

Fortunately the Supreme Court recently handed down a decision which will undoubtedly have a restraining effect upon the States. It invalidated a Florida law imposing a heavy duty, disguised as an inspection fee, upon imported cement. In that case the Court swept aside the subterfuge by which the State sought to justify its attempt to regulate foreign commerce and held the act to be an unconstitutional assumption of power.

The bearing of this decision upon the constitutionality of marking laws that might be used by a State to obstruct the entry of foreign goods into the country is obvious. Coupled with Secretary Hull's warning, it should insure defeat of the New York marking bill. If the underlying idea is to facilitate popular boycotts Federal, not State, legislation must be the medium of action.

Peace Comes First

When the Senate Committee on Labor meets in executive session this morning it will doubtless accede to the stated desire of its chairman, Senator Thomas, for a postponement of the hearings on proposed amendments to the Labor Relations Act.

It was after these hearings were scheduled that the President urged the appointment of representative committees from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., to negotiate a constructive peace between the two embittered labor factions. These committees have now been appointed and are in conference in New York. The difficulties confronting their negotiations are formidable. But the desirability of a successful outcome is a matter of Nation-wide concern.

Continued warfare between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. means much more than a weakened labor movement. It means, additionally, an unstable and disorganized labor movement, characterized by irresponsible leadership, indulging in unauthorized and destructive strikes, impeding the forces of recovery at a time when their smooth operation is of vital importance to all.

On no issue has dissension between the two labor factions been more pronounced than on the functioning of the Labor Relations Act. Designed on the assumption of a unified trade union movement, the working of this act, and that of the board which it established, has been damaged at every turn by the hostility between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. Naturally the legislation has operated to favor now one, now the other, of these factions. Because of the consequent recriminations the Wagner Act has had less than a fair chance to prove its worth.

If there were no cleavage in the ranks of labor this act would undoubtedly still be in need of amendment. But to make rational changes under the present circumstances is impossible. One line of revision is desirable if organized labor unites its forces and another will be necsary if the split continues. Indeed there is ground for arguing that without a merger between C. I. O. and A. F. of L. it would be well to repeal the Labor Relations Act in its entirety.

Obviously, therefore, no good can come out of opening the projected hearings until the upshot of the peace negotiations between the two factions is known, or at least clearly foreshadowed. At this moment, indeed, the hearings can only serve to stimulate irritation, on one side or the other, and thereby render a satisfactory compromise even more difficult to achieve.

Senator Thomas has acted wisely in suggesting postponement of the scheduled hearings. The burden of proving their desirability at this time will weigh very heavily on any Senator who opposes the chairman's sensible lead.

The more things you don't do that you want to do the longer you'll live not to enjoy not doing them.

It is the rule that you land in a hole when you jump at a conclusion.

Pioneer Porkers

From the Atlanta Journal

Surely the historians of dear old Georgia should bow their heads in shame. It appears a most important event—indeed, one of the great moments of the State's illustrious past—has escaped their scrutiny.

We refer to that heroic trek that a band of valiant pigs made across the State just 400 years ago. Nowhere in the old school history books is this event recorded. And certainly there is no reference to the fact that one of these pigs gave his life that Georgia might have the distinction of serving the first pork feast ever eaten in the continental area of the United States.

It is to the Institute of American Meat Packers that credit must be given for unearthing this epic story. In an account of De Soto's tragic travels over the Southern States, the Institute conjures up an amazing picture—De Soto's soldiers and the horde of squealing pigs plodding across the North Georgia mountains: "First came the armored cavalry in its glittering splendor; behind limped the infantry, sore alike from battles and blisters; while somewhere between or around the two scampered a squealing, reluctant treasure of pork—the rapidly multiplying herd of hogs—and its herders. And from the hill-tops and forests along the way peered savage eyes that never before had beheld pigs or firearms.

"Sometimes the party was well fed by the Indians; sometimes it was half-starved, one such occasion, seemingly somewhere in Georgia, finally compelling apparently the first dressing and serving of pork in the present continental area of the United States (1540). Even then, however, each man was allowed only half a pound of meat per day to sustain him until more grains, nuts and roots were found, for in general the reserve of pork was still being saved for the colony that De Soto hoped eventually to found."

Maybe the Society for the Preservation of Pigs' Place in History should look into this.

The Coopers of Camden

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Warner Olivier, in his sketch of Camden, N. J., in the series entitled "Cities of America," in a recent issue of The Post, mentioned the family of Cooper as the quondam proprietors of Camden.

For the benefit of your readers who may not be familiar with the history of colonial New Jersey, it should be pointed out that the Coopers belonged to one of the truly great families of the State. The progenitor of the house, William Cooper, who settled at Pyne Poynte (Camden) in 1681, was a judge, legislator and stanch Quaker minister, who exercised tremendous influence in provincial affairs. His grandson, Joseph, jr., was for 19 years (1730-1749) a member of the Legislature and the powerful Council of Proprietors of West Jersey. Another descendant, John Cooper, rendered distinguished service in the provincial Congress and the Senate and was elected a member of the Continental Congress, which honor, however, he declined. In his later years he was president judge of the court of common pleas of Gloucester County.

As one walks through the streets of Camden one is continually confronted by the spirits of the Coopers. Cooper street, Cooper Hospital, Cooper Library, Pyne Poynte Park (named after the original Cooper estate), these and many other sights of the city remind one of the achievements of the family. The Camden County Historical Society is housed in the old Cooper mansion, Pomona Hall, erected in 1709 by Joseph Cooper, sr. The original city of Camden was laid out by Jacob Cooper just prior to the Revolution, and by him named in honor of Lord Camden, one of America's champions in the British Parliament!

Some day, perhaps, a history will be written that will adequately portray the true greatness of this eminent family.

Motorists' Responsibility

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Pedestrian control can hardly become effective in Washington unless better control is exercised over the drivers who endanger pedestrians crossing the street in accordance with traffic regulations. No pedestrian can feel that his own strict observance of traffic signals will make street crossing safe for him as long as motorists continue to disregard, in the most flagrant manner, the regulation that "the pedestrian has the right of way when already in the crosswalk."

As the pedestrian is not safe at a light-controlled corner, when crossing on the green light, as he is supposed to do, he has very little incentive to try by his own actions to increase his own safety. As a matter of fact, it is often safer for him to cross in the middle of the block or against the traffic light when the intersection is relatively clear of traffic, than to try to observe the regulations.

The installation of three-way lights at more of the crowded intersections, so that cars making right hand turns will not completely ruin the pedestrian's chances of crossing when his light is red; the installation of lights or traffic officers in the crowded area near the two Interior Buildings, and the insistence that motorists observe the simple rights of the pedestrian when he is in the crosswalk before the light changes in favor of the driver, if there is a light, or before the car enters the crosswalk if there is no light—these things, together with conscientious pedestrian control by pedestrians themselves, might stand a chance of increasing traffic safety in the District. KATE C. HALL.
Washington, March 9.

Railway And Motor Competition

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is an urgent need today for remedial legislation with reference to the transportation problem, if unrestrained competition is not to eliminate entirely the railroad as the more stable and indispensable form of public carrier. The railroads have been subjected to unfair competition with the motor carriers in the matter of taxation. This might be remedied to some extent by lowering the taxes on the railroads, but the financial condition of the country is such that this is not feasible. The only other alternative then, is to increase the taxes on the motor carriers to that point where the rate is more in line with that now paid by the railroads. At the present time the railroads are paying more than 9 cents out of each revenue dollar for taxes contrasted with 4½ cents paid by the motor carriers.

Another instance of discrimination between the two modes of transportation is seen in the matter of roadways. The railroads own, maintain and pay taxes upon their rights of way, while the motor carriers use the public highways for their commercial traffic. The 4½ cents of tax now paid is inadequate to meet the expense of the wider and heavy pavement strength highways that are necessary when vehicles of the motor carriers are users of the public roads. It seems only fair and just both to the public and the railroads that the added expense of construction and maintenance of super highways be borne by the motor carriers. This in turn would mean an increase of their rates and bring about a fairer basis of competition between the railroad and the motor carrier.

Further unjust discrimination against the railroads in favor of the motor carriers is seen in the matter of grade crossing eliminations. A number of States require that the railroads bear the entire expense of these grade crossing removals. The railroads receive the least amount of benefit in this improvement, while the motor carrier receives the principal advantage from this betterment. Legislation relieving the railroads of this type of expense would tend to equalize the factors of competition.

The destructive competition that too often is found to exist on the part of the motor carrier against the railroad is a matter of prime importance for the Interstate Commerce Commission, with its quasi-judicial functions. Unless something of this kind receives the necessary consideration, there appears no escape from the conclusion that even in the not too distant future the passing of the railroads as privately owned institutions cannot be avoided. The railroads are a vital backbone in our transportation system and it is urged that steps be taken to continue them on a fair economic basis with their competitors.

Washingtoniana

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been most interested in the letters appearing in your newspaper regarding the removal of the body of George Washington from its first resting place to its present shrine.

Some years ago I spent the summer at a Colonial home, the owner a descendant of one of the officers of Washington's staff during the Revolutionary War. This man has many precious Colonial antiques, among them a hermetically sealed box containing a lock of Washington's hair cut from his head when the coffin was opened. The writing upon the box is of the type of that period. The history authenticating the relic tells how the lock of hair was given to the ancestor of its present owner, and, as I recollect, the boy mentioned by your correspondent is referred to in this history. The hair and writing, in perfect condition, can be seen through an inserted piece of glass.

Many other precious things are owned by this gentleman—letters, a traveling liquor kit (a leather case containing six bottles) owned by the staff officer, a letter from President Jefferson inviting him to dinner, and other letters from great men; also a perfect Muhlenberg (the fighting preacher) original pitcher bearing a number. One hundred of these pitchers were made at the time of Washington's death (each bearing a number) to commemorate his deeds, and were given to his most intimate friends. I understand that the whereabouts of but two others are now known—one at Mount Vernon and the other, I believe, in the Metropolitan Museum, New York. Another relic is a hand-drawn ink map of the Battlefield of Saratoga, made at the time of the battle, and showing the positions of the contending foes.

Relief For Aliens

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to your editorial "Aliens on Relief" in The Post of March 5, may I suggest that you miss the whole point? The honey pot attracts bees just like molasses draws flies and a magnet makes iron filings fly to it.

Donora, Pa., a small town of 13,500, is about to naturalize 916 foreigners. Getting on relief, getting old-age benefits, social security and the like are the very "legislative pressure" you denounce that is brought to "bear on aliens to induce them to become citizens."

Unquestionably we have more alien job hunters and relief seekers than is good for the millions of our own unemployed and destitute. Charity should begin at home. To put aliens on relief, on old-age pensions and the like will induce them to "immigrate" here by the millions again. Last year 252,697 aliens of all classes entered the United States legally. Undoubtedly putting them on relief and such advertisements as "ham and eggs" for every one in California and Townsends' $200 per month were great factors.

Presidential Motives

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Administration's tactical offensive against the reactionary press has caused many of the commentators to cavort a la jitterbug.

Mr. Sullivan says that back of the Administration's wish for recovery there is the political motive that it would help Mr. Roosevelt to keep a grip on the Democratic Party.

And Mr. Lippmann's uncanny divination of motives: The theory behind the President's present policy is that the popular following of the New Deal can be held in line by keeping in the key positions men like Mr. Hopkins, "whose New Deal sympathies are well known. There is, in fact, no place else for the New Deal following to go." Do tell!

Umbrella's Apotheosis

JONAS HANWAY, now virtually forgotten, was a Londoner of some little importance in his day. Something of an eighteenth century New Dealer, Jonas was a prison reformer and the implacable foe of the employment of children as chimney sweeps.

Upon neither of these radical stances, however, is Jonas' bid for immortality founded. Other men before and after him have marched in the crusade for prison reform. Doubtless, too, there has been a sprinkling of kindly souls down the ages to whom the thought of children engaged in the lung blackening occupation has been painful. Such fame as abides with the name of Jonas Hanway rests upon a surer and a firmer foundation.

Jonas Hanway was the first Englishman publicly and habitually to carry an umbrella. This fact stamps Jonas Hanway as a man of forceful courage and establishes his fame upon a pedestal which, though small, will yet endure. If he did not live to see the glorification of the umbrella as an instrument of diplomacy, he nevertheless lived to enjoy his victory over the hackney-coachman, who in the early years delighted to greet him and his umbrella with the Cheapside cheer.

Victory of any kind over a cab driver is sweet and it must have been just as sweet in the eighteenth century. One cannot, of course, blame the poor cabbies for trying to hoot out of existence the strange and certainly unesthetic object in which they doubtless recognized a menace to their economic security. Probably, too, this guerrilla warfare of ill-tempered badinage was not wholly onesided. Mr. Hanway, from the coign of his spread protection, possibly was able to frame retorts courteous in which he disparaged an age all too easily recognizable to him (at least on rainy days) as of "horse and coach" vintage.

For all his victory over the cabbies, however, we who lived and read newspapers through those recent September days of Berchtesgaden and Munich know now that Jonas Hanway died a century and a half before the moment of his greatest triumph. History shapes itself into symmetric, if sometimes curious, patterns, and so it is that, in the historical Umbrella Pattern, Mr. Jonas Hanway stands at one end and Mr. Neville Chamberlain at the other.

As a feminine and regal accessory the parasol, of course, traces its lineage to antiquity. Sir Austen Henry Layard, the orientalist and archaeologist, tells us that "the parasol was generally carried over the king in times of peace, or on some occasion of war." On certain Assyrian bas-reliefs the king appears in regal shadow contrived by a piece of embroidered stuff. Ancient Egyptian art shows princesses lolling beneath parasols and in Persia the parasol is frequently found in the carved work of Persepolis. In all Eastern countries except China and Turkey the parasol was reserved exclusively for the great. In Ava, ancient capital of the Burman Empire, use of the parasol was the exclusive right of the king, who was ipsa corona brother to the Sun and Moon, cousin to the Stars, Lord of the Ebbing and Flowing Sea, King of All the White Elephants and Lord of the Twenty-four Parasols.

Certain investigators pretend to believe that the parasol is as old as the fig leaf itself. In fact, these scholars profess to believe that the origin of the parasol was in large leaves tied together to the branching extremities of a bough. And, whatever science may say about the matter, most of us derive a certain comfort from the thought that the leaves of ancient fig trees may have been very large leaves, even of a size commensurate with the needs of early man.

Though the word "umbrella" is derived from the Italian "ombrella," which in turn stems from the Latin "umbella," umbrellas as we know them do not appear to have been used by the Romans, though their theaters were protected by a velarium which could be drawn across the arena to ward off a sudden shower. But it was after the fall of Rome that the umbrella went up in Italy. There, certainly, it was known and used, perhaps not too happily, before the more northern and western countries had it.

The silence concerning any use of umbrellas by men by England's seventeenth century wits, to whose literary mills such foibles as fans and muffs were the veriest grist, would indicate that the umbrella in masculine hands was not a familiar object.

In a Dryden play we find the line, "I can carry your umbrella and fan, your ladyship." But Gay, addressing a gentleman, says:

"And when the bursting clouds a deluge pour,
Let thy surtout defend the gaping shower."

And again:

"... The true surtout alone
Be thine of kersey fine, though small the cost,
Then brave, unwet, the rain, unchilled, the frost."

And Swift in the Tatler, describing a city shower, alludes to the use of umbrellas by women:

"The tucked up sempstress walks with hasty strides,
While streams run down her oiled umbrella's sides."

The effeminacy of the umbrella a few years prior to its boldly habitual use by Jonas Hanway may be judged from an advertisement which appeared in the Female Tattler for December 12, 1709:

"The young gentleman borrowing the umbrella belonging to Will's Coffee House, in Cornhill, of the mistress, is hereby advertised, that, to be dry from head to foot on the like occasion, he shall be welcome to the maid's pattens."

But it was the umbrella which last year traveled to Berchtesgaden in the crook of the arm of the man of that breathless hour! Nothing which could ever happen in this world could rob the umbrella of that cosmic honor, of its now universal dignity.

The Daily Worker

SOME COPY DESKS have a rule against mention of the Daily Worker, the bacterium of the Stalin, or Moscow type of Nazi-Fascism. In such shops it is felt that good taste and decency forbid, and there is a reluctance to advertise an anti-American political malady. Similarly, it were evasive and squeamish to refer to the Daily Worker merely as the organ of the Stalin Nazi-Fascists in this country and waggish to call it the Daily Louse or the Moscow Beobachter, as it is also known. The subject is not one for waggery. Just as some things are too sacred for that, so others are too vile.

With this preamble, I refer to the recent expose of the Daily Worker's unguarded admission that opinion contrary to the Moscow editorial policy is excluded from its pages, even as paid advertisements, and its equally embarrassing request for ads from a chain grocery store which the Worker had denounced as robbers, preying on its readers.

It may be recalled that the Moscovites held carnival at the expense of certain American papers which had refused to accept libelous advertising copy for a certain book until the libel was corrected. This refusal was based on two grounds. First, the paper would have been financially responsible for the libel, and second, decent journalism avoids false and scurrilous remarks about the neighbors.

Ad Solicited, Then Rejected

THAT CONTRARY opinion is consistently suppressed in the free American press is the constant charge of the Moscovites in New York and Washington, and of the anti-American bunds of German and Italian Nazi-Fascists, too.

In this case, the Worker, unknown to its readers, solicited as a paid advertisement, a statement by the A. & P. stores of the arguments against the proposed law to abolish chain stores. The business was duly awarded to the Worker and was then rejected because it conflicted with the Worker's editorial views on chain stores. These views held chain stores to be robbers, exploiting and bleeding producer and consumer.

However, the letter of rejection said, the Worker was always "more than happy" to run the regular advertising of bargains in groceries, by which this robber victimized the people, and boasted of its ability to accelerate the robber's vicious exploitation of its readers.

This much was revealed in a recent number of these dispatches and the Daily Worker, confronted with its indiscreet, not to say treacherous, offer to lure victims to the robber's den, runs an editorial in which it attempts to push on a rope, something that cannot be done.

Concern Unable To State Its Case

THE REPLY is windy and most irrelevant to the expose. In pugilism, when a fighter is nailed on the chain and goes through fancy, but meaningless motions with his hands and feet, he is said to be "tiling in" or "using the ring." On the track, when a horse hasn't got the answer and begins to run in one place, they say he is climbing. Nobody knows better than I the same manifestations in a writer. And the comrade who wrote the Worker's reply was just using his typewriter when he tried to kiss off these revelations with reference to my tender little hands and the tears coursing down my cheeks.

There is more than a column of copy but the answer is a plea of guilty. For extenuations, the Worker can say only that, in its own editorial opinion, dictated, of course, by Moscow, the chain store statement of its case was a lie. By that rule, the Worker approves suppression of all conflicting opinion and conflicting news as well, remembering that, in Moscow, all news is opinionated.

If an editor disagrees with a statement, that statement is a lie from which he must protect his readers. If he can't answer an agrument, the argument is false and must be suppressed. Therefore, the chain store could not state its case to the worker.

As to the appeal for regular daily advertising revenue in return for betraying its customers to the bandit chain store, the Worker explains that it wouldn't destroy the chains, but regulate them. But, according to the Worker, the chains are robbers and the letter offered to help the robber rob its readers now, today, in return for advertising revenue.

Tunisian Tension

By Theodore Hall

Italy's Clamor Obscures Other Issues

THE TUNISIAN QUESTION is inextricably mixed up with larger issues of which the whole Mediterranean basin is the mise-en-scene. In addition there is also the native question in Tunsia, which again is part of a problem which extends in terms of geography from Iraq through Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Libya, Tunisia, Algeria to Morocco and Tangiers, and southeast into Arabia; in terms of race covers the Arab peoples, and in terms of religion the Moslem world.

At the moment the critical condition of the relations between France and Italy, a tension which reaches its maximum voltage in Tunisia, has driven into the background the question of the relations between France and the Arab-Berber populations in North Africa. Nevertheless of the two problems, the latter is likely to be the more enduring. It has receded into temporary obscurity only because the natives in Tunisia, having heard of, observed, and suitably exaggerated the fate of their blood-brethren and co-religionists in Libya, have reached the almost unanimous conclusion that the French devil they know is infinitely preferable to the Italian fiend whose methods of pacification in Libya have earned for the Fascist regime an appalling reputation in the Arab world.

Although the stories as to the behavior of the Italians toward the natives during the "pacification" of Libya have been handsomely exaggerated, it is unfortunately true that ample evidence exists of brutalities which are in no need of embroidery in order to merit the severest censure.

DURING THE SEPTEMBER CRISIS of 1938, the French authorities in North Africa were naturally anxious as to the attitude of the native populations in the event of a general war. Italian propaganda by wireless, in the press and through agents is increasing, and is supported somewhat clumsily from Berlin. It was obvious that in case of war the Italians would exert every effort to provoke a rising in North Africa.

There were special doubts in the minds of the French as to the attitude of the population in eastern Algeria, but as the crisis developed, the reports of the French agents bore witness to a growth of popular feeling against Italy, which was as surprising as it was gratifying to the administration. A special investigation was made in order to discover the cause of this phenomenon, and it was eventually traced to the fact that in this area there have settled some 5,000 natives who escaped from Libya at the time of the pacification. Their burning ambition is to be given an opportunity of killing Italians.

Futhermore, the manner in which the Italians dealt with the native question in Libya has created such a strong anti-Italian feeling amongst Arabs that for so long as Franco-Italian relations in North Africa are strained, the French are not likely to be seriously bothered by native agitation for home rule.

IN 1881 the French, acting on a hint from Bismarck that the Tunisian pear was ripe for plucking, established a protectorate over Tunisia which was then nominally part of the Ottoman Empire. Fifty years earlier the French had conquered Algeria. At the time of the establishment of the protectorate in Tunisia French rule in Algeria only extended over the coastal area and did not reach into Morocco, where a protectorate was established in 1902. Geographically, Tunisia is an extension of Algeria (the same remark applies to Morocco) and the security of Algeria would be fatally compromised if any hostile power were established in the areas to the east or west of Algeria.

In the 1880's it was known that Italy, recently unified and timidly placing one foot on that ladder of power politics on which great powers struggle for supremacy, to the detriment of the happiness of their peoples, was casting eyes at Tunisia, where 20,000 Italians were already in residence.

France jumped in first, and began to develop the country. This caused the influx of a large number of Italian workmen. In 1896, the status of the Italians in Tunisia was established on the basis of equality with the French and Tunisians. The French denounced this treaty in 1918, but it was agreed that it should remain in force at three months' notice, pending the conclusion of a new arrangement.

In 1935 M. Laval paid a visit to Rome and drew up a new arrangement with Signor Mussolini in which the Italians received certain minor territorial concessions on the Libyan-Tunisian frontier, and a small island in the Red Sea near Aden. In return for their territorial gains and other concessions the Italians agreed to abandon over a period of years their special, almost extra-territorial privileges in Tunisia. This agreement was never ratified, and was denounced by Il Duce in 1938, when the Italian deputies and press shouted for Tunis, Nice and Corsica.

THE ITALIANS declare that in 1935 M. Laval agreed not to interfere with Signor Mussolini in the conquest of Abyssinia, for which he was then making extensive preparations, and that when a few months later the French joined in sanctions against Italy, they thereby broke the agreement.

The French have never admitted that in 1935 they agreed in advance to sell Abyssinia in return for Italian concessions in Tunisia, and the exact meaning to be attached to them must remain a speculation.

That M. Laval was aware of Italy's ambitions in Ethiopia, and left Signor Mussolini with at the very least an impression that France would not interfere is, according to my information, a certainty.

Technically, therefore, the status of the 100,000 Italians in Tunisia is regulated by the treaty of 1896, and they complain that their rights are continually being sabotaged by the French authorities. There is some truth in this, but the French point out that since the Italian authorities are using their privileged position in order to create a state within a state it is impossible to avoid counter measures.

ONE MAY sum up the matter by saying that if the Italians should be willing to consider the Tunisian question as a local matter it could be solved tomorrow. But if they are after the bigger game of recreating the Roman Empire in North Africa, the Tunisian question will probably be the spark which causes the explosion. The world is waiting to hear Mussolini's choice, and upon the nature of that choice depends to a large extent the prospect of peace.

New Bill Forces Deputy Marshals Into Civil Service

A bill to force United States deputy marshals into the civil service was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman Ashurst, of the Judiciary Committee, upon request of Attorney General Murphy.

The recent Warring case exposures spurred its introduction. The bill would require all new appointees to come from civil service eligibility lists and would compel incumbent deputies to pass noncompetitive examinations and enter the civil service within 90 days.

Wallis' First Husband Ordered Retired by Navy

Commander Earl W. Spencer, jr., first husband of the Duchess of Windsor, received orders from the Navy yesterday retiring him from active service.

The young lieutenant who married Wallis Warfield, Baltimore belle, more than 20 years ago, was detached from duty at San Francisco and ordered to treatment at the Mare Island Naval Hospital, pending his retirement this June. On and off the sick list for several years, Spencer was passed over for promotion to captain the last two years, and under naval procedure must retire.

Divorced in 1927 from the woman for whom King Edward VIII of England gave up his throne, Commander Spencer was married in 1937, his third attempt, to the widow of a wealthy Detroit manufacturer, Mrs. Norma Reese Johnson.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Golden Key

AS A contribution to the peace of the world and to general recovery the agreement just made with Brazil has great importance. It inaugurates what may fairly be described as a positive and constructive phase of American foreign policy.

Up to this point we have had moral exhortation and moral judgment. They were necessary. They have helped to keep alive in the minds of men the elementary principles of law and justice and decency. We have had a program of rearmament. It is essential. It has made clear to the world that in the regions where we are concerned, these principles are not pious sentiments but effective convictions. We have had Mr. Hull's trade agreements. They have been useful in promoting some trade; they have been even more useful in preserving the theory and the practice of normal and peaceable commerce. We have had the declarations and the demonstrations of the good-neighbor policy toward Latin America. They have done much to persuade the peoples of this hemisphere that the United States genuinely desires in its own national interest that they should remain independent self-governing republics.

Key Can Unlock Numerous Doors

BUT THIS Brazilian agreement, which has grown out of negotiations between Dr. Aranha and Mr. Hull, is in principle the most constructive measure that has yet been taken to restore peace and prosperity in the world. For here at last we are using the key which can unlock so many of the doors that are now closed against an economic revival.

That key is the stupendous horde of gold we have been accumulating only to bury it in the vaults of the United States. Out of 26 billion dollars worth of monetary gold in the whole world, more than half, over 14 billions, are in the United States. The fact that this gold has poured into the United States and has been buried in the ground has been both the result of and a cause of the closing of the doors to normal trade. With this gold much can be done to open those same doors.

Not Much Of Gold Was Mined in U. S.

IN ORDER to appreciate the importance of the Brazilian agreement we must see in its simplest form what has happened to bring to the United States more than half the gold of the world. For not much of that gold was mined in the United States. The gold has come here because we have bought it.

Some of it we have bought because we offer $35 an ounce to any one who will sell us gold. But more of it we have bought by giving foreigners automobiles and cotton and tobacco and other goods that we export. Unable or unwilling to exchange our products for their ordinary products, we have been willing to exchange our products for one special product, namely their gold.

14 Billions Earn Nothing For Nation

SO WE POSSESS fourteen billion dollars worth of a metal that everybody would be glad to have but that nobody is able to touch. This gold will not buy anything anywhere. It is the greatest single supply of universal purchasing power in existence, and at considerable expense to ourselves we have buried it carefully and made it totally useless. This is an absurdity. If there is nothing produced anywhere in the world that we wish to buy with it, or with any substantial part of it, then the only sane thing to do is to lend it to someone who will buy something with it, and make a profit, and repay us with interest.

A man who stuffs his savings in the mattress of his bed or buries it in the backyard is known not as a business man but as a miser. And a nation which buries its surplus savings, for that is just what this gold is, so that its savings earn nothing for the nation, is doing the same thing, however much the reality may be disguised by technical words about gold reserves and what not.

Concrete Measure To Revive Trade

BECAUSE THE Brazilian agreement signifies our realization that the gold has some function beside that of being buried in Kentucky, it is an event which will have favorable effects all over the world. For it demonstrates that we have passed from preaching about the revival of trade to concrete measures which will in fact revive trade.

We have started with Brazil because we have such friendly relations with Brazil that this was the best opportunity to enter upon a new and initially difficult undertaking. But now that Dr. Aranha and Mr. Hull have shown how the operation can be done there is a practical precedent for extending it to other countries, the technical details of the agreement need not concern us here. The thing that matters is the fact that we have begun to use a little part of an inert and hitherto useless horde of gold as a loan to enable Brazil to reconstruct a normal financial system and to restore normal commercial practices. If any one can think of a better use for our gold than that, it would be interesting to know what it is.

Likely To Affect German Business

THIS IS the real value of the agreement, that it inaugurates a movement to revive world trade by normal methods rather than by the highly artificial methods which are now so widely practiced. It would be a gross misinterpretation of this agreement, therefore, to say that we are using our gold to wage economic war against Germany in South America.

For this thing would be desirable and necessary if Germany were not in the grip of the Nazis. No doubt it will make Nazi trading methods less successful. No doubt it will make less effective Nazi political agitation in Brazil. But it will accomplish these results by methods that a German like Dr. Schacht, for example, would have to regard as wholly legitimate and entirely orthodox.

Remedy Must Not Create Disorder

NO DOUBT the restoration of normal commerce between Brazil and the United States, and also between Brazil and the other free nations, will handicap the abnormal commerce of the totalitarian states. But there is only one remedy for that. The remedy is not to leave the world in disorder. The remedy is not to imitate the abnormal trade methods of the Nazis. The remedy is for Germans to restore in Germany the capacity to take part in normal commerce.

When they have done that, they will be able to benefit, along with the rest of us, from a genuine revival of world trade.

3. By whom were you employed? Give name of employer and divide by 4 if single. Divide by 5 if double. If playing for double or nothing, see Paragraph 5, Section K.)

4. State nature of your business, unless working your way through college by selling magazines. (See footnote on page 7 with respect to rules covering the balk, the passed ball and stealing second with the bases full. Do not talk to the motorman.)

5. If a salaried man, state the total sum of your income during the last fiscal year. (See Item 5, Section W, Compartment B. And ask for Mrs. Whimsey.)

II.

1. Give your full name as of January 1st. (This seems to be a duplication of a previous question. All right; wanna make anything out of it? If so, see Item 7, Article II, first door to the left at end of hall.)

2. If you were in business during any part of 1938, state how. (This goes for 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936 and 1937, except in cases where 1937 was missing.)

3. If not in business and not on a salary, give income from slot machines, pinboards, raffles, dice and Irish sweepstakes, as of Section VIII, page 2, except on Mondays and Fridays and July 4, September 6 and December 25 . . . .

4. If you won any part of an Irish sweepstakes in 1938, state what you did with the dough and try to reconcile it with what you said in the newsreels. (If you did not talk in a newsreel, deduct 10 per cent and try two no trumps.)

5. List your donations to charities, you liar! State whether this was in cash, tokens, notes or telephone pledges.)

III.

1. List your losses by fire. (If caused by mice and matches, the Government will call for the mice but will not be responsible for matches.)

2. If you have got this far, take time out for an aspirin tablet. It's funny, but I keep thinking I've seen your face somewhere before, minus whatever was deducted in Item 5.)

3. What were your losses by storm during the last fiscal year and couldn't you have had the hat reblocked for 25 cents instead of buying a new one for $16.50? (Note.—Stops at Bridgeport only to take on baggage. No dogs allowed unless in container, plus 2 per cent, minus interest. And I still keep thinking I've seen you some place. Were you ever in Section 18, Paragraph 9?)

4. Add whatever you have said above, deduct $2,500 if living with noisy steam pipes, and in giving the result state whether you crush the lump sugar before adding the bitters or drop them on the lump before crushing. (No matter what you say, I've met you some place. Were you on the Paragraph 4 during the winter cruise to Item 11?)

5. How do you feel? Impossible. Lemme see your tongue.

IV.

1. Are you still pitching, or has somebody gone in for you? If so, state difference in weight, plus 5 per cent unless living with parents. And stop wobbling.

2. What is the largest river in Brazil? What have Shakespeare, Babe Ruth, One-Eyed Connolly and Grover Whalen in common? Who wrote the lines, "Oh to be in England, now that there's a gas mask for every inhabitant?" (Note: Can we help it if a few questions creep in from some other quiz? See Item 9, Section 43, and ring top bell.)

3. One of us is mistaken. (Let's both see Item 5, Paragraph 3, Section II. But it won't do much good. They keep changing those football rules every few days.)

4. Is there a doctor in the house? You must need him by this time. (See Paragraph 7, Section 6, Alley 8, phone Dewey 5-6758. And we still think we saw you some place before. You were with a fellow named Surtax.)

New Wallace Experiment

By Mark Sullivan

Intricate Plan

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has announced a new experiment, very new, very novel and perhaps portentous. It is to be tried in five or six cities. If it works, it will be adopted everywhere.

The plan is intricate. To understand it, consider an example of the plan in operation. Begin with a WPA worker who has a family and gets $60 a month from WPA. To this worker the Administration will say, in effect:

"Out of your $60 a month, you ought to spend $16 for food. Now, instead of $60 in cash, we propose to give you $44 in cash and $16 in orange-colored stamps. These orange-colored stamps are for the purpose of buying food, the same as cash. We have arranged with grocers to accept these orange stamps as cash."

The new plan is not compulsory, the WPA worker can take it or leave it. But the Administration offers him an inducement, a valuable inducement. The Administration says, in effect, "in addition to the $16 in orange stamps, we will give you, free gratis, $8 in blue stamps." These blue stamps are a pure gift. They are, in effect, a raise in the WPA worker's pay, from $60 to $68.

The WPA worker now goes to the grocery store. He buys $16 worth of food. He pays for the food with his $16 in orange stamps.

The WPA worker pulls out his $8 in blue stamps. He now selects $8 worth of food, in addition to the $16 worth he already has bought with his orange stamps. For the additional $8 worth of food, the grocer accepts the $8 in blue stamps as full payment. The grocer can deposit the stamps in bank, the same as cash. The United States Treasury redeems them.

Fallacy Appears In The Proposal

ON THE WPA worker and his stamps there is a limitation. With his stamps he must buy food. He cannot, for example, buy candy or liquor or soft drinks.

What is it all about? A theory is that the plan will result in more food being eaten. The theory is that the gift of $8 worth of free food, as a bonus for $16 worth actually bought, will cause the WPA worker's family to eat $24 worth of food instead of $16 worth.

In this theory there is probably a fallacy. The fallacy lies in assuming that a WPA worker earning $60 a week now pays only $16 for his family's food. Actually, in most cases probably, he already buys more than $16 worth of food. Under the new plan, the WPA worker's family will probably continue to consume about the same amount of food as before. But since he now gets $8 worth of food free, he will be able to spend $8 (out of the $44 cash he receives) on anything else he needs, clothing or what not.

Granted the desirability of the WPA worker and his family consuming more food, if it works out that way, why all the intricate machinery, the orange stamps and the blue stamps and the red tape? Why not just give the food to the workers?

That has been tried. At the present time, the Administration buys large amounts of surplus food from farmers, about $50,000,000 worth a year. This surplus food the Administration gives to persons on relief—gives it to them direct, as an outright gift, with no machinery of stamps or red tape or strings.

Congress Provided Blanket Powers

THIS EXISTING system of direct giving is regarded as too hit-or-miss. Carloads of food are sent into communities which do not need so much. It is thought the food will be better distributed if it is routed through the regular channels of food dealers and growers. The new method is merely the old method with the food dealers participating. The food dealers will give a service and will receive a normal profit on what they handle. Presumably this will remove an objection which food dealers have had to the Government distributing food direct.

To the farmers the new method will be as acceptable as the old one. The Administration will continue to buy up surplus crops and thus keep prices up. One purpose of the new method, as of the old one, is to buy up surplus crops which farmers cannot otherwise sell except at a ruinous price, or which might go to waste.

To the WPA workers as to others on relief, the new method will be acceptable because it is, in effect, a material addition to their pay. True, persons on relief already received gifts of food additional to their pay. But the old plan was an unorganized, hit-or-miss system. By the new system the WPA workers can get an organized, assured addition to their pay, in the shape of blue stamps calling for food. In the case of a WPA worker getting $60, the addition will amount to $8.

But what an enormous and intricate machine is being built up—how at once cumbersome and complex and ingenious. The system here described would hardly have been enacted by Congress. But Congress gave blanket powers to the bureaus affected. And the bureaus are building up an economic system of their own, unrelated to the normal economic system, a country within a country.

Twice Divided

The Plight Of Czecho-Slovakia

POLAND SUFFERED three partitions and with the third ceased being an independent nation for a good deal more than a century. Will Czecho-Slovakia suffer a similar fate?

In Berlin they are brewing another bitter mess for Czecho-Slovakia to swallow. What its ingredients will be is not yet clear. Another territorial partition along the lines of the Munich settlement is unlikely. With the annexation of the Sudetenland Germany acquired three-quarters of a million Czechs and Slovaks. The addition of Slovakia would add little to the Third Reich's economic resources and add almost 2,500,000 individuals to the Slav element already within her borders. Nor would it be in line with Germany's interest to permit Slovakia to join Hungary, of which it formed a part in prewar days.

What then does Czecho-Slovakia have to fear? The answer is that it faces a possibility fully as unpleasant as another partition, namely, the destruction of the little that is left of its independence.

THE CZECHS are a tough people. They have proved it by surviving as long as they have and under such adverse circumstances. They have proved it again by the remarkable manner in which they have gone about rebuilding their shattered state after the Munich explosion.

That was a blow that would have broken the spirit of many a nation. Because of Munich and its aftermath, Czecho-Slovakia lost close to 5,000,000 people, of whom well over a million are Czechs and Slovaks; a third of her territory; all of her graphite and zinc; 97 per cent of her lignite; 76 per cent of her china clay; nearly 55 per cent of her coal; a host of valuable factories, miles of trackage, her elaborate system of fortifications, some of her richest agricultural lands and much else.

But the day of destruction of the old republic had not ended when the day of reconstruction began.

UNHAPPILY, the partition imposed from without was accompanied by a division produced from within. For years Slovakia, the more backward part of the republic, had been the scene of an autonomist movement headed by the late Father Hlinka. It was more embarrassing than serious and even in 1938, when the centrifugal forces within Czecho-Slovakia were, as a result of German pressure, very great indeed, the Slovak autonomists secured only around 33 per cent of the vote in the local elections.

Munich provided the opportunity for this element. In October Slovakia became fully autonomous, as did Ruthenia and under a government which was anti-democratic, anti-Semitic and pro-Nazi.

The Prague government did not try to interfere. There was so much else to be done that the antics of the Slovak politicians acting like gauleiters could temporarily be ignored. But while Slovakia transformed itself into something resembling the image of the Third Reich, the Czech portions of the republic, even under the extremely conservative leadership that succeeded to power after Munich, sought to preserve something of the great tradition of liberalism and democracy bequeathed to them by Masaryk and Benes.

They did not and could not take an anti-German line nor did they want to. They realized that Czecho-Slovakia was now wholly dependent on German good will and forbearance for the maintenance of a state of even quasi-independence. But the excessive demands made by the Nazis and the way they sought to treat Czecho-Slovakia as a crown colony aroused a considerable measure of passive resistance.

FOR INSTANCE, there was the question of anti-Semitic legislation. In his first statement on taking office, Premier Beran said: "The attitude of our state to those Jews who have long been settled on the soil of the republic and who show a due regard to the needs of the republic and its peoples will not be a hostile one."

Then there was the question of the German minority still left in the republic. It was apparent from the first that the Berlin government wanted them to stay there, to serve as Nazi agents. And there has been persistent pressure on Prague that these Germans be given extraterritorial status, in other words, that they be subject to German law and tried by German judges if they fell afoul of that law. All in all, German policy has been to keep Czecho-Slovakia nominally independent only so as to save the cost and headaches of ruling an alien people but to get all the advantages of having Czecho-Slovakia tied to the Third Reich's apron strings. In Slovakia no such moderation was displayed.

THE SHOW of independence displayed by the Czechs has displeased Berlin. It has also displeased the more radical Slovak autonomists who have been only too willing to play the Nazi game.

Slovakia, under the new arrangement, enjoyed full autonomy in all matters except foreign affairs, defense and finance. But it is not a self-supporting region. The bulk of the revenue needed by the republic and its constituent parts comes from the Bohemia-Moravia region. Prague, therefore, had a club it could wield over the head of the Bratislava government in the event that Slovakia became too obstreperous.

Until recently it had not chosen to do so. The other day, for instance, an equable financial arrangement was made between the Prague and Bratislava governments with the national regime agreeing to advance a credit of $26,000,000 to Slovakia. But that was not enough to suit the more extreme Slovak autonomists, among them Premier Tiso.

LAST WEEK Prague got wind of the fact that the Tiso government at Bratislava was planning to proclaim Slovakia's independence. If honestly intended the plan is childish, even though, with Hitler's assistance, some such plan goes through. It is an open question whether Czecho-Slovakia as a whole will prove an economically viable state; there is not the slightest possibility that Slovakia can exist alone. There is a strong suspicion, therefore, that the independence move was originally designed to be used as a weapon to browbeat Prague into far-reaching concessions.

As it happened, Prague moved quickly and put down the rebels before they got very far with their plans. Since the several extremists have had to show their hands they appealed to Hitler to intercede for them in Prague. If he does it is doubtful if Prague will resist. And if he succeeds again in imposing his will on the harassed and truncated republic there is every reason to believe he will do so repeatedly.

Many people have argued that the peace of Versailles was a vicious peace. The peace of Munich has proved worse. And the Nazis have shown far less magnanimity toward the beaten foe than did the allies toward the Weimar republic.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Modern Mother Approves 'Mr. Confused;' Says Her Daughters Appreciate Men Like Him

THIS DEPARTMENT is in receipt of a heavy mail occasioned by three letters published here last week—all having to do with some aspect of courtship. There was the letter of March 7 from "Three Bachelors," who can't find girls they would marry; "Modern Girl's" witty retort, of March 10, and an appeal for guidance, on March 8, from "Mr. Confused," whose friends look upon him "as something of a freak," because he eschews casual amours. He wants to know "what the modern girl expects of her boy friends." Readers tell him, while assorted men plea dfor "Modern Girl's" favor. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Long a daily reader of your column, I am now writing you for the first time to urge "Mr. Confused" (your correspondent of March 8) to stick to his high ideals. My two daughters have been raised with the same code. Both are considered unusually attractive. The older girl had few dates in high school, but enjoyed the friendship of a group of lovely girls.

I told her she was too mature for boys of her own age (during the years she was in high school), but that I felt sure when she reached college she would meet boys who would appreciate her qualities. To my delight (and hers) this has proved true. Now a student at a large co-educational college, she has found congenial friends and is having a good time. Boys who do not meet her code are dropped, and there are plenty to take their place.

The younger daughter, still in high school, has the sort of personality that one would think would make for exceeding popularity. But, as she said to me the other day: "Mother, although I have dates you will notice that I am seldom dated the second time by the same boy." Her refusal to "pet" results in many quiet evenings at home with the family, while other less attractive girls are dashing from date to date.

Seeking an explanation of the modern boy-and-girl relationship, which has both boys and girls confused, I wonder if the trouble doesn't start with the fact that the girls mature at least two years earlier than the average boy, and are, therefore, interested in boys and eager for their companionship before the normal boy has any interest in them? The only boys eager for dates are those more precocious, more sophisticated, and hence less desirable. Both my daughters have commented on the fact that many of the nicest boys in high school do not "date" at all—or, at least, not before the end of the senior year. And as the younger girl says: "What are nice girls to do? Just sit around home knitting, waiting for them to grow up? That's what I'm doing, but it gets mighty tiresome at times."

Some girls of less stamina and courage, deprived of adequate parental guidance and understanding, do give in—though often reluctantly, I am convinced. To many of these, and to all those others who are longing to meet their kind, it must be encouraging to know that there are boys like "Mr. Confused." Although he may not wish to consider himself in the light of a crusader, I, as a spokesman for many mothers, beg him to keep to the path he has chosen.

MOTHER OF GIRLS.

Girls Like Chivalry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I add just a few words of encouragement to "Mr. Confused?" Speaking as a young girl just out of the teen age (and I'm sure I speak for many other young girls, too), I would like to assure him that his ideals are of the kind that most of us admire in men. Nor do we consider him a freak. Those other fellows who have been looking down on him with patronizing amusement are the real freaks, in our opinion.

Sin likes company, and realizing their own frailty, these fellows are eager to pull him down to their level of behavior. If he could only understand how much more attractive to girls he is, as a result of having high ideals, he would look at life in a different light, and would see his critics (and not himself) as the real objects of pity . . . So, "Mr. Confused," don't hide your light under a bushel, but give some lucky girl a break. Sincerely,

GIRL OF 20.

"Modern Girl" Clicks

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: There must be a catch somewhere. Surely, Miss Haworth, it's a delusion and a snare. There just can't be in Washington, unloved and unescorted, such a bundle of feminine loveliness, pep and personality as that "old-fashioned modern girl" whose letter you published March 10. If it is really true, then—judging from the assortment with which I have been acquainted—she is certainly an exception.

Most of the women working for the Government are a mess. Evidently those with sense either stay at home or go back to the old home town before they are caught in the Government rut. Washington is recognized elsewhere as a provincial town, but to the country lassies fresh from the farm, it probably seems like heaven; and they just can't seem to lose those country ideas.

Practically all the bachelors I know are not such from choice, I'm sure, but only because the pickings in Washington are so discouragingly slim for anyone past the puppy-love and collegiate ages. Take the men between the ages of 29 to 37, with good professional salaries, and see what they have to drag around when they want someone to date! Come on, Miss Haworth, be a good sport and pass along the telephone number of this unusual creature, and I'll guarantee she'll be lonesome no longer. Yours sincerely,

MORTIMER SNURD 2d.

Suspicious Omission

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Modern Girl" is very interesting. Inasmuch as I have arrived "at the ripe old age of 26," and do not know where the girl of my dreams is located, I should like very much to meet this young lady. But—there is one outstanding omission in her letter which gives me pause. To wit: the young lady does not reveal her weight. Could this be her undoing? . . . With best wishes, I am, sincerely yours. C. H.

Finds Most Girls Silly

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man of 25, have a fair education, acceptable manners and a character that many will vouch for . . . I don't say that all girls, from 16 to 20, are silly; but I will say that 90 per cent of them are thus afflicted. Girls should try to be more sedate. No man likes a girl who giggles all evening and dotes on being the center of attention . . . I am particularly interested in the ideas advanced by "Modern Girl." I would give anything to know her. I will appreciate it if you will print this letter. J. M.

Elissa Landi Stars In Play She Wrote 13 Years Ago

New York, March 13

A VERY beautiful and quite talented girl has suddenly appeared from the shadows. She is Elissa Landi, who for some time was visible both on stage and screen. Then she disappeared from the public eye, because she felt that she was unhappy as an actress in any medium. Now she suddenly appears in the fine old town of Maplewood, N. J. She is not only starring in a play, but alert sleuths have discovered that the Mady Frances, who is listed as the author of the play "Rebellion in Shadow," is really Landi herself.

ALICE HUGHES

She is no stranger to the typewriter, being the author of four novels in her time. She is trying this new show on the Jersey dog, and is not yet certain that she will ever bring it to Broadway. She wrote the show no less than 13 years ago, and she heatedly denies that it is autobiographical. She freely admits that the play is too verbose in spots and that it needs a lot of touching up.

It is no secret that Landi was never really happy in the world of entertainment, especially in the movies. She worked for Cecil De Mille in "The Sign of the Cross," playing a noble Christian girl who ended up by being tossed to the lions. While Elissi is not highly pleased by being thrown to the king of beasts, it is probable that she was delighted when the final scene was shot.

Soon after that she disappeared entirely from the public view. It is interesting to note that the Metropolitan tenor, Nini Martini, attends nearly every performance of Landi's show. Of course, she makes the customary crack, "We're just friends." Which goes to show that this beautiful, intellectual girl is just one of us after all.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN:—Passing the Belasco Theater a few midnights ago, I saw at least 150 people milling around the stage door. Ah, I thought, at least a first-class street fight, and waited patiently for the paddy-wagon to arrive. And I finally realized that the noisy and active crowd was just waiting for a fast look at Mr. Franchot Tone and Miss Sylvia Sidney. Gosh, I thought, just imagine these kids who should have been in bed hours ago hanging around a gloomy theater to annoy a couple of beautiful young actors. After which, I hurried home to my own trundle bed.

Strange didoes occasionally occur in this growing town, and the oddest of the past few weeks has happened to a 3-year-old boy now in a local hospital. Nobody knows his name, for fear of embarrassing his parents. This phenomenon at his tender age has shot to the tremendous height of 5 feet due to some glandular disorder. The surgeons who have him in charge say that he very well may outgrow Robert Wadlow, of Alton, Ill. who already reaches 8 feet 8½ inches into the stratosphere at the age of 21. That will certainly be some growing, and he'll have to do a lot of stuff in the next 18 years. Personally, I don't think he can whip Bob.

Nini Martini, Tenor, Attends Every Performance

Our propaganda for the county fair which opens here in a few weeks is now rushing into high. The latest stunt pulled by the poohbahs was the entertainment at luncheon of no less than 52 mayors of American cities, followed by a party for 300 people which included the wives of the visitors.

Our Mr. John has come back from designing the hats for "Gone With The Wind," and went on the air shortly thereafter. Ireta Kuhn asked him, "How would you like your women's hats to be treated as roughly as men do theirs?" John answered briefly and simply, "I'd have a fit." And knowing John as I do, he would.

Start a Stamp Collection

"A FINE collection of stamps!" John's employer, a fellow enthusiast, admires John's well-mounted collection, gotten together with care but costing very little.

Stamp collecting is a grand avocation for anyone. It opens a whole new world of history, geography—friends.

Perhaps you already have interesting stamps saved from foreign letters—or you've found some old issues in a trunk. If you have no stamps to begin with, you can start a collection by buying an inexpensive "packet"—a mixture of stamps—from a dealer.

What are you going to collect? Fun to specialize in the stamps of one country—or of one period of American history. And maybe a rare and valuable one will pop up!

Simple to learn the differences in colors, watermarks, perforations which give special value to a stamp. You begin to exchange duplicates with collectors, keep your eyes open for new issues.

For interesting events are always happening in the stamp world. Governments issue new stamps to commemorate unusual events, anniversaries, famous people.

Right now the New York World's Fair is in the limelight. Already Ecuador in South America has designed a series of stamps honoring the famous show. And other countries plan issues too.

The other stamp is from Guatemala and pictures President Roosevelt—and this is the first time a living President of the United States has ever had his picture on a stamp.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Even an Editor Tries Exercising And Grows Slim

NEWSPAPER people, as you may be aware, have somewhat more than their share of skepticism. Beauty, diet and exercise columns are their regular bill of fare—for others—but it is rare that an editor would break down and take an exercise suggestion herself.

But here is a letter from a topnotch woman's page editor:

"I can't resist telling you my success story, for I have taken 8 inches off the waist and hips, and not for all the rice in China would I put them back on! I do very little dieting except to turn down desserts—which I like better than all the rest of the meal. But I do stretching, twisting and rolling exercises religiously every morning, and I have gotten so sylphlike you wouldn't know me. No more middle-aged spread for me!"

Many Need Exercise

You see, the only skeptics are the women who have not actually given exercise a fair trial. If you followed suit and exercised every morning, you would soon be surprised at your own enthusiasm. Nothing equals the pleasure of watching the inches vanish off one's figure.

There are many of you who need exercise much more than you need diet. You should, of course, refrain from overeating, but often merely going without desserts will be enough to lower your weight to normal. You cannot regain the lovely lines of your figure unless you exercise, but the combination of twisting, stretching and rolling is so powerful that no woman need have a middle-aged figure.

Here is a simple exercise that twists off the waistline excess:

Here is another one:

Lie on the back on the floor, arms stretched straight out at the sides, both legs straight down on the floor. Swing the right leg up to right angles with the trunk and, swinging leg across the body, touch the toes to the floor at the left side. Bring the leg back up to right angles before returning to beginning position. Repeat with the left leg. Be sure to bring the leg to right angles before and after touching toes to floor.

There are innumerable variations of rolling exercises. The advantage of rolling is that it smooths out any lumps or pads. Here is a different version of the old bicycle exercise which does the same thing:

Lie on the right side, right arm under the head, left hand out on floor in front of body as a brace. Pedal, bringing alternate knees high up toward the chest and stretching them down to full length.

DeGoofey Preparedness

After a seclusion of several months, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, has returned to public life. At her press conference yesterday, Mrs. DeGoofey announced she had been working on a preparedness campaign.

"Against Hitler and Mussolini?" inquired a reporter.

"Heavens no!" exclaimed Mrs. DeGoofey. "Nothing so simple as that. The real menace facing Washington is the World's Fair visitor!

"Word comes to me from authoritative sources," continued the famous reformer, "that come April swarms of family groups, including children and dogs, will begin converging on Washington for stopover visits on their way to New York. We must act at once with boldness and determination to meet this crisis.

Daily Bulletins On the Enemy

"Our first plan is defensive—to hold off the enemy. But if he—or rather they—should get entrenched, we have worked out a drastic offensive aimed at dislodgment. First of all, the Do Something About It League is setting up a Nation-wide spy system to determine in advance who is headed toward Washington and why. This information will be posted daily on bulletin boards at the league's downtown headquarters for the benefit of Washington housewives, so that they can get their individual defense systems into operation."

"What will those systems be?" Mrs. DeGoofey was asked.

"Well, we will first try simple measures such as Hollywood goggles, wigs, mustaches, beards and other devices to make the Washingtonian unrecognizable by out-of-town visitors. Our league is opening a free theatrical make-up department whereby it hopes to aid harassed housewives with spare bedrooms to live incognito all summer. Also, at our headquarters we are giving free lessons in ventriloquism to enable women to answer the telephone without revealing their identities.

"Finally, in event these simple measures fail, we shall equip homes with turrets and spy glasses and also arrange for WPA workers to dig back yard trenches after the manner of those for London air raids."

Mirrors and Monkeys To Rout Visitors

"But suppose, Mrs. DeGoofey," inquired a woman reporter in a straw pillbox with a snood, "that the visitors succeed in getting in the house?"

"Ah!" exclaimed the intrepid crusader, "that is where our offensive strategy comes in! Our league is preparing to furnish all sorts of subtle weapons calculated to rout the enemy without delay.

"For instance, we have a coffee preparation that is perfectly vile. We also have a supply of magic mirrors for guest rooms which are designed to make guests appear twice as fat as they are. We are training for rental some Great Dane and Newfoundland dogs of affectionate disposition who will insist on sitting on the laps of visitors, also some Angora kittens who can be guaranteed to tear the stockings of feminine guests and shed hair on their skirts. We will also rent out some very playful pet monkeys for use in apartments that are invaded by guests and we expect to have soon for temporary adoption some exceedingly ill-behaved children—perfectly horrid little brats—who will rout any type of visitor, but especially those who 'love kiddies' into speedy departure.

Houses Haunted At Cost of $10

"Our prize weapon, however, is a ghost, a headless one that will open doors mysteriously, rattle chains down the stairs, appear at the foot of beds, and do all the approved ghostly tricks. A single ghost will rent for $10 a night, but if it will rid a housewife of half a dozen visitors, it is well worth the money."

"Any other plans to announce?" Mrs. DeGoofey was asked.

"Not at this time," she replied. "I may have some interesting things to divulge later. I will be at league headquarters after April 1."

"Where can you be reached before that?" asked a man reporter with pencil poised.

"Oh—well, I shall be out of town. I am leaving tonight for San Francisco. I have some very dear friends out there who have simply been besieging me for years to visit them and—well, I thought this might be a good time to go—and see the World's Fair."

Miss Halsted on Visit Here To Be Feted at Luncheon

Author of 'Marriage Is So Final' Staying For Several Days; Insists It's 'Just a Rest' and Not Story Hunting Expedition

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

HER LOVE OF GEOGRAPHICAL VARIETY led Winifred Halsted, current Washington visitor, to creative writing. A couple of years ago she discovered that the malady known as "itching feet" can be made to sound respectable to relatives and friends if it is ascribed to a relentless search for material.

So, by her own admission, Miss Halsted has her cake and eats it, too. She travels here, there and everywhere, and then returns to her New York apartment with plenty of ideas for books or short stories. "But I'm on vacation now," she said yesterday. "I'm not here to gather material at all; just resting."

She is the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Donald Halsted, and she expects to be here for several days, although she came to spend only a week-end. Mrs. Halsted will entertain for her at luncheon at the Shoreham today, and a number of other parties are to be given for her before she leaves.

A few days ago I met her at a cocktail party where she was very much the center of attention. Slender and attractive, she has a wide range of interests and a rare sense of humor. In a brief bit of talk with her I discovered she is a writer; but it was from somebody else that I learned about her recent novel, "Marriage Is So Final," that has been widely read in the past few weeks.

Miss Halstead's "Tomorrow Is Too Late" in a recent issue of a nationally known magazine is the result of a trip she made last spring when she got away from it all by sailing down to Bermuda for a brief stay. Whether, after this visit, Washington will be worked into the background of a story or a book remains to be seen. "I'm really here on vacation," she insists—but there's twinkle in her eye when she says it.

Mary Harris Howry Plans 'Dance Retreat'

While vacation plans for most of us are still in a foggy state, now and then you run across someone who has a summer program mapped out to the last detail. For example, there's Mary Harris Howry, who, with her sister, Elizabeth Howry, leased their Georgetown house a few weeks ago and has been hiding away in a smaller place between trips out of town.

Friends asking Mary Howry about plans for the next few months invariably have had the answer, "Well, I'll be going up to my country place in the spring." Nothing new in that; for she has spent the past two summers at "Howry Hundred," her farm in Berkshire County, Mass. But now it develops that she recently completed plans to open an eight weeks' course in "progression of the dance" from June 20 to August 15; and that she will be leaving early in May to get her summer place ready.

Was a Member of Denishawn Companies

As many of her friends know, Miss Howry herself is a dance recital artist who has studied extensively and was for a time a member of the Denishawn Dance Companies in this country and the Orient. For the past two summers, pupils of Ted Shawn, spending the season at his country place, have flocked over to Miss Howry's home frequently and have suggested it would be an ideal place for a dance retreat. Since Shawn's summer courses are open only to men, Miss Howry decided to offer a series of courses to which women, also, would be admitted.

"Howry Hundred" is 136 miles from New York and 140 miles from Boston; is situated three miles from the quaint little town of Becket and boasts a charming old Colonial house, recently renovated and overlooking one of the pretties panoramas in that section.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. John Henry Dwight will entertain at dinner on Thursday evening . . . Mrs. Golden Bell has cards out for luncheon on Friday . . . Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies will return to Washington this spring and will move into her house, which is now being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes . . . Mr. and Mrs. Himes will return to their home near Frederick, Md. . . . Mrs. George T. Marye will leave soon to spend some time in her home in Burlingame, Calif.

Luncheon Fetes Mrs. Bloch

Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Claude C. Bloch, wife of Admiral Bloch, commander in chief of the United States Fleet.

The guests were Mrs. E. F. Hutchison, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. Alan Kirk, Mrs. Walter Kilpatrick, Mrs. Edwin Foy and Mrs. E. G. Allen, wife of Capt. Allen.

Mrs. Bloch, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Thad Brown, for several weeks at Camp Meade, came into town on Friday and has been stopping with Capt. and Mrs. Allen at their home on California street. Several small informal parties have been given for her during her visit. She will return to Fort Meade today.

Admiral Bloch, now at Port au Prince, will come North with the fleet for the opening of the New York Fair. Mrs. Bloch will go to New York to join him.

Mrs. Nohowel To Entertain Before Concert

Mrs. Margaret Dressler Nohowel will entertain this evening at dinner at her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, later taking her guests to the Toscanini concert at Constitution Hall.

Guests at the dinner and in Mrs. Nohowel's box at the concert will be Lady Bradford Leslie, Col. and Mrs. Franklin Babcock and Commander Joseph B. Lynch.

French Envoy Fetes Harrisons

The United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison were honor guests at a small informal luncheon given yesterday by the French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin. There were ten in the company.

The Harrisons, who have been visiting Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, will conclude their stay tomorrow, and are expected to return shortly to Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Arrive From Florida

The United States Minister to Latvia and Mrs. John C. Wiley arrived yesterday from Florida, where they have been spending some time. They are at the Anchorage, where they expect to stay for several weeks.

A number of parties are being planned for them.

Here From California to Visit Sister

Recently arrived from the West Coast is Baroness Maxmilian von Romberg, popular member of Santa Barbara social circles, who is here to visit her brother and sister-in-law, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. J. Bennett Nobel, in their apartment at the Kennedy-Warren. Later, Baroness Von Romberg will go to New York to spend a month before returning to her home in Montecito, Santa Barbara. Her husband was killed a year ago in a plane crash in New Jersey

Mrs. Goodwin Is Feted Here

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, of Maine, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Sulgrave Club in compliment to Mrs. Philip Goodwin. The latter is spending a few days in Washington on her way north from Miami Beach, Fla. She is the widow of the late Representative Philip E. Goodwin, of Cocksackie, N. Y.

Among the guests at the luncheon were Frank Crowther, Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr.; Mrs. John Taber, Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. W. Sterling Cole, Mrs. Lewis K. Rockefeller, all of whom are wives of Representatives from New York.

Others there were Mrs. Albert E. Carter, wife of Representative Carter, of California; Mrs. Bertrand Snell, wife of former Minority Leader Snell, who is just back from Florida; Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Horace Shares, Mrs. Frederick Davenport, Miss Margaret McNeirny and Mrs. Louise Craigie.

Hartleys Give Buffet Supper at Georgetown Home

Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Hartley entertained at a buffet supper, followed by charades, last evening at their charming home on N street in Georgetown.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, jr., Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. John Laylin, Manhix Walker, Miss Rosalind Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Coleman, Capt. Miles Reber, the Rev. and Mrs. Duncan Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Partridge, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Dorsey Fisher and Mrs. Burke Elbrick.

Mr. Hartley is a well-known author whose latest book on foreign policy appeared last week.

Harris & Ewing.
SENORITA DE ESCALANTE

Pretty, brown-eyed Senorita Maria Theresa Escalante, daughter of the Venezuelan Ambassador, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, and Senora de Escalante, is so busy with her studies she doesn't have much time for hobbies.

Her main interest at present consists of her classes at art school, and she intends, in the future, to do something very serious with her drawing.

One of Washington's youngest cosmopolites, she has studied in Paris and also in Budapest, where again she spent most of her time at drawing.

She speaks excellent English—although she says she doesn't—and was in the Capital for several months about two years ago. This, her second visit to Washington, will last for an indefinite period, although when she mentions her native land, Venezuela, there is a touch of homesickness in her voice.

At the Carlton

Judge and Mrs. W. T. Fowler, of Lexington, Ky., are at the Carlton.

Mrs. Bailey Gives Dinner

Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, wife of the Senator from North Carolina, entertained at a small dinner last evening in honor of Mrs. William E. Brock, who arrived in Washington yesterday from Tennessee to be the guest of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of Senator George, of Georgia.

The dinner took place in the home at 2019 Connecticut avenue that Senator and Mrs. Bailey have leased from Mrs. Ralph Worthington. Following the dinner, Mrs. Bailey took her guests to the A Capella Choir concert.

Arriving tomorrow to be with their parents for spring vacations will be James H. Pou Bailey, who is studying law at the University of North Carolina, and Josiah W. Bailey, jr., who attends Woodbury Forest School in Woodbury, Va.

Mrs. Brock, whose calendar will be crowded during her stay in Washington, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Jack Hayes at the Chevy Chase Club.

Miss Kimpton To Be Bride of F. X. Sommer, Jr.

The wedding of Miss Constance Kimpton, daughter of Dr. Arthur Ronald Kimpton, of Boston and Greenbush, and the late Mrs. Kimpton, to Francis X. Sommer, jr., son of Mrs. Francis Sommer, of Washington and Ashburnham, will be solemnized at 4:30 o'clock afternoon at the Norwell Church, Norwell, Mass. The Rev. Boynton Merrill and the Rev. Alfred James Wilson will officiate. A reception will follow in the gardens of "Meadowlarks," estate of the bride's father at Greenbush.

The Misses Elizabeth, Marjorie and Alison Kimpton will be among their sister's attendants. Miss Harriet Sommer, sister of the bridegroom-elect, will also be a bridesmaid. Faith Greeley, cousin of the bride-to-be, will act as flower girl.

Robert James Sommer will be best man for his brother.

Miss Kimpton attended the Woodward School and was graduated from the May School with the class of 1932. She made her debut the following year and is a member of the Juniro League.

Mr Sommer prepared at Philips Exeter for Harvard from which he was graduated in 1935. Next winter the couple will reside at New Haven, where Mr. Sommer will finish his studies at the Yale Medical School.

A Correction

The wedding ceremony of Miss Dorothy Vernon Buppert and Randall James Richardson, which was reported on this page as having been performed on Saturday, will not take place until next Saturday. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon C. Buppert, while Mr. Richardson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Richardson.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, who has planned to leave today for New York, has postponed her trip until Thursday. She will go there to visit the Senator's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Pfeiffer, and their daughter, Barbara.

Mrs. Donald DeVeau will give a luncheon tomorrow at her home in Chevy Chase, and Miss Evelyn Chase will fete the couple at a cocktail party on Thursday. That evening, Mr. and Mrs. Emory Wheeler will give a dinner in their honor at the Chevy Chase Club.

On Friday, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes will give a supper in compliment to Miss Whitford and Mr. Wadsworth.

The wedding will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Alban's Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating. The prospective bride will have as her only attendant her sister, Miss Harriet Stearns Whitford, who will be maid of honor. Aston Howlett, of New Hampshire, brother-in-law of Mr. Wadsworth, will be best man, and the ushers include Richard C. Scott, of Danville, Va.; Robert Laughlin and Robert Ray, of New York, and Edwin Kintner, of Washington and Baltimore.

Sallie Warren Wed in Marlboro

Surprising to Washington is the news of the marriage last Friday of Sallie Mae Steagall Warren, daughter of Representative Henry B. Steagall, of Ozark, Ala., to George G. Buchheister, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George A. Buchheister, of Upper Marlboro, Md. No announcement of the engagement had been made.

The ceremony took place at 4:30 at Upper Marlboro, the Rev. John Ehret officiating. The bride wore a Schiaparelli dress of Navy blue, with matching hat and accessories, and a corsage of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Representative Steagall gave a small reception for the couple at his Wardman Park apartment following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Buchheister returned to the Capital after a week-end honeymoon and are at the Shoreham temporarily before going to reside in Upper Marlboro. Mr. Buchheister's family has a lovely old home, "Chelsea," there.

The bride attended Judson College in Alabama and the Florida State College for Women. She is a member of Kappa Delta. Mrs. Buchheister is a daughter of the late Mrs. Steagall.

Mr. Buchheister is a graduate of the University of Maryland and National Law School. He is a member of Sigma Nu, the University Club and the Marlboro Hunt Club.

Carolyn Chantry Cocktail Party Hostess For the Durbrows, Who Sail Friday

MR. AND MRS. Elbridge Durbrow, who have been widely entertained during their current stay, were guests of honor at a cocktail party given yesterday by Carolyn Chantry. They will leave today for New York and will sail on Friday on the Conte de Savoia for Naples, where Mr. Dubrow is with our consulate.

The guest of honor, who is pretty as well as very intelligent, wore a wool frock in an orchid shade with a small pill-box hat. Her mother, Mrs. Meade Moore, was also present, wearing black and a hat with a veil and some colored ornaments.

Mrs. Durbrow and the hostess knew each other when both were students at Vassar, where Mrs. Durbrow returned after her marriage last summer to complete the work necessary for her degree. Miss Chantry, by the way, is continuing her studies, working for her master's degree in philosophy at George Washington and also taking a short story writing course. Mrs. Durbrow hopes to do some writing and also further studying from time to time.

Mrs. Chantry, who assisted her daughter, wore a black frock. The The party was held at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Chantry on Twenty-second street.

SEEN here and there: The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, accompanied by Mme. Depasta, wife of the Counselor of the legation, and George Vournos; Maisie Howard, in a powder blue suit chatting with Mr. Durbrow; Charles Gaines and Nancy Mann standing together in a corner; Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Angus Malcolm from the British embassy.

Also Florence Harris, just back from Puerto Rico, being greeted by Mannix Walker; Vice Admiral and Frau Witthoeft-Emden; Mrs. William Lacy, who has just passed her exams to change from a British to an American citizen; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Block, Mme. Molekamp, wearing a new spring bonnet; Kitty DuBois, Countess de Gramont, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Knowlton and Mr. Mrs. Thomas Adams. The latter was before her recent marriage Miss Caroline Cecil.

There were loads of "extra men" at the party, among them Harry Whitney, Leonard Lyons, and Dorsey Fisher.

MR. AND MRS. PETER BELIN (she is the former Mary Cootes) have changed their original plans for a round-the-world honeymoon. Instead they expect to return here about the first of May, first going to Haiti for a visit with Mrs. Belin's mother and brother, Mrs. Harry N. Cootes and Merritt Cootes, who is vice consul at Port-au-Prince. The Belins went to San Francisco from their first stop, Sun Valley, where they bought a car, and are now in Oklahoma visiting one of the ushers at their wedding, which took place in January.

PARTY NOTES: The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre will entertain members of the State Department Foreign Service at tea on Friday at their home in Spring Valley. There are 16 in the school. Mr. Sayre is a member of the board which examines candidates for the State Department exams . . . Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark will give a small dinner tomorrow night. Mrs. Clark has been laid up with the grippe for several weeks . . . Neil Connor, Henry Whitney and Larry Knapp will give a buffet supper before the St. Patrick's Day party of the square dancing group tomorrow evening.

OFF TO Florida the end of the week is Mrs. Higginson Rogers, who will take her children South for their Spring vacations . . . Mrs. David Barry leaves shortly with Mrs. Emmons Smith for a week at Atlantic City . . . And Willis Ballinger, the New Deal economist, has picked Palm Beach as the place for his forthcoming vacation . . . Mrs. Richard Southgate is spending a few days in New York.

Mrs. Briggs and Miss Huneycutt Entertain Mrs. Evelyn H. Turner

Three Were Classmates at Duke, Where Latter Is to Be Married to D. D. Smith On April 1, in University Chapel

Three little girls at Duke University they were, a few years ago, and classmates, too. So last evening two of them, Mrs. Edson W. Briggs and Miss Dorothy Huneycutt, entertained at a surprise bridal shower for the third, Mrs. Evelyn Hall Turner, whose marriage to Dorsey D. Smith will take place on April 1, in Duke University Chapel, at Durham, N. C.

The event took place at the home of Mrs. Briggs, on Legation street, and the decorations were in white and green, with tall, bridal-white tapers on the buffet providing the soft flickering light in the dining room.

Mrs. Briggs wore a gown of black marquisette with dusty pink flowers appliqued over the shoulder and at the neck line and small sleeves. Miss Huneycutt was gowned in green crepe with a rhinestone clip at the throat. The guest of honor wore a gown of Navy blue crepe.

Guests included Mrs. J. Clegg Hall, mother of the bride, who has recently arrived in Washington from her home in Albemarle, N. C., for a brief visit with her daughter. Other guests were Mrs. Richard F. Roper, Mrs. Arthur W. Dew, Mrs. Horton W. Baxley, Mrs. Frank Bronaugh, Mrs. Coulter Wells and Mrs. Ralph Beall.

Also Mrs. William H. Herrick, jr., Mrs. Nicholas W. Reinhardt, Mrs. Ernestine Wonder, Mrs. Stanley Surrey, Mrs. Elmo Ceconi, Miss Irene Feagin, Miss Lillian Sample, Miss Lucia Norris, Miss Leslie Hunt, Miss Nolye Hunt and Miss Ruth George.

Mrs. Everett G. Harris, sister of Mrs. Briggs, assisted at the coffee table in the dining room.

Off to Illinois

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries left yesterday for Chicago and Bloomington, Ill., where he will deliver several lectures. He will return to Washington on Thursday.

Charles L. Woods Are on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Wood, who were married Saturday, March 4, will make their home at the Metropolitan Apartments here after a wedding trip to New York, where they are stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The bride is the former Miss Dona Stratton Pollock, daughter of Mrs. Don Symmes Pollock, of Washington, and the late Mr. Pollock. Mr. Wood is the son of Mrs. James M. Wood, of Volga, W. Va., and the late Mr. Wood.

Dr. J. Martin Gillum officiated at the ceremony, which took place at the Brookland Methodist Episcopal Church in a setting of palms, ferns, lilies and snapdragons. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, J. Parker Pollock, wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines with a net veil attached to a pearl tiara. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. Parker Pollock was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. William Martin and the Misses Marguerite Ashton Evans, Gertrude Frances Wright and Genevieve Chovan, Kenneth L. Stone, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Donald Wells Richardson, cousin of the bride; Glen nMontgomery, William Martin and Fernald H. Nichols. Kenneth L. Flowers Provide Beauty to D. A. R. Processional Which Opens Night Session in Continental Hall

District 'Daughters' Hear More Reports Of Year's Activities; Marine Band Plays As Officers, Led by Pages, March to Places

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Flowers, in profusion like that at the Continental Congress of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, each April, gave color and beauty to the processional which opened last night's session of the State conference of the District D. A. R. in Memorial Continental Hall. Miss Lilian Chenoweth, State regent, presided.

After a morning and afternoon devoted to officers' reports—given within the time allotted so that the sessions ended on schedule—the District "daughters" gathered again last night to hear more accounts of the year's work. The time was given to the chapter regents, with music interspersed through the program.

The Marine Band played before the session and for the entrance of the State officers and regents. Other music included violin numbers by Helen Belt, accompanied by Alexander Clayton; the singing of "America the Beautiful" by the audience under the leadership of Mrs. J. Frank Rice, and a group of solos by Miss Maxwell Galloway, soprano, accompanied by Dorothy Faye Loftus.

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, offered by the invocation and Dr. Robin Gould, of Francis Asbury M. E. Church South, pronounced the benediction.

Pages Lead Formal Procession

The procession of officers was led by the pages for the conference, headed by Mrs. Ford E. Young, jr., chairman of pages, carrying the American flag, and Miss Margaret Turner, vice chairman, carrying the flag of the D. A. R. They were followed by the others, who formed an aisle through which the regents passed first and then the State officers, Miss Chenoweth, the State regent, entering last. She was accompanied by her personal page, Miss Helen Towner, daughter of Mrs. Frank H. Towner, cahirman of national defense. Preceding Miss Chenoweth was Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general, with her daughter, Mrs. Richard Green, as her personal page. Dr. Ella R. Fales, recording secretary, had Miss Helen Montgomery as her page and Mrs. David Caldwell had Miss Mary Elizabeth McNeil. Others were Miss Charlotte Garland, Miss Marion Fulton, Mrs. J. M. Berry, jr., Mrs. C. Lefbre, Mrs. R. R. Daly, Mrs. Paul J. Crummett, Miss Carrie R. Fulton, Mrs. Francis Shore, jr., Mrs. Allene McCranie, Miss Elizabeth Ickes, Miss Bonita Finney, Miss Rebecca Reilly, Miss Jeanette Gibson and Miss Evelyn Markham. All were from the junior D. A. R. groups of the District organization.

Resolutions were passed unanimously yesterday afternoon providing for the purchase of four memorial acres at Tamassee D. A. R. school in honor of Miss Chenoweth as regent; approving a golden jubilee project and providing for theappointment of a committee to decide what it shall be; approving the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Tydings and in the House by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, providing for the preservation of Stephen Decatur House as a museum; and favoring the bill introduced by Senator Hattie Caraway to make the flag code law.

This morning a large oak spinning wheel, one of the earliest in this country, will be presented to the District Room of Memorial Continental Hall through the Lucy Holcomb Chapter of the D. A. R., in memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Chenoweth, mother of the State regent. Mrs. Fred Hopkins is former regent of the chapter and the wheel belonged to her husband's great - great - great grandfather.

Mrs. Gary E. Walters, State chairman of the District Room committee, will make the presentation and Mrs. Haig will sing "The Old Spinning Wheel."

Junior Citizens To Give Program

The morning session also will include a program by the Junior American Citizens at 10 o'clock. Emily Snyder, of the Elizabeth Jackson Club, will be mistress of ceremonies, assisted by Mildred Mitchell. Others on the program will be Rita Wall, Ramona Wiegand, Rachel Lewis and Nellie Trent of the Betsy Ross Club, with Barbara Loomis assisting as accompanist; Margaret Cameron, of the Lafayette Club; the James Madison Club, in a demonstration of choral speaking; the Robert Morris Club in a pageant and Dorothy Przybilla of the Dorothy Hancock Club.

Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks, State chairman of music, will play at the morning session and will present Ann Plain, contralto, and Kenneth Kinsella, barytone, accompanied by Cornelia Long Kinsella, as guest artists. Presentation of good citizenship medals will take place this afternoon, preceding an address by Lee R. Pennington, of the F. B. I., on "The F. B. I. and the War on Crime" and a program by the Girl Home Makers.

Tonight Representative Luther Patrick will speak at the banquet at the Mayflower, which will close the conference.

Regents Club Marks Birthday

The Chapter Regents Club of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution marked its first birthday yesterday with a luncheon given at the American Association of University Women's Clubhouse, 1634 I street, in connection with the State conference in progress at the Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. John W. Edwards, the club president, presided and among the guests were Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent, and her staff, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Mrs. Herbert Fay Jamney, past State regent of Georgia and past vice president general; Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger, past vice president general, formerly of Washington and now of New York. Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, State regent of Virginia, and Mrs. James Henry Harper, State president of the Children of the American Revolution, also were guests.

There was no program, the members returning to Memorial Continental Hall immediately following the luncheon for the afternoon session of the conference. Two large buses were chartered for transportation to and from the hall.

The State officers, in addition to Miss Chenoweth who attended were Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, vice regent; Dr. Ella R. Fales, recording secretary; Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Carlton C. Hoffner, treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Roger Williams, registrar; Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, historian; Mrs. Edwin P. Andrus, librarian, and Mrs. William B. Hardy, parliamentarian.

Kappa Beta Pi 'Tag-Alongs' Make Slogan, 'On to Estes'

Husbands, Brothers and 'Boy Friends' of Legal Fraternity Members Hope to Get Big Delegation to Attend Convention

"On to Estes" will be the slogan of the men's auxiliary to Eta Alumnae Chapter of Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority, at convention time in July. This was decided last night at a session upstairs in the residence of Warren Faircloth, husband of Olive Geiger Faircloth, an active member of the auxiliary.

The group, which includes husbands and brothers of Kappa Beta Pis, with "boy friends" eligible to associate membership, meets at the same time and place as the alumnae chapter. It holds separate sessions until the hour of refreshments, when the auxiliary members join the Kappas.

The auxiliary was formed at the international Kappa Beta Pi convention at the Seigneury Club in Quebec, in 1937, by a handful of husbands who had accompanied their wives to the conclave. Among them were Louis Moulton, husband of Anna Moulton, and Hastings P. Avery, husband of Edwina Avery. They were included in all the social functions of the convention and had such a good time they decided to promote the idea of an auxiliary, both local and international.

Most of the husband members, like their wives, are attorneys, but they need not be, to be eligible. By-laws of not too serious a nature have been drawn up by the Washington auxiliary. The office of "high priest of the bar" is held by Mr. Moulton, and that of "keeper of the court" by Mr. Avery.

While their wives and sisters discussed selection of delegates and other convention plans last night, the auxiliary members went into a huddle over their program and plans for rounding up a large attendance. The fact that the Kappa Beta Pis are meeting in Estes Park just prior to the American Bar Association convention in California in July makes it probable that a large delegation of auxiliary members, bound for California, will stop at Estes to be on hand for the dinners, dances and other parties of the sorority convention.

Entirely off the record—the attendance at the Eta Alumnae Chapter meetings has picked up notably since husbands, brothers, and "boy friends" have been allowed to tag along.

Mrs. Manikam Tells of India

Mrs. Ruby Manikam, of Madras, India, wife of the secretary of the India Christian Council and active in the Girl Guides, addressed 50 women of the Lutheran churches of Washington yesterday at Wesley Hall on Christian work in India. Most of those present were members of the missionary society which contributes to the Christian College for Women in Madras of which Mrs. Manikam is a graduate.

She came to this country and studied at Rutgers, later taking an advanced degree at the University of Pennsylvania and returned to India in 1929 to work among the women of her country. She devoted her talk yesterday to the church program there, without special reference to the political situation. She stressed, however, the need for educational facilities, pointing out that a third of the illiteracy in the world is in India.

Among those present were Miss Barbara Wiegand and Mrs. Merle Cain, of the national executive board of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Lutheran Church; Dr. Mary Markley, secretary of the board of education of the church, and Mrs. Gould Wickey, president of the Missionary Society of Memorial Lutheran Church.

Women Voters Hear Jurist

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, commended the nonsupport and chancery jurisdiction features of the Juvenile Court law yesterday at a luncheon of the Department of Government and Child Welfare of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Frederick Fishback and Mrs. Howard Leland Smith, cochairmen, presided.

The nonsupport provision, said Judge Bentley, has resulted in the collection of $193,700 this year, which has made it possible to do casework in the families, in many instances keeping them together and preventing their permanent breakdown. It is regrettable that there is still such a limited number of workers that each is obliged to handle 300 cases, she said. In the regular court work the case load is 84 where it should be 40 to 45, she added.

Community aids essential to "a good Juvenile Court job" Judge Bentley listed as adequate housing, health facilities and co-operation of the schools with the court.

The schools here, she said, are handicapped by the fact that they cannot begin to meet the needs of the children who have problems—the sick and crippled, or mentally backward.

G. O. P. Women to Hear Miss Julia Chen

Miss Julia Chen, a graduate student at American University, will speak this morning at 11 o'clock at the regular Tuesday meeting of the League of Republican Women at the headquarters, 1301 Seventeenth street northwest. Miss Chen, a native of China, will speak on "Diplomatic History."

Mrs. Charles M. Lea is chairman of the morning meetings. Mrs. Edward E. Gann is president of the club.

Press Luncheon Canceled

The luncheon of the Women's National Press Club which was to have been held today at the Willard, with the Irish Minister as guest of honor, has been canceled because of the hotel workers' strike. Many of the club members are affiliated with the Newspaper Guild and will not go through a picket line.

Regents Club Marks Birthday

The Chapter Regents Club of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution marked its first birthday yesterday with a luncheon given at the American Association of University Women's Clubhouse, 1634 I street, in connection with the State conference in progress at the Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. John W. Edwards, the club president, presided and among the guests were Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent, and her staff, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general; Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Mrs. Herbert Fay Jamney, past State regent of Georgia and past vice president general; Mrs. G. Wallace W. Hanger, past vice president general, formerly of Washington and now of New York. Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, of Alexandria, State regent of Virginia, and Mrs. James Henry Harper, State president of the Children of the American Revolution, also were guests.

There was no program, the members returning to Memorial Continental Hall immediately following the luncheon for the afternoon session of the conference. Two large buses were chartered for transportation to and from the hall.

The State officers, in addition to Miss Chenoweth who attended were Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, vice regent; Dr. Ella R. Fales, recording secretary; Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Carlton C. Hoffner, treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Roger Williams, registrar; Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, historian; Mrs. Edwin P. Andrus, librarian, and Mrs. William B. Hardy, parliamentarian.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. FREDERICK RICHARDSON, of the Fairfax Garden Club, returned home from a vacation in Miami, Fla., with Mr. Richardson and their daughter, Randolph, to find a job awaiting her—publicity for the annual garden tour of the Garden Club of Virginia. She is working with Mrs. W. W. Hoxton, of the Alexandria Club.

The tour, which will be held April 24 to 29 this year, draws visitors from all parts of the country interested in seeing the historic Virginia estates open at that time.

No one could be a more enthusiastic garden tour worker than Mrs. Richardson, but it's hard to get down to busines after a few weeks in the Florida sunshine. "Randy" swam, Mr. Richardson played golf and she did either, both or neither, as the notion struck her.

THE CREDIT WOMEN'S BREAKFAST CLUB is going to break down and have a banquet this week—the first in its 12-months' history. The party will be in celebration of its first birthday, will be at 8 p. m. (instead of 8 a. m.) Thursday, in the garden house of the Dodge Hotel and will include a candlelight installation of officers, all reelected, and headed by the president, Wilhelmina Gude.

MRS. LANE SCHOFIELD, president of the D. C. Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, has just returned from a two weeks visit in Philadelphia and will preside this afternoon at the monthly meeting of the society, at national headquarters of the organization, 1461 Rhode Island avenue. Delegates will be selected for the Associate Council meeting immediately following the D. A. R. Congress in April and there will be a musical program arranged by Mrs. Theodore Tiller.

Hostesses will be Mrs. William A. King, Mrs. Albion Tuck and Mrs. Don I. Skidmore.

THE ASSOCIATE MEMBERS of the Congressional Club are more active than ever this year, having monthly dances and card parties and teas in between. Saturday, they held a card party at the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue with a tea following, in honor of those eligible to associate membership—the daughters of club members—who have not yet joined.

Miss Anne Blanton is chairman of the associate members this season, Miss Vivian Vestal, chairman of the entertainment committee and Miss Ruth Reed, daughter of Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, immediate past president of the club, chairman of membership. Miss Barbara Burke, daughter of Mrs. Edward R. Burke, new president of the club, is one of the active members, and assisted in receiving on Saturday.

MRS. EARL CLARK CALHOUN, vice chairman of the committee arranging for the concert to be given for the benefit of Opportunity House Sunday evening by Mme. Orlizc-Dreszer, entertained members of the committee last week at her apartment in the La Salle Building. Among those present were Mrs. Dorothy De-Muth Watson, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mrs. George E. Durno, Mrs. Charles A. Calhoun, Mrs. Pennell Kirkbride and Mrs. Estelle N. Whiting.

The concert will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Saugsted, on Massachusetts avenue.

ROY BRADEN, manager of Greenbelt, will address the Bethesda Woman's Club this morning at 11 o'clock on "The County Manager Form of Government." The meeting at which Mrs. George E. Pariseau will preside in the absence of Mrs. Lily Stone will be followed by a luncheon.

The meeting will be at the clubhouse on Old Georgetown road.

MRS. EDGAR BRIANT MERITT, president of the Political Study Club, was the speaker at the March meeting of the Manassas Woman's Club last week, discussing "Women in Politics." She was accompanied to the meeting by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. George E. Stringfellow, of Montclair, N. J.

THE ALEXANDRIA POST of the American Legion will have another large dance at Gadsby's Tavern Friday, in celebration of the twentieth birthday of the organization.

Death Cancels Club's Social Slate

Because of the death of David Tucker Brown, husband of the president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, the social activities of the club for this week have been canceled. The tea in honor of the officers of the club, announced for Saturday, has been postponed.

Next Tuesday, March 21, the fourth conference of the Woman's National Affiliated Clubs will open at the clubhouse, 152 New Hampshire avenue, with more than 60 clubs from all over the United States participating. Five clubs from California will be represented, as well as a number from Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona, Georgia and Florida. A large delegation is coming from Maryland, representing the Democratic Women's Luncheon Club of Baltimore, the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland, the Women's Democratic Club of Chevy Chase, the Leland Women's Democratic Club of Bethesda.

About 200 women are coming from out of town to attend the conference, the high lights of which will be the mass meeting Wednesday evening at the Shoreham Hotel ballroom on the subject of "International Co-operation" and the discussion Thursday morning on the six-point program for Democratic women and the place of women's clubs in the party setup.

Mrs. Samuel Herrick is chairman of the conference, and her assistant in arrangements is Mrs. J. Brent Clark. Registration will begin at the club headquarters Tuesday morning. The mass meeting is open to the general public.

Skit Features Party Given By Shoppers

Event Marks Second Anniversary of Women's League

A skit, showing the investigating committee of the League of Women Shoppers in action was presented last night at the party given at Twenty-Four Hundred Sixteenth street, celebrating the league's second anniversary. Maxine Spinsterwald, who directed the presentation, also wrote it, with the assistance of the committee, of which Mrs. Edward D. Hollander is chairman.

The narrator was Mrs. Alvin Rockwell. In the role of the chairman was Mrs. Fred Mott; the organizer, Mrs. Frank Bloom; Mrs. Busybridge, a society woman, Mrs. Edward Salner; Mrs. Everycause, Mrs. Charles Denny; Mrs. Standby, Mrs. Alfred Berman; Mrs. Gadabout, Mrs. Robert C. Goodman; Mrs. Everready, Mrs. Marshall Nuchols; the boss, Mrs. Warren L. Sharfman.

Preceding the skit, "The People of the Cumberland" and "The River," two documentary films were shown. Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, the league president, presided.

Naval Academy Names Final Term Officers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 13.—It was announced at the Naval Academy today that Midshipman Cerwin G. Mendenhall, jr., of Anahuac, Texas, had been appointed commander of the regiment, or "five striper" for the final period of the school year beginning March 21 and ending June 1, with the graduation of the first class. He will command the regiment during the June-week exercises. Final appointments were made on the basis of efficiency indicated in former commands.

Mendenhall commanded the first battalion during the first of the three periods of the academic year.

Midshipman Edward L. Beach, jr., of Palo Alto, Calif., who commanded the regiment during the first period, was designated as regimental sub-commander for the final period, and Midshipman William G. Hawthorne, jr., of Arlington, Va., who commanded during the second period, was appointed regimental operations officer.

The other ranking officers for the final period are:

Regimental staff, William G. Hawthorne, jr., Arlington, Va., operations officer; Francis J. Fitzpatrick, Kemmerer, Wyo., adjutant; Thomas R. Weschler, signal officer, Erie, Pa.; Paul W. Gill, Michigan City, Ind., ordnance officer; Thomas C. Hart, Washington, D. C., commissary officer; James C. Oldfield, Shenandoah, Iowa, supply officer; Lucien C. Powell, jr., Forester, Ark., and William C. Moore, Portland Oreg., color bearers; Ernest L. Schwab, jr., Ridgewood, Long Island, N. Y., chief petty officer; Charles S. Thomas, jr., Los Angeles, Calif., bugle corps commander.

Second Battalion, Vincent P. Depoix, Hartsdale, N. Y., commander; John W. Dolan, jr., St. Louis, Mo., subcommander; William C. Hushing, Alexandria, Va. Company commanders: fourth, Frederick L. Taeusch, Washington, D. C.; fifth, Robert P. Guiler 3d, Washington, D. C.; sixth, Curtis F. Vossler, Wheeling, W. Va.

Wife in Reno Seeking Divorce, Holden Says in Separation Suit

MRS. MARGARET BURCH HOLDEN

Dr. Raymond T. Holden, 34, socially prominent Washington physician, yesterday filed action for legal separation from his wife of seven years, the former Margaret B. Burch.

In his complaint, entered in District Court by Attorney Austin F. Canfield Dr. Holden charged his wife with cruelty, alleging she was infatuated with another man, unnamed in the suit. He asked custody of their daughter, Mary.

Dr. Holden's petition further stated that Mrs. Holden, 30, who made her debut in Washington society in 1928, was now in Reno, Nev., where she was planning to divorce him and marry the "other man."

He charged that his wife left their home for New York last January on a trip with her father, Preston Burch, well-known sportsman, and that he later heard she was en route to Reno. The young physician went to Reno in an attempt to persuade her to change her mind, but failed, he said. He gave her address as Theodore Wood Ranch, Reno.

Following a romance of less than a year, the couple eloped to New York City January 7, 1932, and were married in St. Patrick's Cathedral. A long-distance telephone call to their parents announced the wedding.

Mrs. Holden is a graduate of St. Timothy's School, near Baltimore. Dr. Holden, son of the late Dr. Raymond T. Holden, is a graduate of Georgetown Medical School and a member of local hospital staffs. They made their home at 3111 Sixteenth street northwest.

House Authorizes Inquiry Into D. C. Source of Milk Supply

the method by which such violations are perpetrated."

3. Effects of such importations upon the health of the community.

4. Diversion of cream sold for ice cream manufacturing to fluid consumption.

5. To determine whether a conspiracy exists upon the part of any distributor to violate the milk act.

6. To ascertain the propriety and feasibility of permitting the importation of milk and cream from Western sources or other available markets under proper regulation and licensing.

7. To determine whether the milk act should be amended to insure that the District has an adequate milk supply at reasonable prices.

The debate centered around the local price of milk, the quality of Western dairy products, and the right of other States to sell cream and milk in the District.

Westerners Defend Their Milk

Western representatives insisted the quality of milk and cream in their districts is on a par with that produced in the Maryland-Virginia milkshed, and that the price is far cheaper.

Smith intimated that the quality of the Western milk is below that of this area and insisted that the only question at issue was whether cream has been "bootlegged" into the District in violation of the local milk act.

Demands for a broadening of the investigation, he argued, were efforts to drag a red herring over this issue.

He read figures in support of his statement that grade A milk brings higher prices in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Richmond, San Francisco, St. Louis and other cities than in Washington, while admitting that other cities permit the sale of lower grades.

At one time he and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, clashed after Smith had stated that the minority member must have been absent during much of the debate. Dirksen arose to his feet and hotly charged Smith with being unfair, explaining that he had been on the floor throughout.

Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, made his maiden speech in support of the resolution. He pointed out that Maryland and Virginia dairy farmers had invested millions of dollars in equipment in order to comply with the high standards set by the District Health Department.

Milk Price Held Too High

Dirksen, who explained that he is a member of the District Committee and probably would have a hand in the inquiry, stated that the 14-cent standard milk price in the District is too high and expressed the belief that "something of a racket" exists in the local dairy market.

At one point in the debate Representative Smith, "What's wrong with the Corporation Counsel's office and law enforcement agencies in the District?" He asked why an investigation is necessary if the milk act is properly enforced."

Hull Pressed For Details on Nippon Bases

organize and bargain collectively.

The compromise would bar contracts only to companies which within two years prior to the bidding have been found by a court of final jurisdiction to have violated the Wagner act or other labor statute. The President would have authority to permit orders to be let to such firms if he considered it in the best interests of national defense.

Other defense developments:

War Department officials appeared before the Senate Appropriations Committee in executive session to ask restoration of cuts made in their next year's budget by the House. These cover modernization of additional field guns, strengthening of Panama Canal installations and provision for more flight surgeons required under the expanded air program.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the army bill, said he hoped to conclude hearings tomorrow and take the measure to the Senate floor next week.

Base in R. I. Proposed

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, told the Senate Naval Committee that the Navy hopes to begin next year development of a major air base at Quonsett Point, R. I. Provision for it has been offered as an amendment to the naval air base bill by Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island.

Members of the committee said they hoped to reach an agreement today on the Rhode Island base, as well as other locations. Admiral Cook indorsed plans to develop a base at the mouth of the Columbia River at Tongue Point, Oreg., and to acquire additional land for the air station at Norfolk. These were added to the bill in the House but are not included in the Senate measure.

Because of recent clashes between American Marines and Japanese gendarmes at Shanghai, Senators Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois and Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, called for the return of all United States troops from the Orient. Senator Walsh opposed such a move.

Committee members described Hull's letter, which he asked be held confidential, as rather "noncommittal" and "not fully responsive" to the group's request for information. They said they felt full data on the matter was important to them in reaching a decision as to development of Guam.

However, Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who looks on the Guam proposal as primarily a civil aeronautics matter designed to aid the trans-Pacific air line, said the committee decision to seek "further information" as to alleged Japanese violations of the 1922 treaty was "in accordance with the committee's duty to watch over such matters."

Naval officials have testified that Japan has violated a provision of the treaty of February 11, 1922, under which she agreed to keep the former German islands open to citizens of this country. They said, therefore, that they can get no information as to whether Japan has violated a furtner provision of the treaty not to fortify the islands, which lie athwart the route to the Philippines and China.

3 Boys Killed by Auto

Childs, Pa., March 13 (AP).—Three boys, the eldest, 14, were killed by an automobile tonight while standing on the front porch of a house here. A fourth boy was seriously injured. Police said the car rammed into the porch after hitting a gasoline pump. One lad had an Easter egg tightly clasped in his hands, when his body was pulled from the wreckage.

Mrs. Stinson Was Drugged, Court Is Told

Stinson

William Livingstone Crounse in 1925.

Mrs. Stinson, 54, plump, youthfully dressed poet, listened grimly while Newmyer outlined her side of the case. Stinson, 56, well-tailored in blue with a red tie, red breast pocket handkerchief, was equally grim, conferring frequently with his lawyers, George D. Horning, jr., and Carroll L. Beedy, former Representative from Maine. Stinson studied engineering at Columbia University, later became a State Department lawyer, exhibited pictures in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and the Corcoran art galleries and—as it came out yesterday—is writing a book himself. He and Harriet McKee were divorced in 1937 shortly before he married the present Mrs. Stinson.

Newmyer said Stinson became acquainted with Mrs. Stinson by leaving his card at her home, 2419 Wyoming avenue northwest, and following it up with telephone and personal calls until he moved into a guest room at the Crounse place. Newmyer said Stinson conspired with Miss Jessica Shoemaker, Mrs. Stinson's nurse, to drug her mistress until she married Stinson. Mrs. Stinson staggered while being married, because of the drugs, Newmyer said.

Mrs. Stinson put $230,000 in trust for herself, to go to Stinson after she died, Newmyer said, and when they separated she settled $27,000 on him. Mrs. Stinson has other suits pending to get this money back. What she wants of Stinson is an annulment, to which Newmyer said she was entitled because the marriage never was consummated.

Beedy then told Judge Luhring it was Mrs. Stinson who sought the acquaintance with her husband and that it was she who asked for the frequent dates they had during their courtship, that it was she who wanted Stinson to have her real property and thought of the trust funds. And, said Beedy, it was Mrs. Stinson who wanted to get married, because when she was about to set up the trusts she told Stinson, "I think I want you to marry me first."

Then the couple spent some time in Nova Scotia, Beedy said. Mrs. Stinson was very jealous of Stinson and some girl artists who were painting on the same beach.

Mrs. Stinson was happy about being married, Beedy said, and knew perfectly well what she was doing. The honeymoon was started in Portland, Me. The marriage was so consummated, Beedy added, and the defense could prove it, so that Mrs. Stinson was not entitled to an annulment.

Stinson didn't want to take money from his wife when they separated, said Beedy, but asked for a loan of $40,000 so he could finish a book he was writing about the Supreme Court. Later he reduced this request to $30,000, but Mrs. Stinson refused to lend the money and insisted on giving her husband outright $27,000. Beedy said Stinson spent most of the $27,000 in treatments for his nerves after the separation.

The only witness yesterday was Mrs. Stinson, who told in a small, clear voice about how unhappy she was before her marriage and how she set up the trust funds for her husband.

Labor Act Hearing Delay Is Sought to delay them beyond the March 10 date previously set.

Labor

"It is the earnest wish of all that the move initiated by our President may prove successful," Thomas told the Senate. "The negotiations would undoubtedly be carried on at the same time as our hearings. This I am sure would be deemed unfortunate by all."

Later, President Green, whose A. F. L. amendments to the Wagner labor act have been introduced by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, wrote a letter to Thomas protesting the postponement. Thomas said Green felt "there was no connection between the hearings and the peace negotiations." The Utah Senator said he will read Green's letter to the committee today, and at the same time outline his reasons for seeking a postponement."

Burke, chief Senate foe of the National Labor Relations Board as now constituted, and author of amendments to separate its judicial and investigative functions, said there is "merit" in a postponement if not delayed beyond April 1.

Senator Holman, author of another set of amendments, said he would not insist upon hearings before April 1, but said "the committee should not wait until it is too late to hold hearings. Congress shouldn't cease functioning because of these peace efforts."

Strike

effort toward settlement, Steelman added:

"Although the parties are miles apart on fundamental points, as long as conferences last there is hope. Anything may happen in the next 24 hours."

Hotels Refuse Agreement

Negotiations were broken off when hotels refused to agree categorically to the Labor Department's proposal to which labor officials had fully agreed, Steelman said.

It was learned, however, that the proposals they had accepted were "not exactly" those offered by the conciliation service, but those that labor factions believed had been arrived at in independent mediation efforts.

The statements forwarded to the conciliation service revealed "variations and differences" suggested by hotel operators were considered so vital by the union as to nullify all peace efforts to date.

Arbitration Proves Bar

Main differences appeared in the proposal for an impartial arbitration board. It was understood that operators had agreed to arbitration but had stipulated that layoffs, promotions and discharges remain under control of operators.

For some time the management of the Washington Hotel has been negotiating with the union on "closed shop" demands.

A modified closed shop agreement, it is understood, had been accepted by the union. It provides that nonunion hotel workers, employed when the strike was called, will continue to hold their positions, but that all replacements shall be made from union ranks.

Strikebreakers Must Go

If the union cannot supply new help within 24 hours after application is made, the hotels—under this proposed contract—may hire nonunion workers, but they must become union members after a specified length of time. Strikebreakers, now admittedly employed by certain hotels, must go after a settlement has been reached.

Should nothing come of today's Labor Department conference, the union announced, it is prepared to "carry on all summer if necessary." Locals affiliated throughout the country with the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance have wired offers of help to headquarters here, according to Samuel Levine, attorney for the local group.

The hotel men also insist they are operating normally and can continue to function "indefinitely" should the strike remain in force.

Oil Stock Dealer's Mail List Good

Citizens Seek New Women's Bureau Here

Kalorama Group Also Asks 10 Per Cent Increase In Police Force

Demands that a start be made on the new Police Women's Bureau and House of Detention and that the Metropolitan Police force be increased 10 per cent were voiced last night by the Kalorama Citizens' Association.

The influential Northwest Washington organization called attention of District authorities to the inadequacy of facilities for handling prisoners at the bureau, now housed in the old Second Precinct Station at 1224 Fifth street northwest.

Law enforcement needs of the District exceed the present strength of the police department, the association declared.

In other resolutions the organization approved the action of the House District Committee in urging a $200,000 appropriation for Gallinger Hospital in the 1939-1940 supply bill and the Capper-Kennedy bill to provide election of District delegates to national conventions by local suffrage.

Stanton Park

The Griffenhagen report was approved in principle by the Stanton Park Citizens Association, in a resolution urging that the city council it proposes be elected by District residents. The Overton formula for regulating fiscal relations between the District and the Federal Government was approved without change in a resolution introduced by William J. Bartle.

At the request of MH. E. Marlow, president of the Marlow Coal Co., Bartle also introduced a resolution urging that commercial trucks be forbidden to park near parks and playgrounds. This and another resolution advocating the prohibition of swimming in the fountain in front of Union Station were adopted unanimously.

Bartle and James P. Farmer were appointed a committee of two to investigate the proposed removal of the Seventh street and Maryland avenue branch postoffice. On the motion of Harry N. Stull, the date of meeting was changed from the second Monday of each month to the second Tuesday.

The association went on record favoring the East Capitol site for the proposed municipal auditorium. William E. Monroe, introducing the resolution, held it to be the most logical site as the land is Government owned, parking space is adequate and nearby railroad sidings could be enlarged for the benefit of out-of-town visitors.

Parkview

Pedestrian control regulations and the efforts of the Traffic Department to enforce them were commended by the Parkview Citizens Association. Other resolutions commended the use of parking meters and asked that more of them be installed and requested the Traffic Department to investigate the use of loading spaces in the downtown area with a view to opening some of them to private parking.

Lieut. John T. Wittstatt, of the Tenth Precinct, spoke on pedestrian control, asking for the co-operation of members of the association and their friends. George Frech, chairman of the property value committee, discussed various proposals for the betterment of the community.

The association indorsed the Metropolitan Police Boys Club drive for funds, and all members were urged to contribute to it.

West End

The investigation of the District's source of milk and cream by the House District Committee, authorized by the House yesterday, was indorsed by the West End Citizens Association.

Other resolutions adopted supported the proposed Congressional investigation of retain liquor stores in the District, opposed any sales tax, and supported President Roosevelt's recommendation that four old warships, the Hartford, the Constellation, the Olympia, and one ship that saw action in the world war, be brought to Washington as a permanent naval exhibition.

Northeast

Establishment of a District Racing Board, as proposed in Congress, was disapproved by the Northeast Citizens Association. The bill would encourage out-of-town interests to establish race tracks in the Washington area, the association continued.

Other resolutions indorsed a bill providing for the refunding of taxes erroneously assessed for a District subway and an insurance rating bureau to control local premiums.

The association adopted a resolution for the "cleaning up" of the District, the Traffic Bureau and the Police Headquarters buildings.

Piney Branch

Community control by Citizens' Associations of the right to grant liquor licenses was advocated last night in a discussion at the Piney Branch Citizens' Association meeting. Although no action was taken the propriety of limiting the Alchohol Beverage Control Board's powers was referred to a special committee for study.

Cleveland Park

Representative Patrick, of Alabama, will be the speaker on Cleveland Park Night Thursday at the Hamilton Hotel, it was announced last night at a meeting of the Cleveland Park Businessmen's Association. The affair will be sponsored by the Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

A traffic light at Ordway street and Connecticut avenue northwest was urged by the organization. A style show in May for both men and women is being planned, Bernard Elman, association secretary, told the meeting.

Broker Row's Daddy Brown, 81, Once Usurped Sherman's Seat

HERBERT H. BROWN

Atlantan Recalls Time He Unwittingly Flouted Sheridan by Keeping Place While Sherman Was Absent From Railroad Car

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are,—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

The full name is Herbert H. Brown but along Washington's "broker's row" on Fifteenth street, in Wall Street and almost anywhere that a stock ticker is to be found they call him Daddy Brown.

At the age of 81 years and four months, he remains as much the fire-eatin' galoot he was the day in the 70's he usurped Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's seat in a railroad car.

And "Daddy" an Atlantan at that.

"You can't sit here, this seat is reserved," a severe gentleman informed Mr. Brown, who had boarded the train in Wilmington, Del., en route to New York. But the interloper made himself comfortable opposite the angry stranger, nevertheless.

In a few moments Gen. Sherman appeared. He was instantly recognized by Mr. Brown, who had met him the previous year at a reception in Atlanta. The younger man arose, offered the seat and introduced himself.

"Meet Gen. Sheridan," said Gen. Sherman, nodding toward the man who had tried to hold his seat. Whereupon Mr. Brown nearly keeled over.

Mobile Treasury of Stories of South

Daddy Brown, who goes daily to his desk at Fenner & Beane's, though he was retired from his duties there in 1928, is a mobile treasury of stories about the Reconstruction Era of the South. He has been approached on going to Hollywood to give technical advice in the production of "Gone With the Wind." He was a passenger on the first trip made by a street car (mule drawn) in Atlanta and he opened the first branch stock exchange ever established in the Georgia metropolis.

With all that, however, Daddy Brown lives in the present—and the future—rather than the past. He can spin yarns until the cows come home about post-war days in his native State, but he is every bit as articulate and authoritative on financial matters of the present day.

Even as he was being interviewed at his desk a customer came up and asked for some advice on stocks. Daddy Brown today is a sort of investment counsel. His favorites at the moment are rails and utilities.

After listening to Secretary Harry Hopkins' Des Moines radio speech February 24, the octogenarian penned a letter to his financial friends in New York, Atlanta, Washington and elsewhere.

"Harry Hopkins has spoken," he wrote. "He was the pleasant surprise I looked for. He has taken fear and surrounded it with a blanket, soaked it in kerosene and dynamite and set it on fire.

'Wall Street Will Wear Smile That Won't Come Off'

"We are going to have one of the biggest markets we have seen in years and the rails and utilities will, I think, lead the market. War is the only thing that would stop it and that would only be temporary . . . Recovery has taken the place of reform and as this materializes with volume and strength, Wall Street will wear the smile that won't come off for many a day."

Daddy Brown received many acknowledgments of the letter from bigwigs in financial circles.

He left Atlanta for New York in 1907, when he became connected with the Cotton Exchange. He came to Washington in 1914 to run the local office of N. L. Carpenter & Co., remaining until 1922. To him the most memorable event of this period was the time he was invited to the White House by President Wilson to tell his Southern stories.

"The one about the darky who was acquitted on charges of operating an illicit still had the President in stitches," says Daddy Brown.

He and his wife came here from Atlanta to make their home in 1929, following his "retirement."

Daddy Brown says he has a trunkful of Confederate money at his home, 2200 Nineteenth street northwest. He gave this department a few thousand dollars worth for souvenirs. A few days ago he went into a drug store, asked for a sandwich and glass of buttermilk and placed a $500 bill, Confederate of course, on the counter.

"And I'll be doggoned if the clerk didn't take it in payment, saying he could use the currency for his scrap book," said Daddy Brown.

Citizens' Tax Group Told Task Is Done

House Committee Takes Full Blame For Morgan Changes In District Bill

Chairman Jack Nichols, of the House sub-committee on District taxation, yesterday came to the defense of Jo V. Morgan, of the Board of Tax Appeals, and took full blame for directing him to make changes in the pending tax bill without consulting citizen members of the Citizens Advisory Tax Committee.

Explaining that the $13,000,000 tax program is now out of the hands of the advisory committee, Nichols stated that the sub-committee had directed Morgan to make tentative revisions in the "committee print." It was those changes which aroused L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and a member of the advisory committee, last week.

Committee's Task Done

Nichols, in a formal statement, bluntly told the advisory committee that its task has been completed and that it no longer has a hand in drafting the revenue legislation. Its advice, he added, is welcomed, but Morgan, though a member of the advisory committee, is now working under the House sub-committee's direction because of his thorough knowledge of local tax legislation.

"No dubt many changes will be made in the draft of the bill as proposed by Dr. Chester B. Pond and approved by the citizens advisory committee," Nichols said.

"At the outset of the consideration by the sub-committee of the Pond report, it was discovered by the chairman that some principles as laid down in the temporary draft were unworkable, and at the direction of the sub-committee, Mr. Morgan, in his capacity as a tax expert, was directed to make certain changes to carry out the direction given him by the sub-committee, not in his capacity as a member of the citizens advisory committee, because the work of that committee had been finished but in his capacity as a member of the board of tax appeals, an official of the District of Columbia, and in his capacity as advisor to the sub-committee on fiscal affairs.

Working for Sub-Committee

"This work was started by Mr. Morgan at the direction of the chairman of the sub-committee on Friday, March 2, he being instructed to finish this assignment so that the committee print of the bill could be ready for consideration of the sub-committee by Monday morning, March 6.

"While there is nothing unusual, strange or irregular about this proceeding, I make this statement for the purpose of advising those who are interested that the criticism directed at Mr. Morgan is both unfair and untimely, because his actions have all been in his official capacity and at the direction of the sub-committee on fiscal affairs."

Nichols added that Morgan will be retained by the sub-committee in an advisory committee. Hearings on the tax program will be resumed tomorrow morning.

$80 and 5 Radios Lost in 2 Robberies

Yeggmen cracked a safe at the Federal Lithograph Co., 1529 Seventh street northwest, early yesterday but were unsuccessful with one at Bailey's Tire Store, 1417 P street northwest.

Charles Williams, owner of the lithographing company, said the intruders escaped with between $80 and $100, two bottles of whisky and a silver cocktail set.

Five radios, valued at $50, were taken from the tire shop.

First Congregational Choir Well-Received In Eighth Lenten Concert at Constitution Hall

Program Opens With Arrangement Of Luther's Hymn

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Ruby Smith Stahl conducts the First Congregational Church Choir A Cappella in its eighth annual Lenten concert Monday night in Constitution Hall. Program of religious music by Luther, Palestrina, Arkhangelski, Robertson, Shaw, Cain, Gaul, Parry, Grechaninov, Christiansen, Richter, Thiman, Wetzel, Daniels, Trowbridge and Wood.

Excellent singing a cappella and an interesting program rewarded those who attended the eighth annual Lenten concert of First Congregational Church Choir last evening in Constitution Hall. In conformity with the religious character of the music, applause was confined to the intermissions, and there were no interruptions of the induced moods. In view of the heightened enjoyment consequent upon these silent intervals, it might be well to try the effect of quiet listening at secular concerts.

It so happens that I had not heard this choir for two seasons, and in that interim a definite gain in vocal quality has been made. There had previously been manifest the careful training of Ruby Smith Stahl in the balance of voices and the accuracy of polyphonic passages, but there is now evident an enhanced purity of tone. The vocal production of the choir as a whole has more ease, and even in fortissimo one is aware of no strain. Particularly commendable is the clarity of the soprano voices and the rondure of their upper tones.

The thoroughly enjoyable programa began with Monson's arrangement of Luther's hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," with polyphony altering the simple lines of the sturdy tune. In the first group were contained Palestrina's "O Bone Jesu," Arkhangelski's "Hear My Prayer," Robertson's "Keltic Hymn," Geoffrey Shaw's "Haw Far Is It To Bethlehem," and Noble Cain's stirring "The Music of Life."

In the second group were clustered six compositions remarkable for fine choral writing and for varying beauties of theme and harmony: Harvey Gaul's "Christ of the Fields and Flowers," Hubert Parry's "Welcome, Yule," Grechaninov's "Holy, Radiant Light," Melius Christiansen's "Lullaby on Christmas Eve," Willy Richter's "The Creation" for male voices, and Noble Cain's arrangement of "By and By."

"Christmas in the Wood" by Mabel Daniels was the outstanding work in the final group, which included Thiman's "The Holly and the Ivy," an "Ave Maria" by Wetzel, Christiansen's "Lost in the Night," Trowbridge's "Grace Be Unto You," and Charles Wood's "Glory, Honor and Laud."

Shifts Ordered In Navy Medical Commands Here

A shift in medical command posts here will take place the end of this month, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Capt. Robert E. Hoyt, on duty at the New York Navy Yard, will command the Naval Dispensary. He will relieve Capt. Benjamin H. Dorsey, who becomes president of the naval retiring board at the Navy Department and will be promoted to rear admiral.

Capt. George C. Thomas, commanding the Naval Hospital, will take command of the hospital at the Naval Academy. Capt. Edgar Woods, in charge of the Annapolis medical unit, will take charge of the local hospital, under orders issued last week.

Lutheran Says Christianity Needs No 'Isms

The cross of Jesus contains all the good that we need for the preservation and welfare of mankind, Dr. Ralph H. Long, executive secretary of the National Lutheran Council and executive of the Lutheran World Convention, said last night in a sermon at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation.

The power of the cross does not need "to be supplemented by the many isms and revolutionary programs being proposed in the world today," he declared.

His sermon was part of the Lenten program arranged by the Lutheran Ministerial Association, of which the Rev. Edward Goetz, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, is president.

Capital News In Brief

Anderson Talk Revives

The Marian Anderson incident was cited last night by Angelo Herndon at a Communist party meeting in the Murray Casino, as a reflection of growing interest of various organized groups in problems of the American colored population.

The Board of Education first refused the use of Central High School to the colored contralto then rescinded its action. The D. A. R. refused use of its hall because of an earlier booking.

Herndon depicted the Daughters of the American Revolution as innocently "playing around" with fascism, and the Board of Education as with more deliberation promoting the Fascist movement by "taking action calculated to establish permanently a breach between white and colored elements of the population."

'McNutt for President

The District is to have its own "McNutt for President" club, a group of Indiana Democrats living here, announced.

Arranging for the observance today of the birth anniversary of the late Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, the organization will back the candidacy of former Indiana Gov. Paul V. McNutt with a nucleus formed from the membership of the Thomas Marshall Club here.

Vreeland to Aid Firemen

Support of the 60-hour bill for firemen and legislation to permit affiliation of the District Firemen's Association with the International Association of Firefighters was pledged last night by Representative Albert L. Vreeland, of New Jersey.

Vreeland addressed a meeting of the association at Pythian Hall, 1012 Ninth street northwest.

Auto Badly Hurts Boy, 3

Donald, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Collins, was struck and seriously injured by an automobile in front of his home at 6604 Western avenue yesterday.

A physician who treated him at home said he appeared to have suffered internal injuries and a brain concussion. Police said the driver of the car was Wilfred D. Myers, 23, of 6817 Laurel street northwest.

D. C. Divorce Gets Precedence Over Maryland Decree

The doctrine that divorces valid where they are obtained are binding anywhere, was sharply limited yesterday by the District Court of Appeals, which held that a man who deserts his wife in Washington cannot get a legal divorce in Maryland after he moves there.

Mrs. Clara Kraskin, employe of an F street jewelry firm, who lives at 1416 Webster street northwest, won by the decision approval of the divorce she got from Dr. Lewis H. Kraskin, optometrist, in 1935 after he had obtained one from her.

The Kraskins married in 1917 and lived here until they separated in 1932, Dr. Kraskin going to Takoma Park. Three years later he charged his wife, in a Maryland court, with desertion and was granted a divorce after hearings in which she was not represented. She then sued him in Washington, asking divorce, alimony and custody of their child.

More Funds To Be Asked For Gallinger

$200,000 Addition Provided in Bill Held Insufficient For Efficient Staff

Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee; Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman of the sub-committee on hospitals, and other committee members will make a plea for more funds for personnel at Gallinger Hospital today to Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations.

Yesterday the full committee approved the Bates sub-committee's report on Gallinger, based on a series of public hearings. The sub-committee recommended the District supply bill carry an additional $200,000 in appropriations for the hospital.

The following additional full-time employes will be recommended:

A medical officer, 40 graduate nurses, 2 dietitians, 3 trained laboratory workers, 4 social workers, 40 nurse aids and 30 orderlies.

Randolph praised the sub-committee for its "diligence and fairness" in conducting the investigation.

The House, holding its second District day session, passed one bill. It permits local firemen to join the International Firefighters Association, now barred by law.

Navy to Name Destroyer After Wainwright Clan

The Navy will honor one of its most famous families this spring, christening a fast new destroyer with a name deeply engraved in our military and naval history.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced yesterday that he had designated Mrs. Henry Meiggs of Scarsdale, N. Y., to sponsor Destroyer No. 419, named in honor of her great-grandfather, Comdr. Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright, commander of Admiral Porter's flagship who was killed in action during the Civil War, and three other Wainwrights.

The vessel which will be launched at the Norfolk Navy Yard, June 1, is also named for Ens. Jonathan Mayhew Wainwright, jr., Comdr. Richard Wainwright, and Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright. The latter lived here for many years prior to his death in 1926.

The ever-changing pattern of undergraduate life and the high degree of student responsibility at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., were extolled last night by Dr. James L. McConaughy, lieutenant governor of Connecticut.

"There is absolutely no mold, no conformity at Wesleyan, but there is a very great degree of student responsibility," he told Washington alumni of the university.

Wesleyan, he continued, "is a lively growing place. Its products, both in the past and today, are worthy of pride."

Dr. McConaughy, who is president of the university, drew attention to the fact that Wesleyan draws its student body from all over the world.

"We have a boy from Germany," he stated, "and Nazi though he be, he is one of the finest spirited boys on the campus."

Representative Hancock, of New York, also spoke.

Pius Pleads For Peace in FirstAllocution

Didn't Wish Pontificate, Tells Cardinals; Sees Kennedy Family

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, March 13.—Determined to strive for world peace, Pope Pius XII turned today to routine labor from the historic coronation ceremonies.

One of the first acts after his coronation yesterday, it was disclosed today, was to pronounce an allocution before the cardinals reiterating his desire for peace.

"We grasp the tiller of St. Peter's ship with the intention of guiding it to the port of peace across so many waves and tempests," several cardinals quoted him as saying.

Didn't Seek Election

The Pontiff told them he had not foreseen his election to the papacy and had not wished it, but that he had bowed to the will of God.

Today the Pope received Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to London, who had attended yesterday's coronation as the official representative of President Roosevelt. With the envoy were Mrs Kennedy and all of their nine children except Joseph P. Kennedy, jr., who was unable to come here from Spain in time for the coronation.

Kennedy said the Pontiff expressed "great admiration for President Roosevelt's stand for religion." Kennedy said also that Pope Pius "expressed gratitude to President Roosevelt for having sent a representative" to the coronation.

This afternoon Luigi Cardinal Maglione, the new papal secretary of state, was host on the Pope's behalf at the papal summer palace to the cardinals and members of the papal court and foreign missions.

Ambassador and Mrs. Kennedy, who were among the guests topped off a busy day by meeting Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and the countess, a daughter of Premier Mussolini, at a dinner for the count at the American Embassy.

Didn't Wish It

In his allocution to the cardinals the Pope said "Divine Providence in its mysterious wisdom has raised us * * to such dignity and such heights of authority, even though we did not wish it and did not foresee it, as to make not only us tremble for its sublimity and unusual nature and most heavy burden, but also anyone else."

"For this reason," he continued, "we do not place our faith in our own merits and capacities, but, trusting in the grace of God, we bow our head before His most powerful and all-wise will."

The Pope said he was "fully conscious" of "what is expected from the throne of Peter, not only by those who are closely joined to us in faith and charity, but also by not a few brethren separated from us and by almost all the human family eager for peace in this hour in which the majesty and weight of the pontifical diadem rests upon our brow."

'Jeeter' Barton Reprimanded By Actors for Off-Stage Cussing

'Tobacco Road' Actresses Object to His Reactions to Their Marcelled Hair and Demands for Soft Dirt to Kneel In

By the United Press.

New York, March 13.—James Barton, who as Jeeter Lester has long been using the saltiest language heard on the Braodway stage in many a season, today was found guilty of offstage cussing.

The Actors Equity Association recommended that the Equity council formally reprimand Barton, who quit the cast of "Tobacco Road" last month, for the naughty words he used in altercation with lady members of the cast.

Cynthia Arden, who plays the hare-lipped halfwit Ellie May, and Ann Derem, who plays Jeeter's wife, complained to Equity that while they didn't mind Jeeter's sharecropper billingsgate, Barton's backstage utterances pinked their ears.

Four members of the "Tobacco Road" cast came to Barton's defense, testifying there was provocation for cussing in the fact that Miss Arden desired to prettify the ragged and unkempt character of Ellie May by keeping her hair marcelled, an offense to the artistic sensibilities of Actor Barton, and that Elaine Ellis, playing Jeeter's daughter, demanded soft earth to kneel on during the play.

The soft dirt raised a dust which irritated Barton's throat, he complained, but he was overruled and quit the role which he had played four years on Broadway and on the road.

The real reason for the row, according to talk along Broadway, is that the entire cast is a victim of overlong propinquity. "Tobacco Road" has been playing since December 4, 1933, and the actors have begun to get on each other's nerves.

There have been some changes in the cast since the opening but for the most part the players have been together for years with but brief vacations. Backstage quarrels have been increasingly frequent.

Equity apparently took this into account in ordering only a reprimand for Barton.

It was much more severe in the case of the late Jeanne Eagles, who was fined two weeks' pay and suspended for 18 months after a road company of "Rain" was forced to disband because of her frequent absences and strange performances. She died soon after the suspension was lifted.

Mother Church Lecturer Speaks Here

Charles V. Winn Discusses Ministry Of Christian Science

A lecture on "Christian Science: Its Compassionate and Loving Ministry," was delivered last evening by Charles V. Winn, C.S.B., of Pasadena, Calif., in Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, under the auspices of that church.

The lecturer, who is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., was introduced by John M. Hall, first reader of Fourth Church. Mr. Winn said, in part:

Since God is mind, the one infinite good, the only power, He is the only presence. He who is all-power must be ever-present, for the supreme power of the universe could not be absent from the universe. How does God's power become operative in our experience? By the realization of His presence!

The compassionate and loving ministry of Christian Science brings harmony to every situation, heals disease, uplifts human relationships into the realm of the good and true. The Psalmist sang, "Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name; the upright shall dwell in thy presence." All that is ever present in God's creation is that which He has brought into being. Infinite Mind and divine good has brought forth its own pure and perfect ideas, and they are all that are ever present or expressed. As we perceive and discern God's presence we become conscious of harmony, not discord; love, not hate; joy, not sorrow; affluence, not want; goodness and virtue, not sin and evil. The man whose back is turned toward the sunset does not see its beauty and grandeur; he is not looking in the right direction. Christian Science keeps us looking in the right direction. It enables us to hold our gaze Godward, not earthward; to Mind's perfect expression, not to error's false presentments; to what God has done and which error has never undone.

Legion of Decency Objected to 37 Films Last Year

New York, March 13 (AP).—The National Legion of Decency reported today that in the year ended last November its New York office reviewed 456 domestic feature movies and 79 foreign pictures, with these judgments:

Unobjectionable for general patronage, 332; unobjectionable for adults, 164; objectionable in part, 32; condemned, 5, and special classification, 2.

The five condemned were products of minor producers, mostly foreign.

The two separately classified were "The Birth of a Baby," rated as "unsuitable for general theatrical exhibition;" and "Blockade," of which it was said: "Many will regard this picture as containing propaganda in favor of one side in the present struggle in Spain."

Georgia House Drops Attack on Robert Contract

Atlanta, Ga., March 13 (U.P.).—The House of Representatives today tabled a resolution that would have repudiated the contract by which Georgia agreed to give the Atlanta engineering firm, headed by L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., a 6 per cent fee on a $5,000,000 building program.

The contract had been attacked on the basis of an allegation that 1 per cent of the fee was for "promotional activities" of Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Executive Committee, in securing allotments of Federal funds.

Dude Ranches' Horse Operas Feature Desert Dream Princes

Cowhands in $50 Boots Spend Most Of Their Time Twanging Guitars; Tunes Were Brought From Tahiti

By Inez Robb.

Palm Springs, Calif., March 13. At long last it can be told that I am that way about a horse opera. I want to rearrange my life so I can stay out here indefinitely and make goo-goo eyes at the cowboys—these desert dream princes who swashbuckle around in 10-gallon hats, $50 boots, $1.98 levis and made-to-order shirts.

INEZ ROBB

There's a saying in these parts that the cowhands spend one-third of their time wrangling horses, one-third whanging a guitar, singing and providing horse opera atmosphere for the dudes, and the other third, fighting for their honor.

It's unlikely that any cowhand could land a job here if he were unable to carry a tune and take over the guitar in an emergency. In off-hours, the cowboys care for the hundreds of horses ridden by athletic dudes.

It's fact that the cowboy songs are sung with a Tahitian lilt in Palm Springs. Johnny Boyle, first tenor among the wranglers, shipped to Tahiti to see what he could see once upon a time.

He returned with a complete Tahitian musical repertoire, which the other hands have picked up. Boyle's boots are the $75 kind the dudes can't afford. The lower part is black, but the upper part is pale cream kid, embossed with purple leather butterflies with green spots on their wings.

By mid-morning, it was hotter than sin. Yet Charlie Farrell was making a date to go skiing next day. Although the ambitious chef can fry eggs on the sidewalk here in the midday sun, it takes only two hours by automobile to get into snow-covered mountains.

One last word. When you come to the desert, don't forget to bring a pair of tweezers. When you fall into your first cactus, you'll know why.

Steinhardt's Name Sent to Senate

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Laurence A. Steinhardt, American Ambassador to Peru, to the ambassadorial post in Soviet Russia which has been vacant since the transfer last May of Joseph H. Davies to Belgium.

Diplomatic circles believed that once the Senate has confirmed Steinhardt, the Soviet government will return its Ambassador, or a successor, to the United States. Ambassador Troyanovsky returned to Moscow last fall and informed observers believed his long stay due to this Government's failure to appoint a successor to Davies.

6-Foot Wife Wed On Bet, Dwarf Says

Los Angeles, March 13 (AP).—Billy Curtis, 3 feet 7 inches tall, filed suit today for annulment of his marriage last year to Lois de-Fee Curtis, 6-foot 4-inch night club "bouncer," asserting she told him she wed "on a wager to carry out a publicity stunt."

Curtis said they lived together only one day.

BABY'S HEAD COLD Misery

DO THIS: Massage his throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub and tuck him into bed. Next, put a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; place a newspaper or sheet over the child's head like a tent, covering the bowl too, so the medicated vapors can be inhaled for several minutes. This treatment loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion. Long after he relaxes into peaceful sleep, VapoRub's poultice-and-vapor action is still bringing relief—and you can get a good night's rest too.

Coster Paid $100,000 to Hide Past, Amen Says

New York, March 13 (I.N.S.).—F. Donald Coster staved off for a time disclosure of his criminal past as Philip Musica by paying a Brooklyn politician $100,000 hush money, Assistant Attorney General John Harlan Amen said today.

The politician will be named later this week, when an indictment is expected, according to Amen.

D.A.R. Attacks Mrs. Roosevelt

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 13 (I.N.S.). Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was "playing politics" when she resigned from the Daughters of the American Revolution, it was charged at the Cincinnati chapter meeting today.

Mrs. Charles F. Robb, said Mrs. Roosevelt had 'an eye on the Negro vote" when she said she was dropping her membership because the D. A. R. refused permission to Marian Anderson, colored contralto, to give a concert in the organization's hall at Washington.

50-Mile Blaze Rages in Florida

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., March 13 (AP).—A mucklands and sawgrass fire raged over a 50-mile front west and southwest of here tonight, threatening orange groves and truck farms and casting a smoke pall over southeastern Florida cities.

Workers threw up firebreaks in an effort to check the flames which, fanned by a brisk wind, had advanced near the small community of Griffin and were approaching groves and farms west of Davie.

Russian Convicted As Spy Posts Bail

Los Angeles, March 13 (U.P.).—Mikhail Gorin, Russian travel agent convicted last week on three counts of espionage and conspiracy, was released from the county jail tonight on $50,000 bail.

His co-defendant, Hafis Salich, former United States Naval Intelligence attache, convicted with him, remained in jail, unable to meet the bond requirement. The pair will be sentenced Monday.

Unemployment Board Salary Delay Averted

Need for Independent D. C. Agency Shown, Director Asserts

Pay for nearly 200 employes of the District Unemployment Compensation Board probably will be ready on schedule tomorrow or at least the next day, Social Security Board officials announced yesterday.

The board will meet this morning to allocate funds for the $12,000 pay roll, officials said.

Earlier John Marshall, unemployment compensation director, said he had received word from the SSB the $12,000 check would not be issued until Thursday.

He said it was the first time serious delay in meeting the pay roll threatened.

Marshall said the threatened delay showed the need for a bill before Congress to make the Unemployment Compensation Board an independent agency. He pointed out the tie-up came at a time when nearly $11,000,000 in compensation funds is on deposit in the Treasury.

Pending Measure Would Halt Flight Of Alien-Smuggler

Somewhere on the Pacific Coast, the leader of a ring of alien-smugglers is about to skip the country.

The man, whose testimony would prove invaluable in shedding light on methods of circumventing American immigration laws, will make his escape unless the House speedily passes a resolution to be brought before it today, according to Chairman Dickstein, of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

The resolution, introduced by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, would empower the committee to issue subpenas and to conduct an extensive investigation into the extent of alien-smuggling in the United States, into "dual nationality" and into the status of American laws of immigration, deportation, naturalization and expatriation, with recommendations for their improvement.

ORTIZ TO GET TEST AGAINST TIGERS

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 13.

There is no truth to the report that the Washington ball club fired its scouts a couple of years ago and replaced them with a crew of native-boy bush beaters. But the origin of the rumor is understandable. One look around the Nats' camp and the impression is that somebody must have scoured the canebrakes and flushed a covey of Cuban ball players.

POVICH

Joe Cambria brought 'em back alive, anyway, and at present in the Nats' camp are three Cubans and a Venezuelan who somehow migrated to the island republic. Cambria says they are ball players and some of the Nats' bosses are beginning to agree with him.

It may not be a happy lot that the Cubans face in the big leagues, if they stick in the big leagues. Nobody ever accused major league ball players of being highly intelligent as a class and a great many of them border on the kind of clucks who would call themsleves 200 per cent Americans. They are apt to resent this mass invasion of Cubans.

There have been Cuban players in the big leagues before, of course, but their appearance was rare. Most notable, perhaps, was Dolf Luque, the cordovan-skinned pitcher who served so capably with the Reds and Giants. There was not much time for his colleagues to work up much resentment against Luque because he established himself as a swell pitcher almost from the outset.

Estalella on the Spot

But in the case of the Nats' Cubans, resentment is apt to rear its stupid head. The American League is amply populated by Southern boys who set great store by skin pigmentation, and will show it according to the evidence at hand. The evidence at hand concerns chiefly young Bobby Estalella, the Cuban who has been around in the majors for four years.

A fellow like Buck Newsom, for example, used to take delight in chucking his fast ball at Estalella's head and putting the Cuban strictly on his own responsibility. It went hard with Estalella in the Piedmont League. Comprised of Carolina and Virginia teams, last year. Southern pitchers in that league would knock Bobby down just for the fun of it, or even with more serious purpose.

To Estalella's everlasting credit is the fact that he rounded out a .386 batting average to lead the Piedmont League in hitting, in runs driven in and in home runs. Because he never knew when a 200 per cent American was aiming at his head or at the plate, he had to keep a discreet foot in the bucket for the most part. It was a rare afternoon, indeed, in the Piedmont League last summer when Estalella didn't have to hit the dirt to keep from getting beaned.

More than any of the other Cubans, Estalella will be on the spot if he stays with the Nats this year. Because he does not happen to be a pitcher. The others are pitchers and by reason of that fact they have retaliatory weapons. The man who is next at bat against the fast ball of such as Roberto Ortiz is apt to think twice before firing at the big Cuban with anger.

Ty Cobb Was Accused

Thus by grace of the fact that they are pitchers, the other Cubans may escape the danger of bodily injury. It recalls the charge often leveled against Ty Cobb whose violent and reckless base running with spikes high was the terror of infielders for 20 years. There were baseball men with no great admiration for Cobb who always say that Ty would not have been so tough if he played the infield himself. But as an outfielder, far, far from the spikes of the enemy, he was safe from retaliation.

It would be difficult to work up a case of dislike for any of the Latins Scout Cambria has brought to the Nats. Little Estalella, funny even to look at, smiles with or without excuse. Big Roberto Ortiz, of the powerful fast ball, is almost childish in his naivete and is making an earnest attempt to learn the English language. Aside from the fact that Alex Alexandra, the Venezuelan, is a dark-bearded weather-beaten individual who looks as if he should be carrying a knife in his teeth to typify him completely, he seems easy enough to get along with. And Rene Monteagudo, the chubby little fellow from Santa Clara, will positively win you with his business-like manner and his grin.

This Monteagudo, incidentally, has not been getting much of a tumble from the correspondents here, but you'd have to pick him if you were naming the Cuban pitcher most likely to succeed. Of the six rookie hurlers who figured in the scrub game the other day, he was far and away the best. He's smart, too. In the year he has spent in America he has a fair speaking acquaintance with the English language.

About This Monteagudo

The Nats first encountered Monteagudo one day last spring when they stopped off at Greenville, S. C., to play their farm team. On the mound was a dark-skinned little left-hander who appeared as easy to walk around as to step over. But there was nothing funny about his pitching. He worked seven innings against the Nats and gave them exactly two hits and no runs whatsoever.

It was no less than a remarkable record that the little left-hander achieved with the eighth-place Trenton club last year. He won 19 games and lost 10. Seven of his losses were by 1-0 and 2-0 scores. He turned in one iron-man feat that was a classic. He pitched the first game of a night bill and won it, 5-0, and he pitched the second game, losing it, 1-0.

The Nats couldn't overlook that sort of pitching so they called him in at the fag end of the season. He beat the Red Sox, 5 to 3, in his first start. He went the route in two of the three starts he made in the American League. He isn't disturbed about the publicity his rival Cubans are commanding here. He shouldn't be, as long as they still pay off on performances.

Jewish C. C. Five Wins; Al's Victor

Sherwood Girls Are Winners Over FTC; Centermen Trounce Fraternity Cagers

The annual Washington Post—A. A. U. basketball tournament came through another exciting first round program last night at Eastern gym, as eight teams furnished sizzling action. A basket scored for the opposition featured the four-game entertainment, Claude Ralley, of W. W. Chambers, making the mistake in a game with Mt. Vernon Church.

Jewish Community Center won the feature 145-pound clash from Delta Phi Sigma, 50-28, with an early rush that left little doubt of the outcome.

In other engagements before a large and thrill-saturated gathering, Al's Billiard Parlor edged out the Y. M. C. A. 145-pound Flashes, 29-27; the unlimited five of W. W. Chambers took an easy 40-28 triumph over Mount Vernon Church, and Sherwood A. C. girls smashed Federal Trade Commission, 41-12.

Jewish C. C. 50-28 Victor Over D.P.S.

Without the formality of sounding out its opponent, Jewish Community Center team jumped into an early lead in its game with Delta Phi Sigma Fraternity, held a 24-13 margin at the intermission, and won almost as it pleased, 50-28.

Sid Gerstenfeld, speedy J. C. C. player, took down individual honors for the game, 13, the individual star of the losers being Billy Baldwin with 11 points. There was never much doubt of the eventual outcome, the winner holding a sizable advantage throughout. Another outstanding performer was Bernie Reichardt, of D. P. S., who paced his team's defensive and managed for 8 points besides.

Chambers Takes 40-28 Victory Over Mt. Vernon

Featured by a basket tallied by Claude Ralley, of W. W. Chambers, for the opposition, Mount Vernon Church, the Chambers team came from behind to take an easy 40-28 triumph. With the score knotted at 20-20, Talley received a pass from outside, wheeled and fired the ball neatly through the wrong goal. The edge given Mount Vernon lasted for several minutes.

"Sil" Silverman, Chambers forward, earned high point honors for the game with 13. Score at the half was 17-13 in favor of Mount Vernon.

Sherwood Sextet Romps Over FTC

Sherwood A. C. girls trounced Federal Trade Commission's game but outclassed lassies, 41 to 12, and were stamped as a first-rate opponent for the Rockville girls, who have been virtually conceded the title among the fair basketers.

Evelyn Lewis, Ruth Hull and Catherine Adamson led a Sherwood attack that accounted for a 19-5 halftime lead, and the sharpshooting Sherwooders increased the margin in the final periods. Ruth Hull's 12 points took scoring honors while Julia Drumm scored half the 12-point total of the Government girls.

District Ring Team Defeated In New York

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, March 13.—An ambitious but woefully outclassed team of Washington ringmen was eliminated tonight as the annual "Tournament of Champions," embracing boxers from 17 cities, got under way at Madison Square Garden before an audience of 16,000 fans. Bouts were staged in two rings to speed up the process of determining the 1939 champions.

Washington's lone victory was credited to Jack Clagett, smart little 135-pounder, who defeated Sal Caliendo, of this city, in his first test. Clagett, however, was eliminated in the second round by Ennis Johnson, of Richmond, Va. after a close, bruising argument.

Four members of the District delegation were knocked out, including Jimmy DeChard, highly-touted heavyweight, who was stopped by Buddy Moore, of New York, in the first round. Gilbert Mayo, 126-pounder, got a bad break in his preliminary engagement with Mario Centi, of Passaic, losing by a T. K. O. in the third round be-

Nine Nat Rookies Tagged for Jobs With Charlotte

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Mar. 13.—Nine Washington rookies are being measured for uniforms of the Charlotte, Piedmont League, club, it was disclosed today by Calvin Griffith.

According to young Griffith, president-manageтr of the Charlotte Club, the talent now in the Nats' camp which will be turned back to him:

Pitchers—Kirby Hayes, Bill Holland, Bob Overstreet, Walter Masterson, Early Wynn and Forest Brewer.

Infielders—Jim Carlin and Morris Aderholt, and Catcher Al Evans.

Griffith plans to take the players to Charlotte within a week for the start of the club's training. Carlin and Wynn were in the Piedmont League last season. The others were in league of lower classification.

Manager Bucky Harris may balk young Griffith's plans to take Masterson to Charlotte. He wants to give the lad a longer try-out with the Nats.

Jim Carter to Coach

Dayton, Ohio, March 13 (AP).—Jim Carter, former Purdue football star, was named assistant football and head basketball coach at the University of Dayton today.

A. A. U. Must Reject Claim By Borican

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Tying up the loose ends of another Madison Square Garden track season:

Nothing can be done about John Borican's claim for a 1,000-yard record of 2 minutes 8.8 seconds until it is submitted to the A. A. Champs Have Trouble Defeating Brooklyn In 11 Innings, 6-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Petersburg, March 13.—The world champion New York Yankees made a vicious and victorious debut in Grapefruit League competition this afternoon, emerging with a slightly sour, 6-5 decision over the Brooklyn daffiness boys in 11 innings.

Brooklyn stepped out of character early in the fray and assumed a 5-2 lead, but this little flaw pas was rectified by a ninth-inning relapse when the Flatbush Birdmen remembered their roles sufficiently to permit the Yanks to tie the score at 5-all. Leo Durocher, one-time Yankee infielder, was responsible for the tying run, lobbing a high, hard one into the stands after coming up with DiMaggio's grounder.

Kemp Wicker, another one-time Yank, gave up the winning run in the eleventh inning, putting the deciding marker on first in the person of Johnny Murphy, who drew a base on balls. Two force-outs were chalked up before Gallagher came through with his third hit of the game, a double down the third-base line, that sent Charley Keller home from first.

Rosar opened the Yankees' ninth-inning rally with a whistling double, scoring on Crosetti's single, after Judnich had been thrown out. Keller forced Crosetti, but Gallagher singled, and DiMaggio followed with a torrid drive down to Durocher, who, as noted above, tossed it away. A Grapefruit League hero's mantle awaited Lou Gehrig with the winning run on base, but the pressure was too great for "Ironman," and he went down swinging.

Brooklyn further embarrassed the champions by engineering a rally in the tenth and almost getting away with it. A brilliant stop by "Flash" Gordon, Yankee second sacker, with two men headed for the plate, saved the day and decision.

Cuban to Hurl Nats' First Exhibition

Harris Anxious to See Rookie Against Major Hitters; Game Slated Saturday

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 13.—Senor Roberto Ortiz, husky fugitive from the Cuban canefields, will take his fast ball to the mound against big league pitching for the first time in his life on Saturday.

The date of the unveiling of the big Cuban as a Washington pitching hopeful was set today by Manager Bucky Harris, who is impatient to learn the results of his coaching.

Harris has picked no soft spot for Ortiz in his debut. The game will be the Nats' opening exhibition of the season, against the Detroit Tigers here. The Cuban is scheduled to pitch three innings against one of the heftiest-hitting clubs in the league.

With such as Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Rudy York and Pete Fox in the Tigers' batting order, Ortiz will have cause to cut loose. On his performance against the Tigers will depend much of his immediate baseball future.

"I'm downright curious about him," Harris was saying today. "I want to see how that big bloke reacts under fire. I'll know a lot more about him after Saturday. If he can get his fast ball over the plate, we may have something."

Two Other Rookies Hurl

Ortiz will share the pitching on Saturday with two other rookie hurlers, Alex Alexandra and Joe Haynes. Alexandra's nomination as the starting pitcher follows his impressive performance in the intra-squad game of last week, and Harris is eager, also, to test him against a batting order like the Tiger. Haynes, a curve-baller, will be making his first appearance on the mound.

Harris' decision to pitch Ortiz on Saturday represents a change in his plans. He had outlined a slow program for the big Cuban, but suddenly decided to give Ortiz a test in the Nats' first game. A stomach illness of which the Cuban complained today is not expected to interfere with Harris' Saturday program.

Because of the wealth of pitchers on the squad, Harris today announced a seven-inning intra-club game for Wednesday at Tinker Field. He will send his pet left-handers, Joe Krakauskas and Ken Chase to the mound for the Regulars with Early Winn and the left-handed Kirby Hayes pitching for the Rookies.

Notes of the Nats—Dutch Leonard is nursing a bruised right knee suffered this morning when a line drive off the bat of Estalella cut him down . . . Lewis, Travis, Myer and Wasdell staged a fancy infield drill that drew the cheers of 200 spectators at the workout . . . Roberto Ortiz received some sort of a promotion today when he was ordered to move from the rookies' boarding house to the Nats' hotel . . . He had complained of mosquito bites suffered on the open porch, where he had been sleeping and showed Manager Harris proof . . . "Flies?" asked Harris through an interpreter. "No, eagles," cracked Ortiz, through the same interpreter . . . With the aid of a mirror today, Harris coached Rene Monteagudo in the art of concealing his pitches during his windup . . . Monteagudo's habit of gripping his curve with his thumb and his fast ball merely with his forefingers, tips off the batter . . . Monte Weaver has sworn off the shuffleboard game on the hotel roof, declaring he hurt his arm at the thing last year . . . It may or may not be significant but Jake Early was the catcher who figured in the infield drill of the Nats' regulars this morning despite the fact Rick Ferrell was available.

Spider Is Latest To Hound Phillies; Bites Catcher

New Braunfels, Tex., March 13 (AP). Norman Whitten, former Auburn University athlete and candidate for catcher with the Philadelphia National League baseball team, underwent an operation today for a leg infection doctors said resulted from a spider bite.

He was bitten about five days ago but did not report the injury until his knee became inflamed. The surgeon said Whitten's knee was swollen badly and infection had started to spread.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 13.—What are you interested in?

BASEBALL? To us there seemed to be something intolerably ludicrous about the inauguration of Brooklyn's radio broadcasts. For months there had been stories and talk of the coming of the great day. Fabulous sums were bruinted about Flatbush as the fee the Dodgers would receive for surrendering aerial rights. Larry McPhail went to Cincinnati to import announcer Red Barbour.

CONSIDINE

Sunday was the great day, and with a roll of drums the Daffiness Boys went on the air, six innings late. And were the victims of a no-hit, no-run game just as the same benighted athletes were blanked and drubbed in their first night game. It just couldn't happen to any other team in baseball.

PRIZE FIGHTING? This is the day the waiting world will know whether Joe Louis and Tony Galento are going to fight in New York City or be shoved, like two roistering bums, out into the alley of pugilism. Mike Jacobs will appear before the New York State Athletic Association to ask that the match be sanctioned for late June at the Yankee Stadium. There's not much chance that he'll be disappointed, even though Commissioner Brown is allergic to Galento. If Bill votes yes, Brig. Gen. J. J. Phelan and Col. D. W. Wear will outvote him.

The Louis-Galento thing looks like the first heavyweight championship fight that really doesn't need New York patronage, though of course it will get a lot of same. This is a scrap that will be supported fundamentally by Jerseyites and World's Fair visitors.

HORSES? The list of 115 Derby eligibles should answer a lot of questions as to how thoroughbreds get their names. Our favorite name-caller is still Mrs. Payne Whitney, who hit her all-time high when she decided that the name of Questionnaire and Delicacy should be hash. She has another Questionnaire colt in this year's classic, approximately named Third Degree.

There are many other beautifully named colts, Col. Matt Winn's Gallop. W. E. Boeing' Porter's Mite is by the Porter Nimima, and his October Ale is out of Friar Song. Col. Ed Bradley's Benefactor is out of the mare Patroness. Of course the Calumet Farm's Temulac is Calumet in reverse. Ted Fiorito's Tobbaco Road is out of Nicotine. Mrs. John D. Hertz's gala hour is by Sir Gallahad-One Hour, and her Book Plate is out of Flyleaf. Equestrian, Counterpoise and Equilibrium are by Equipoise. J. A. Manfuso's Affair is by Osculator, the Milky Way Farms' On Location, is out of Minema, and Joseph Pepp's Nijinsky is the foal of a mare named Tripping Toe. Alf Vanderbilt's Hysterical is out of Giggling. Sabariel, of the Three D's stock form, is by Ariel-Sable Lady, and eKnton Wright's demure filly, False Lashes, is the daughter of High Quest and Painted Vixen.

Can somebody arrange for the guy who names the Pullman cars to meet one of these thoroughbred-namers?

TRACK? We can't get too incensed over John Borican's victory over Glenn Cunningham in the 1,000-meter run in the K. of C. games. I. Borican beat the gun at the start, why wasn't another shot fired and the race restarted? The Negro was booed, too, because he wouldn't step aside and let Cunningham pass in the home stretch. Who said he was supposed to do that? The fellow broke the record for the distance. So did Glenn, who finished a step behind him in a gruelling finish. Seems to me we should be enthused that we've developed another great Olympic prospect, just about the time when we had to do so.

TENNIS? The pro game is cooked, so far as New York is concerned, for perhaps two or three more years. It died of Vines' listless performance in January, Budge's obliterating skill, and doubt aroused by the fact that Perry and Vines provided most of the money to make Budge turn pro. A contributory factor was the $7.70 price for court-side seats at Madison Square Garden.

HOCKEY? Neither am I.

Wise Prince Beats Fast Field in Tropical Park Feature

Drudgery Beats Out Sun Inplay

Winner Steps Five And Half Furlongs In 1:05 4-5; Pays A $4.80 Ticket

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 13.—Felix Spatola's veteran sprinter, Wise Prince, snapped out of a long losing streak here today and easily defeated a small but fast field in the Key Largo purse of 5½ furlongs. The son of Wise Counsellor was dropped in with 106 pounds, something new for him, and showed his appreciation by scoring a three-lengths triumph in 1:05 4-5, the fastest time of the meeting for the distance.

Drudgery, representing Winston Guest, of polo fame, had his winning streak snapped by the winner, but took second money by four lengths from K. A. Veit's Sun Inplay. Our Ketcham and Gay Balko, teh only other starters, were soundly beaten.

Wise Prince, ridden by Jimmy Ashcroft, who is likely to wind up the leading apprentice here, was a $4.80-for-two favorite. Drudgery was a close second choice.

Although the winner was favorite, there was some doubt as to whether he could get up in time at the short distance. The Spatola speedster, second in his last three outings, quickly dispelled such doubt by breaking second to Drudgery and keeping within a length or so of the dizzy early pace. Collaring the pacemaker as they turned into the stretch, Wise Prince breezed into the clear and won in hollow style. Drudgery was much the best of the others.

Three-year-old platers of the $3,000 top and $2,500 bottom variety stepped a mile and a sixteenth in the sixth race, with Jest Once, ridden by Don Meade, a slight favorite over Dicty Step, Ronnie Nash up. Dicty Step was an easy winner by four lengths, while Jest Once was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOSH, $10.00, $6.00, $4.40; ICY WIND, $11.20, $8.40; SWEEPING FLAME, $10.90.

JOSH, slow to get going, moved up swiftly while circling the field after leaving the backstretch, shook off the leaders entering the stretch, winning with speed in reserve. ICY WIND, vigorously ridden, bettered his position on the inside and held SWEEPING FLAME safe at the finish. SWEEPING FLAME, on the inside the entire trip, responded gamely to punishment in the final furlong and outlasted SPITTENIMAGE. The latter, in the thick of contention from the start, faltered in the final drive.

Daily Double, Busby and Josh, paid $209.50.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:06. Winner, Charlton Clay's gr. f. (2), by Gino—Capture. Trained by J. S. Ward. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MADAM CAPET, $7.00, $3.80, $3.10; TOAST, $11.20, $6.70; WELDING, $3.70.

MADAM CAPET broke alertly, went in close attendance of the leader rounding the turn, responded with determination to pressure through the stretch and held TOAST safe in the final drive. TOAST, slow to find her stride, moved up rapidly after going the first quarter mile, but could not overtake the winner. WELDING began fast, but then dropped back rounding the turn, was pocketed entering the stretch and lost ground when Wright tried to take her to the outside. TOP TIER made up ground steadily on the outside. The race should benefit her.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:37. Winner, A. G. Tarn's b. c. (3), by Sun Beau—Floranada. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORONADO, $37.00, $15.60, $5.60; BULLET B., $16.10. $8.10; BUCKET HEAD (entry), $3.30.

CORONADO, well handled, gradually improved his position on the outside after leaving the backstretch, wore the leaders down through the stretch and drew clear in the closing strides. BULLET B. forced a steady pace in the early running, faced BUCKET B. into defeat and held on gamely in the stretch drive. BUCKET HEAD, quickest to begin, swerved over to the inside and raced along the inner rail all the way. He continued gamely to the last 70 yards and then faltered. TWIST finished stoutly on the outside.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:06½. Winner, F. Spatola's blk. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE PRINCE, $4.80, $2.80, $2.30; DRUDGERY, $2.90, $2.80; SUN INPLAY, $3.00.

WISE PRINCE, displaying good speed, went in close pursuit of the leader in the early running. He drew out decisively when straightened into the stretch, winning with something in reserve. DRUDGERY began fast, showed keen speed in the opening half mile, but was not equal to the winner in the final furlong. SUN INPLAY, a forward contender early while saving ground, was unable to keep pace with the leaders through the stretch, yet held the others safe. OUR KETCHAM closed stoutly.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DICTY STEP, $6.10, $4.30, $2.60; BLUE FANG, $19.80, $4.30; JEST ONCE, $2.40.

DICTY STEP, hustled to the front going to the first turn, was steadied until the stretch turn, where he drew out, winning as his rider pleased. BLUE FANG, on the inside and prominent all the way, shook off JEST ONCE entering the stretch and was an easy-going second. JEST ONCE, on the outside and under light restraint early, made a bold bid midway around the lower turn, but then faltered in the last eighth. BROWN BEN had no excuses.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:59. Off at 5:00. Winner, Superior Farm's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILLIAM PALMER, $14.70, $6.80, $5.00; DARK BEAU, $4.60, $3.60; O'BANTAM, $5.50.

WILLIAM PALMER, vigorously urged in the opening quarter mile, drew clear going into the backstretch, was rated in front and continued determinedly when placed to pressure to maintain his lead. DARK BEAU, on the inside and unable to secure clear passage until the stretch turn, finished gamely, but could not overhaul the winner. O'BANTAM, a trailer the first half mile, closed a big gap the remainder of the trip in circling the field. ODDESA FRANK, well up all the way, had no excuses. HIJO GAUCHO stole through on the inside in the last quarter mile, but could not get up.

EIGHTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:33½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BAREBACK, $5.00, $3.30, $3.00; STALAGMITE, $4.50, $3.60; DALAMAC, $5.00.

BAREBACK held his opposition safe for speed and opened up a commanding lead in the early running. He faltered after entering the stretch and was strongly urged to retain his lead. STALAGMITE, a forward factor the entire trip, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted DALAMAC in the final drive. DALAMAC bettered her position on the extreme outside after entering the backstretch, but then faltered slightly in the stretch run. ALPENGLOW, shuffled back going to the first turn, closed a good gap, but never threatened the leaders.

Tropical Park, March 13.

Dear Al:

This is an explanation of the term "added money" which is used in connection with important races on the turf and which never has been explained satisfactorily to many newcomers to the turf. Let us take the Kentucky Derby, to be run May 6 at Churchill Downs, as an example: It is stated that the purse is "$50,000 added money." The $50,000 is the donation by the Churchill Downs management. In putting up this sum, it is stipulated that $40,000 of it is to go to the winner, $6,000 to the second horse, $3,000 to the third, and $1,000 to the fourth horse. Everybody who wishes to enter a horse for the Derby must put up $25. Usually there are more than 100 such entries. If, for instance, there are 150 entries, then the fee totals $3,750 which is the first part of the "added money." There are no fees for entry for the Derby beyond this $25 until Derby Day, when all owners which start a horse in the race must pay $500 for the privilege of racing the horse. If there are 20 starters, each paying $500, that means $10,000 extra fees, which added to the $3,750 for entrance fees makes added money of $13,750, all of which goes to the winning horse, in addition to the $40,000 apportioned by Churchill Downs out of the original $50,000 donation—meaning $53,750 for the winner in this instance. None of the added money ever goes to any horse other than the winner. The prizes for the second, third and fourth horses remain rigid, as fixed by the track. If Charlie Kurtsinger can get the winning mount in the coming Kentucky Derby he will tie Isaac Murphy and Earl Sande in "triple-header" Derby triumphs. Kurtsinger has booted home two victors in the classic, Twenty Grand in 1931 and War Admiral in 1937. Murphy, the skillful Negro pilot, won with Buchanan (1884), Riley (1890) and followed with Kingman (1891). Sande's trio was made up of Zev (1923), Flying Ebony (1925) and Gallant Fox (1930). The record number of entries for any of the Kentucky Derbies since the classic was inaugurated in 1875 was in 1928 when the list included 196 names. Reigh Count was the winner in a field of 22 starters—a starting field record. Second honors for entries goes to the 1898 Derby, with 179, won by Plaudit in a starting field which was scratched to four.

BILL.

First race—Maiden 3-year-olds will face the starter in the day's opener and this is a good race to pass up. If you insist, Amercup could win it. However, this one is far down the reserve list and is a doubtful starter. Of those assured a place at the post, I'll take Saxonby, Bright Spot and Nanahcub.

Second race—Takus appears to be the right one in this rather open affair. Ashcroft will do the saddle work and the weight seems about right. Milk breaks off the rail and carries a light assignment. Orient Express runs an occasional good race and will be dangerous if in action.

Third race—Blue Covert and Brilliant Gold probably will battle it out in this field of juveniles. Meade will pilot the first named and I'm giving him a slight edge. Baltes is recommended by good looks and may be in the thick of contention.

Fourth race—Exhiliration seems well placed in this sprint and promises to do a lot of running. The top weight of 116 pounds should not bother this one. Cruising likes the track and the route. Notice Me could improve with the change of tracks and is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—Handiboy has done about everything asked of late and will be out for the heavy money in this field. Snider will do the riding and I'm going to string along. Pit Terrier's last was promising and the former Vanderhilt colt probably will be a keen factor. Forfend was scratched today with this in mind.

Sixth race—San Antioca gets in light and will have Peters for the saddle work. This combination should perform well among these and I look for a set of brackets. Seed and Meade team here and should be close. White Hot is at tops now.

Seventh race—The route in this appears to be right up Macie Margaret's alley. She gets in with only 103 pounds and I see no reason for mistakes. Pascua and J. Ware to take care of the place and show awards.

Eighth race—Jolyon breaks off the rail and with an alert getaway may lead this gang to the wire. Ritz Brothers favors the route and will be closing on the leaders in the final stages. Rebel Yell is due some respect.

Best bet—Takus.

8,000 Expected for Rover-Oriole Battle Tonight

Baltimore Six Favored At Riverside

Final Game of Season Here for Eastern Amateur Foes Will Start at 8:30 P. M.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With three consecutive victories under their collective belts the Baltimore Orioles invade Washington again tonight, meeting the New York Rovers in the second exhibition of league hockey staged here this season. The face-off is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock at Riverside Stadium.

Nosed out by a 4-3 margin by a goal in the last minute of play last week, the Rovers are thirsting for revenge and confidently expect to take Baltimore by a comfortable margin. On a basis of their last two matches, however, the Birdmen look like favorites, for they turned back Hershey last Saturday, 6-3, and walloped the Atlantic City Seagulls Sunday, 6-0.

Rovers in Tie

New York, meanwhile, battled to a 2-2 stalemate with Hershey Sunday night, after pre-game ceremonies that featured the hoisting of the 1939 league pennant clinched by the Rovers. The teams played through an overtime period without a score before finally agreeing to let matters stand.

Possibly one of the brightest stars to appear in the Eastern League firmament in the last few seasons is Norman Calladine, good-looking Canadian scoring ace, who tallied three goals against the Rovers last week and is only one short of the league's all-time scoring record. Calladine prodded his total to 70 goals Sunday, with a lone score, and also was credited with an assist. Against New York last week he was brilliant.

Another star appearing with the neighboring sextet is Omar Kelly, pugnacious rookie goalie, who registered his sixth shutout of the season at the Sea Gulls' expense Sunday. Kelly shone last week at Riverside, chalking up 40 saves, most of which were nothing short of sensational. He already bears the stamp of big league approval, and probably will go up to the majors after another year of seasoning. Calladine is scheduled to report to a major league outfit next year.

"Winner Take All"

Tonight's match will be played on a "winner-take-all" basis, inasmuch as the Orioles insisted on this arrangement for a return duel. Both teams pocketed sizable guarantees last week, and the winner of tonight's fray will receive a nice piece of change for the evening's work if the attendance measures up to last week's, when several hundred were turned away. Arrangements have been made to accommodate 8,000 fans. Promoter Ray Alvis gives us his word that much of the confusion attendant upon the inaugural will be missing.

John Boles, stage and screen star appearing at the Capitol, will toss out the first puck, and free skating will follow the match.

Budge Scores Over Perry Once More

Philadelphia, March 13 (AP).—Don Budge scored his third straight victory over Fred Perry in their professional tennis tour tonight, beating the Englishman in straight sets, 6—0, 6—4, 6—2.

A small crowd of less than 1,500 at the Arena saw the California redhead win the first set at love, then come from behind to take the second and third.

D.C. Sportsmen Favoring Perry In Match Here

Two Pro Stars Clash Tomorrow Night at Ritchie Coliseum

With Ellsworth Vines already victor over both Don Budge and Fred Perry on the University of Maryland courts in Ritchie Coliseum, District net fans will decide who they like as second best among the top three tennis pros when Budge and Perry clash tomorrow.

Washington tennis officials, including Lawrence T. Baker, Tom Mangan, Maj. C. W. Christenberry and Barney Welsh, all side with the Britisher and think he will turn the tables on his red-headed conqueror in previous New York and Boston matches of the present tour.

Perry won four times out of six in amateur meetings at Wimbledon, Forest Hills and in Davis Cup play, and the local encounter may prove to be Perry's comeback.

Eddie Bean, local promoter, announces plenty of choice seats left, including 200 or more at special rate for Davis Cup junior players and other youngsters, 16 years old or under. They may be obtained at A. G. Spalding's.

A change in the doubles will pit Walter Senior, Canadian champion, and Budge against Perry and Ben Geochakaff. Perry was originally slated to play with Senior.

New York Quintet Wants Games Here

Any local scholastic, Y. M. C. A. or sandlot basketball team which considers itself comparable to teams outside the city may make that comparison on March 20, 21 or 22, when the cage five of Leake-Watts School comes to town. The suburban New York City team is anxious to book a game during an educational tour of the Nation's Capital, and only a moderate guarantee will be asked.

Leake-Watts has built up an enviable record this season and last, winning 25 straight games in 1937-38 and 15 out of 18 so far this season. The Orange and Black quint tallied 1,009 points last year, and to date this year have an average of over 40 points per game.

Teams wishing to contact the Leake-Watts team may do so by communicating with Gordon Atkins, athletic director, Leake-Watts School, Yonkers, N. Y.

Indians Defeat PWA Courtmen, 31-22, in Play-Off

The all-Indian team of the I. D. R. A. League took a game lead in the play-offs for the champions, last night in Interior gym by defeating the second-half champions, PWA, 31-22.

Ray led the eventual winners to a 15-8 lead at halftime and they had little trouble retaining the margin through the second half. The second game of the play-off series will be played tonight at 8 o'clock.

Baker-Farrington Win at Badminton

Prospective opponents for the men's singles title, Joe Baker and Max Farrington joined forces last night to win the doubles crown in three torrid matches with Shreve and Doyle. The scores were 13—15, 15—3, 15—10.

Settlement of the singles championship was deferred pending Farrington's complete recovery from an ankle injury, which was aggravated by his play in doubles. Farrington was willing to go through with the match last night, but Baker and tournament officials insisted that it be postponed.

A "jinxed" court sealed the doom of Shreve and Doyle, who were obliged to change over from the "lucky" half to the other portion after reaching the point of eight in the deciding game. Every victor in last night's play, which four championships decided, clinched the honors on the "lucky" half. The results:

WOMEN'S SINGLES (finals)—Kay Baker defeated Margaret Graham, 11—1, 11—1.

MEN'S DOUBLES (finals)—Baker-Farrington defeated Doyle-Shreve, 13—15, 15—3, 15—10.

LADIES' DOUBLES (finals)—Baker-Norment defeated Ryan and Ryan, 15—9, 15—0.

MIXED DOUBLES (semifinals)—Graham and Purinton defeated Ryan and Farrington, 17—16, 15—7.

FINALS—Baker-Baker defeated Graham-Purinton, 15—5, 15—4.

MEN'S CONSOLATION SINGLES (finals)—Joe Donohoe defeated Dave Johnsen, 15—7, 12—15, 15—10.

MEN'S CONSOLATION DOUBLES (finals)—Pollock and Gardner defeated McIntosh and Keller, 15—17, 15—5.

Indians Go to Dentist

New Orleans, March 13 (AP).—If the Cleveland Indians don't have a winning season, it won't be because players have dental troubles.

Today the dentist reported that 10 Indians needed "repairs" and club officials ordered the work done immediately.

Merrick Boys Favorites in A.A.U. Boxing

Eight Novices, Five Seniors Remain In Bouts Tomorrow

With eight men left in the novice class, and five in the senior division, Merrick Boys Club will continue its quest for the District A. A. U. boxing championship tomorrow night at Turner's Arena where the annual tournament enters its third week.

Trophies have been donated by the Knights of Columbus, for the team winning the novice class championship, while the Jewish Community Center has put one up for the winning team in the senior division. Competition for both has been at white heat and has given the boys something new to shoot for.

Jay Turner, Catholic University light-heavyweight who will appear in the national intercollegiate tournament at Madison the last week in this month, is coaching Merrick's hopefuls, and has done an excellent job. Johnny Carroll, Herb Graham, Al Gray and Mike Pulaso are a few of his proteges who got off to a winning start in the tournament.

The National Guard, with a bevy of pillow pushers, Pete's A. C., and Police Boys Club are Merrick's outstanding rivals for the titles, and of these the Guardsmen appear to be the most formidable. The troopers' colors are being carried by Jim Perrow, Billy Kekeris, Steve Thompson, Johnny O'Brien and Tex Daniels.

Barcroft Captures Arlington Honors

Barcroft captured the unlimited championship of the Arlington Federation of Boys Clubs last night, winning over Colonial Village by a score of 11-9 in a slow game at Washington-Lee High School. Close guarding featured throughout. Barcroft defeated St. Charles, third team to tie for the crown in the regular series, Saturday night to gain the final round. The winners had a 9-4 advantage in the first half, but Colonial Village's second-half rally fell short of tying the score.

Leemans to Play In Softball League

Tuffy Leemans, New York Giant grid ace, will coach and play third base for the Grand Palace Valet team in the Metro Saturday afternoon softball league.

The strongest ten teams of the 12 applicants will start league play. Any others interested call Mike Sklar at District 4089.

Primo Carnera Weds As Villagers Cheer

Sequals, Italy, March 13 (AP).—Primo Carnera, former world heavyweight champion, and Pina Cavizzi were married here today by a parish priest.

The bride was an hour late reaching the church because of a traffic jam created by well-wishers on the mountain roads near her home. The parents of both were among the villagers who flocked to the church.

Bolling Field, Y. M. C. A. Reds, In A. A. U. Battles Tomorrow

Meet Eckington and Trans-Lux Fives On Program at Eastern High Gymnasium

The last of the first round games in the District A. A. U. championship tournament are scheduled for tomorrow night at the new Eastern High gymnasium and should provide plenty of action. The four-game program is for men only as far as the players are concerned and will mark the first tournament appearance of several first flight local and nearby clubs. Three of the contests are in the unlimited class while the night's opener will bring together 145-pounders.

Much interest will center in the battle between the Central Y. M. C. A. Reds and the Trans-Lux Hour Glass fives. The Reds are half of the hard-playing "Y" squad and will be out to carry the fight to the Trans-Lux club which has played fine ball this year in the Heurich Amateur League. The two teams will be struggling for a chance to meet the crack Jewish Community Center five in the second round on Saturday night.

Bolling Field Plays

Bolling Field, now involved in the play-off for the U. S. Government League title, will carry its rough-and-ready brand of court play against the Eckington A. C. The Aviators boast one of the city's best basketball sharpshooter in Joe Zwisle. He is leading the Government League in point scoring this season with a total of 284. Zwilse hails from Davis, W. Va., and played high-school ball there along with Fred Govedich, another of the Bolling Field stars.

The Aviators also will have in their line-up Ray Hager, a real court veteran. He plays guard and this is his ninth year with Army teams, having played two years in the Philippines and seven years at Bolling Field. He is from Huntington, W. Va. Eckington A. C. has a strong line-up and will be ready to handle anything the Soldiers can show in a basketball way.

Another Army team is slated for action. Fort Washington, prominent in Post tournaments in the past, will swing into action against the Stouffer's Park and Dine Club. Fort Washington will enter the game a slight favorite.

Cremins in Action

The opening clash on the card brings together the Chevy Chase and Epsilon Mu Sigma teams in the 145-pound class. Chevy Chase boasts a keen star in Bob Cremins who has averaged almost 20 points a game this season. He is going to Bethesda-Chevy Chase High next year. Cremins shoots from all angles.

The usual nominal 25 cents will be charged for admission to the four-game program.

D. C. Senior Swim Tourney On This Week

Two Other Events Will Conclude A. A. U. Schedule for Season

Beginning with the D. C. Senior Championships this coming Friday and Saturday at the Shoreham pool, three swimming meets of importance will wind up the A. A. U. indoor swimming season in the next six weeks. On March 28 the low board diving championships for men and women will be held at the Ambassador pool, and activity will be terminated on April 28 with the junior championships at the Washington B. C. pool.

High spots of the senior meet this week-end will be, as usual, the battle for the men's team trophy and the annual competition between Ambassador and Shoreham girls for the women's team trophy. Central High, defending champion in the former event, may have trouble retaining the crown, while the Shoreham team is the best possibility to capture honors. A slight edge earned by Shoreham girls in previous meets may stand them in good stead in the women's event.

Fourteen events are on the program, the only finals slated for Friday night being the 200-yard mens' relay, the women's 220-yard free style race and the men's event over the same distance, same style. Gold, silver and bronze medals go to first, second and third place finishers, and large trophies to winners of team titles.

Bradley Tech Selects Faris On All-Opponents

By the Associated Press.

Peoria, Ill., March 13.—Bradley Tech's powerful basketball team, boasting a record of 17 victories in 20 games against teams all over the country, today selected an all-opponent's team and prepared to invade New York for the sports writers' tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Bradley players, after traveling from Coast to Coast playing many of the country's best teams, picked an all-opponents' team of Laddie Gale, Oregon, and Robert Faris, George Washington, forwards; Billy Dewell, Southern Methodist, center; Ed Mikovitch, Duquesne, and Larry Paffrath, Pittsburgh, guards.

Onderdonk Named Conference Head

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, March 13.—Adrian H. Onderdonk, headmaster of St. James' School, has been elected president of the newly organized Inter-State Athletic Conference, embracing schools in Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia. Albert Mucas, headmaster of St. Albans, Washington, is secretary and Paul Banfield, Landon School, treasurer.

Schools entered in the conference are: Landon, St. Albans and Sidwell-Friends, Washington; Friends, St. Paul's and Boys Latin, Baltimore; St. Andrews School of Middletown, Del., and St. James' School, near Hagerstown.

Each member of the conference is required to play at least four games with conference members to be eligible for championship honors and each school must play each other member at least once during a three-year period.

Mid-Atlantic Meet Opens Here Saturday

Three clubs from out of town points yesterday had been entered in the first annual Chris Heurich-Middle Atlantic Amateur basketball tournament scheduled for Heurich gymnasium on Saturday and Sunday of this week.

New Kensington, Pa., tossers and Hyatt's All Stars, of Pittsburgh, Pa., were numbered among the entries hem Steel Co., of Sparrows Point, Md., newly crowned Baltimore City champion.

Bill Beatty Ties Record With 170 Game

John Parson's 423 Set Tops Scores At Silver Spring

Bill Beatty tied the high game mark in the Graphic Arts League at Lucky Strike last night, totaling 170 pins, a mark set by Earl McPhilomy on the first night of the season. Beatty also had top set, 385, while his Judd and Detweiler combination accounted for team game and set with 617 and 1,726.

Judd and Detweiler defending champions swept a three-game set from Big Print Shop and picked up a game on Progressive Printing's pace-setting quintet.

Georgia Avenue

John Parsons rolled a high individual set of 423 as his Grand Palace Valet team took two games from the Sandfords last night in pin matches in the Silver Spring Georgia Avenue League.

Friars took two from the Senate Lunch as Bill Harper turned the high set of 347 to pace his mates. Doc Hobbs led Colesville Service Station to victory over Cornelius Printing with a 389 set.

Odd Fellows

The first three teams in the Odd Fellows League at Brookland marked time with odd-game victories, Columbia No. 1, leader; Brightwood and Eastern. Frank Donaldson took set honors for the night with 361 while Earl Steele had 145-358, Andy Gardner 350, Walt Humphries 349 and Rett Donaldson 345.

So. R. R. Clerks

Herman Stoffel's 140 game and a 371 set by Rudy Jarman divided honors in the Southern Railway Clerks League last night at Arcadia, while Freight Traffic monopolized the team totals with 600 game and 1,642 set.

Navy Department

Ken Wright, Yards and Docks, rolled a potent 392 set in the Navy Department League feature at Arcadia, while the best individual game was a 147 by Ed McLarney. Secretaries quintet came in for the team laurels with 607-1,749.

Federal League

Astor Clarke prevented National Capital Parks pinmen from sweeping honors in the Federal League at Arcadia, with a 388 set. Otherwise Mark Raspberry, of the Parksmen, had top game of 150 and the team rolled a 612 game and 1,746 set.

C. C. Commercial

Dick Meyer, District Junior golf champion, accounted for high game honors in the Chevy Chase Commercial League with a 150 effort, while set high went to Charles Groff's 375. Dupont Circle has a 582 game and Covington Motor 1,668 to lead the teams.

Jewelers League

E. Duryee swept individual game and set high totals in the Jewelers League at the Ice Palace Alleys, with 134-386. Blustein Wholesale No. 2 also scored a sweep on the team honors with 556, 631.

Chamber of Commerce

Chester Lord had one big game of 147 to figure in the night's leaders in the Chamber of Commerce League at the Ice Palace, while Ed Kellogg's set of 350 was also high. Arrows led the teams with 553—1,550.

Sanico League

Fred Orletsky's game of 158 and set of 391 was unmatched in the Sanico League at Convention Hall, while Sanico Office and Sanico Bakery divided the team's top game and set with 579 and 1,664. Green Bag Office remained in the lead with a game margin over the Baker quintet and Jumbo Bread. Billy LuBille was among the leaders with 145-354.

Navy Yard Minor

District Dog Prize Winner In Pup Trials

Robert A. Ralph's Smithsonian Victor At Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Florich, owned by J. W. King, of Richmond, was second, and Tonyboy Chick, owned by E. C. Meade, of Richmond, was third.

Results in the all-age stake, concluding event, were: First, Shenvalee Sun Beau, V. P. Hawse, Staunton; second, Beaugymn, V. G. Hwase, Staunton; third, Beau's Lady, A. W. Valentine, Richmond.

Award for the best junior puppy whelped after May 1, 1938, went to Hillbright Queen, owned by M. G. Dudley, Greenville, S. C.

G-Men Preparing For Last Stand

A determined bid to even its play-off series with Delaware and Hudson for the Heurich Amateur Basketball League's championship yesterday was planned by Federal Bureau of Investigation as it awaited the second game of this crucial series at Heurich gymnasium tomorrow night, 9:30 o'clock.

In an 8 o'clock preliminary contest St. Martin's five faces Hot Shoppes.

Defeated by Delaware and Hudson Sunday, 30 to 24, FBI automatically will be eliminated from the competition in the event of another loss. An FBI victory will necessitate a third and final game Thursday night at 9:30 o'clock.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1939, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., international copyright and all other rights reserved.)

We see where a fellow in New Jersey is attracting some attention because he claims he is able to foretell the sex of a child before it is born. He claims he has foretold the sex of 50 different babies before birth.

RUNYON

Well, we do not question his statement. We just do not see how a man can get any fun out of a thing of that kind. Half the pleasure in an expected arrival in the family is wondering whether it is going to be a boy or a girl.

It is a matter to be discussed frequently with the good wife in the months prior to the event. We know of no other topic that serves so well to while away the time or is of greater interest to the parties concerned.

Probably the wife thinks it is going to be a girl and refers to it as little Mabel in the cute conversations preceding parenthood. That was the name of her mother. Perhaps the good wife discourses on the cunning way she is going to dress little Mabel when she is old enough to wear dresses. Prospective mamas are always planning those things out away in advance.

On the other hand, maybe you figure the child is sure pop to be a boy, the wish being father to the thought. Prospective fathers generally want a boy and prospective mothers a girl. We are speaking now of the first born. After that the sex does not make much difference, at least to the father. He takes them as they come.

Makes No Difference

Anyway, having decided that it is to be a boy, you half-jokingly take exceptions to the wife speaking of it as Mebel, and refer to it as Walter, or Leonard, or Abraham, or whatever name you have in mind as befitting your offspring. You may not mention the matter openly, but you are dead certain that this one boy is going to be a bright and manly little lad and not at all like those small fiends in human form that some of your neighbors are bringing up. Possibly you even pick out his college before he has even seen the light of day.

We cannot see what difference it would make if you knew in advance the sex of a child, except that it would eliminate the pleasurable anticipations we have outlined and which are the inalienable right of all expecting parents. The knowledge would deprive them of the fun of guess-

Millner to Coach C. U. Ends

Redskin Star Will Assist In Work Now

May Remain as Aide To Bergman Through Regular Season and Play for Pro Team

Wayne Millner, crack Redskin end, and before that all-American wingman at Notre Dame, yesterday assumed the duties of end coach at Catholic University as the Cardinals launched their annual spring training campaign.

Millner, who came here from his home in Salem, Mass., was signed by Head Coach "Dutch" Bergman before the latter left for a Florida vacation. Whether the appointment is permanent, or merely for spring practice was not immediately determined, but it is believed Milner will be retained throughout the entire football season.

The curley-haired pass-snagger visited George Marshall, Redskin president, yesterday before reporting at Catholic U. and said he expected to enjoy his best year as a professional next season. At the Redskin office it was pointed out that Millner could handle both positions without conflict, inasmuch as the pros practice mornings. He would not be with the team weekends, however, when the Redskins are on the road.

Millner's addition to the Cardinal staff fills the vacancy left by Vinnie Fraatz' resignation. A Catholic alumnus, Fraatz resigned after last season to accept a position with an engineering firm. Millner also is expected to materially assist Berman, whose only other assistant is "Fod" Cotton, veteran line coach.

Millner has been with the Redskins three years, joining the club at Boston in 1936 after starring in the all-star game of that year. He reached the pinnacle of his collegiate career in 1935, winning unanimous all-America honors. His last second pass-catching feat that defeated Ohio State, 18-13, in a pulsating battle, is down in the records as one of football's all-time thrills.

Indeed, we think it would tend to make expecting parents altogether too blase about a matter that should be involved in excitement and uncertainty. About the only thing we like to know pretty well in advance is the state of the weather. We prefer a little of the unexpected with nearly everything else.

The Thrilling Way

You take us in a game of draw poker, for instance, and we call for one card, trying to fill a flush. We know a lot of fellows who would just grab up the card the instant it is dealt to them and take a quick look at it to find out immediately if it is any good or not. That procedure is too sudden for us.

We like to take that card and shuffle it in with the other four in our hand and then hold them all tightly together and gradually riffle them a wee bit at a time until we finally get a peek at the new card. If it does not fit our hand, all right, but we have had a prolonged thrill in sneaking up on it. Of course if it happens to be a card we want, the thrill is just ten times greater.

It is the same way when we bet on a horse on an occasion when we are not at the track and have to get the result in the racing form. We do not open the paper and suddenly glare at the top of the order of the finish in the race on which we wagered. No Sir. We start at the bottom of the order and permit our eye to cautiously work upward. That way, we sort o' defer the blow of disappointment or the jolt of joy.

Of course, sometimes our eye meets the name of our horse right at the foot of the order, so there is no use going any farther, and that always makes us feel as if we have been cheated out of a little anticipation. We linger over beginning the reading of telegrams and letters that we know can contain news either good or bad for us, naturally hoping all the time that it will be good news, but getting all the more biff out of good news by the slow approach.

Nothing But Worry

We know fellows who would like to know everything in advance, even the day of their death. They are practical fellows, who would probably use the knowledge to setting their houses in complete order. They would not waste a moment's time on anything else, but do you know what would happen to us under the same circumstances?

Well, we just sit down and do nothing but worry, and the closer our finish drew the less it would find us prepared. We cannot stand for anybody reading our palm or telling our fortune in tea leaves or any of that sort of business because we are afraid they may tell us something we do not want to hear, and what we do not want to hear is anything that savors of ill tidings.

Of course, we do not consider advance news on the sex of a child bad news. However, we do say we would hate to have missed some of the kick we got out of guessing at 'em.

Tunney Claims Louis-Galento Bout Is Natural

New York, March 13 (I.N.S.).—Gene Tunney, most eminent living disciple of Will Shakespeare and noted authority on gorillas, today orated in precise paragraphs that the Joe Louis-Tony Galento duet was decidedly a match—and not match ado about nothing as a large chunk of the populace has suspected.

"Why not?" interrogated the former Hamlet of the heavies. "I believe Galento is the outstanding challenger for Louis' crown. He can lick everybody else in the division and so he deserves a title fight.

"If he doesn't lick Louis, that won't be so much to hold against Galento. It will be because Louis is a superman. Personally I think Louis is the hardest hitter, the most destructive fighter that I have ever seen in action. It would take a Corbett or a Fitzsimmons to beat Louis, unless, of course, Joe isn't in shape."

Usilton, Temple Cage Coach, Dies

Philadelphia, March 13 (AP).—James A. Usilton, 42, for 13 years head basketball coach at Temple University, died today of a heart attack.

A native of Philadelphia, he coached at St. Joseph's College before going to Temple. Under his leadership, the Temple team last year won the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference championship and the national collegiate championship.

cause of a badly cut eye, after amassing a comfortable lead.

Jim Perrow, 160-pounder, was knocked out by Chester Knox, hard-hitting Trenton, N. J., lad, in the third round of their bout. Grover Davis, 112- pounder, was the other District fighter kayoed. He succumbed to the battering fists of J. W. Watson, jr., of Charlotte, N. C., after 1 minute and 36 seconds of the second round. Davis was on the floor for a nine-count in the first round but came up fighting. Watson, who later was eliminated, was too strong for him, however, and the fight was stopped when he put the game District youngster down a second time.

Billy Kekeris, strong and hard-hitting Washington welterweight, made a good showing in his bout with Ray Rovelli, of Passaic, N. J., but couldn't cope with the Italian's two-fisted attack. It was a close bout with Kekeris forcing the fighting in the first two rounds, but Rovelli, apparently the more experienced of the pair, outgeneraled the Greek boy and powdered him with damaging rights to the head that clinched the decision.

Willie Tapp, District bantamweight who participated in a bout in Washington last week in which his opponent suffered injuries which led to his death, easily was outpointed by Johnny Beaton, of Trenton, N. J., in a slow bout. Tapp was no competition for Beaton, who won as he pleased.

Blair High, Mt. Rainier Girls Win

Eastern High Meets Gonzaga; St. John's Tech Clash Tonight

The girl basketball team of Montgomery Blair High turned the trick that evaded boy representatives of the school last night, coming through the first round of the Metropolitan Scholastic tourney with a victory. The Silver Spring lassies rolled up a ponderous 40-13 victory over St. Patrick's team, of the Washington Catholic League. In the other half of the doubleheader at George Washington University gym, Mt. Rainier girls trounced the contingent from George Washington High, of Alexandria, 33-16. The twin session was a preliminary to the semi-finals of the boys tournament tonight at Tech gym.

It will be the third basketball meeting of St. John's Prep and Tech High, the opening clash on tonight's card. It occurs at 7:30, followed by an engagement between Eastern, the public high champ, and Gonzaga's youthful quintet.

The Johnnies, winner of the city schoolboy championship last year, engaged the Tech Mites early in the season and earned a close victory, but the latter came back two weeks ago to issue the Cadets their third defeat of the season. Despite the even series between the teams, St. John's will rule the favorite tonight, largely because of its superior record.

Though it displayed a late-season improvement that brought it successfully through the first round of the Washington and Lee tournament last week, Gonzaga will be hard put for a victory over Eastern's relentless White Tide. The latter on the short end of a 25-10 score at half-time in its opening effort against G. W. High, of Alexandria, came back to win by a 42-32 margin in the wildest rally the season has seen. Gonzaga, though owning one of the finest zone defenses in the city, will have trouble stopping the basket-making of such eagle-eyed shooters as Bob Custer, Lenny Mills and "Bap" Battiste.

Whitehead Stars

Baton Rouge, La., March 13 (AP).—Burgess Whitehead showed signs of rounding into form today as he belted out three hits, one a double, in the New York Giants' intra-camp game. Despite his slugging, his team, the "Joe Moores," dropped a 10-to-2 decision to the "Mel Otts." Whitehead played third base and handled four chances perfectly.

Ken O'Dea, former Cub catcher, led the winners' attack with a home run and a triple.

Mills Finally Signs

San Antonio, Tex., March 13 (AP). Southpaw Howard Mills, whose spring training was delayed 12 days until he decided to end his holdout, joined the St. Louis Browns in a light workout today.

The principal activity was sliding practice in which Manager Fred Haney showed the veterans no favors.

Postscripts . . .

Echoes of the South Atlantic fight and cage tourneys: "Bum" Enright, Washington's favorite basketball official, arrived at the Washington and Lee tournament too late to see St. John's or Gonzaga in action, but he picked up some pointers from Billy Proctor, sleepy-eyed referee at the meet . . . In many ways the two work alike—little fuss, but usually right . . . Forward of the Staunton M. A. team which gave Duham High, the champ, the toughest bit of going, was Sylvan Stein, former basketer at Roosevelt High . . . His coach complains that Stein considers no method correct unless it was used by Coach Herman Littman, of the Riders . . . Two of the Augusta Military Academy fighters who helped the Fort Defiance school win the team title Saturday night were born and reared outside the States Kenny Coote, 90-pounder, hails from the Philippines, and Willie Rossello from Cuba . . . Gene Augusterfer, coach of the St. John's representative in the W. and L. tourney, watched his first reserve, Herbie Munhall, work in the game against Fork Union, and called him the fastest man on the team . . . This, despite Herbie's 190 pounds . . . He'll be made into a fullback on the Johnnie grid team next season, filling Jimmy Mulvihill's talented shoes . . . Billy Richards, Washington's only survivor for the Augusta boxing finals, went into his 155-pound bout weighing little more than 145 . . . Said the water and food disagreed with him . . . Though not allowed to fight at A. M. A., Eastern's "Punchy" Kemp had his hands full seconding fighters . . . Besides masterminding Richards, he worked in the corner of Sylvester Mirchich, a spindle-legged welter from Massanutten M. A. . . . The possibility of W. and L. University terminating its annual schoolboy court round-table after 15 years will be a stiff blow for Coach Orrel Mitchell . . . The Gonzaga mentor, entering a team in outside competition for the first time, had hopes of going back sometime . . . He said he never knew what valuable experience it was for the team . . . Watch out for Gonzaga in the Metropolitan meet! . . . Riley Smith, who left Uncle George Marshall's Redskins for a backfield coaching job at Washington and Lee University, says he's happy about the whole thing . . . Quarterbacking and blocking is fun, Riley says, but you can't do it forever. BILL BURNETT.

On Fishing

There is no doubt of a great awakening throughout the Nation to the importance of conservation effort. We are beginning to realize that, rich as our lands and streams are in natural resources, they can become poor. Many of our waters and broad acres are already bare of the teeming life they once supported. Some of the finest species of marine life are almost extinct—others are in a precarious condition. If the processes of waste that have so long prevailed are not checked we can soon stop worrying about the losses that will come to those who come after us, and start to take stock of the loss to our generation.

ACKERMAN

During the trout fishing seasons about to open in all nearby States, it is hoped anglers will do their full part in this conservation effort by remembering that "if you want better trout fishing—kill less—take a sportsman's creel." Better still, do as so many sportsmen are doing—leave the creel home. Conservation commissions must have help if their overworked budgets and hatcheries are to keep up with the ever increasing army of stream fishermen.

Maryland's trout streams are the first to open in this area—April 1—and anglers are going to find several changes in policy and regulation.

Foremost is the change in the opening hour. There will be no more crowds lining the streams, waiting around flickering campfires for the midnight hour, to start their worm fishing, that in the past has started many "meat fishermen" on their way home long before the break of day.

Hours Are Changed

Instead, fishing is to be allowed only between the hours of 4:30 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. This is to be accomplished, if not by a bill that is now before the Legislature, by regulation of the Conservation Commission, which has the right to close any stream or any part of any stream at their discretion.

Personally we are all for this new regulation, which, in a way, might be said to be a selfish stand, for we never indulge in the sport after dark. However, for those anglers who in the past have spent many pleasant and lucrative evenings on the banks of Fishing Creek where it empties into the Frederick reservoir, we do feel there is some injustice. For at dark, fishing with minnows for bait, is the only time it is possible to take the great trout that throughout the dayligh hours lay in the deep waters of the reservoir. The same condition prevails in several places in the larger waters of several Western Maryland counties. On all small streams this regulation should make for better fly fishing.

On Big Hunting Creek at Thurmont, the same regulations that were in effect last year will be continued and probably until the completion of the work by the United States Park Service, when the area will be turned over to the State. Trout fishing is allowed only between 8 a. m. and 7 p. m. with flies.

New Stocking Policy

A new policy of the Maryland commission, which should also make for better fishing, is the stocking of only the few heavily fished streams, known to be capable of supporting trout; with adult fish every few days, or as needed throughout the open season.

In those streams, which in the past received small allotments of brooks or rainbows to supply additional miles of trout waters, will be placed stockings of bass, crappie, fall fish and suckers, which in the end will mean a better and more diversified fishing, over a longer period of months.

Even the yellow perch, which in Maryland has always been considered a commercial fish, and stocked in tidewater streams and rivers until the commercial take is one of the real resources of eastern and southern Maryland, will have a place in this new plan of distribution. To our mind, one of the best game fishes we have, and not so far behind a trout or bass when taken with a flyrod.

cized by some for not having three timers, enough to make it official, clock Glenn Cunningham in the 1,000 . . . Then Glenn's second-place 2:09.2, which also bettered the outdoor and indoor standards, could have been submitted in place of the Borican mark . . . But it was exceptional to have any timers on the second man and was done only as a concession to the Metropolitan track writers, always interested in having the performances of the runners-up.

One track nabob, at least, was inclined to wonder just how sick Cunningham could have been . . . "No invalid I've ever heard of could run 1,000 yards in 2:09.2," said he . . . This same official figured Borican's "flyer," if it was one, might have meant as much as one-fifth of a second in time . . . which still would have brought him in well under Cunningham's present indoor mark of 2:10.1 and Elroy Robinson's outdoor 2:09.7.

Borican runs at Dartmouth Wednesday night in a try at Lloyd Hahn's 880 record of 1:51.4, which has been on the books for 11 years . . . Don Lash, at the same time, will take a crack at Miklos Szabo's outdoor 8:56 and his own indoor 8:58 for two miles . . . But track experts, while conceding he'll probably beat both times on the fast Hanover boards, are inclined to regard it as a "hothouse" performance . . . "Let him beat Cunningham in record time," they say, "and he'll really have done something."

Texas Educator Praises Folk Festival

The Post-Sponsored Contest Enriches Heritage, He Says

The National Folk Festival has no more enthusiastic supporter than Dr. Homer P. Rainey, former president of Bucknell University and president - elect of the University of Texas. "I believe in the National Folk Festival because I believe we have a great folk heritage," he declared yesterday. "From the cultural point of view I'm enthusiastic about anything which helps to preserve and enrich that heritage. All great art springs from the folk materials of the people. If we are to develop an American culture it must come from the folk.

RAINEY

Heads Association

Dr. Rainey, at present director of the American Youth Commission here, has served as vice president of the National Folk Festival Association for several years. The association's sixth annual festival will be held April 27, 28 and 29 at Constitution Hall and, like last year's performance, will be sponsored by The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

Dr. Rainey looks at the festival from the standpoint of an educator. He feels that a liberal arts college should function in its environment and make use of the folk materials at hand. It was this view which led to the founding of the Pennsylvania State Festival, held annually at Bucknell.

Stimulates Interest

"The festival movement, I have found, stimulates interest among the general public in preserving traditions," he says, "but, even more important, it stimulates whole communities actually to take part in folk customs. The Bucknell festival has reverberations all over the State as performers 'try out' for participation at Bucknell."

One of the reasons why Dr. Rainey, a Texan by birth, keenly anticipates his new position is that Texas is so rich in the songs, dances and traditions of the Southwest. There he hopes to continue his crusade and to make the University of Texas a leader in the movement to preserve the State's folk heritage.

George Stambaugh Burial Set Today In Falls Church

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today in the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, for George Stambaugh, who died Saturday at his winter residence, 3200 Seventeenth street northwest. Burial will follow in Oakwood Cemetery, Falls Church.

Mr. Stambaugh is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Alice Muhl, of Gahanna, Ohio, and two daughters, Misses Anna May and Josephine Stambaugh. He lost a son during the World War, for whom the Stambaugh-McGroarty Legion Post is named.

He had made his home in Falls Church since 1894, and was a member of the first class of Ohio State University 70 years ago, leaving before graduation to teach in a rural school in Franklin County, Ohio. He took the first civil service examination ever given for postoffice employes, and on May 14, 1884, went into the office of Second Assistant Postmaster General as the first civil service employe from Louisiana. He retired in 1925.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, and the Rev. U. S. Knox, of Columbia Baptist Church, Falls Church.

Wild 2-Ton Roller Crushes Driver

Brunswick, Md., March 13 (AP).—A 2-ton street roller out of control sped down a steep grade today and, as horrified spectators watched, overturned and crushed the driver, Edgar Hillary Virts, 46, a municipal employe.

A number of persons, attracted by the roller's wild flight, helplessly watched Virts ride to his death. He is survived by his wife and three children.

Cal's Valet Wins Over Atchison-Keller, 57-50

The sponsor of Cal's Valet quintet missed his first game of the season last night, and missed seeing his charges turn in their most important victory of the Southeastern Community League campaign, a 57-50 triumph over Atchison-Keller Plumbers. The defeat automatically knocked Atchison-Keller out of a chance for the title, automatically giving the championship to D. C. Commissioners.

Ivan Stuaffer (inset), Los Angeles salesman, was jailed in Oakland, Calif., yesterday on a bigamy warrant sworn to by the father of his bride of one month, Phyllis Savage Stauffer (left), former beauty contest winner, of Everett, Wash. Stauffer said he married Miss Savage, believing that his divorce from Bernadine Flory (right) in California permitted him to marry in Washington although the decree does not become final in California until June. His bride said she would sue for an annulment and re-wed Stauffer in June

U. S. Highway Engineer Dies In Honduras

D. Tucker Brown, of Alexandria, Stricken In Central America

D. Tucker Brown, 54, of Janneys lane, Alexandria, senior highway engineer of the Bureau of Public Roads, died last Friday in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, while on his way to San Jose, Costa Rica.

Since 1930 Mr. Brown had been in charge of the construction of the Inter-American Highway, which will eventually run from Laredo, Tex., to Panama. He had returned two weeks ago to Washington for consultation with officials of the bureau.

Born near Lynchburg, Va., Mr. Brown was associated with the Virginia State Highway Department from 1907 to 1913, when he joined the North Carolina State Geological Survey. After serving in France as a captain from 1917-19, he worked for a brief period in Michigan, and returned to Virginia in 1921. He was appointed highway engineer of the Bureau of Public Roads in 1924, and worked for a time on the Memorial Highway.

The body is now being taken to Richmond, Va., by rail, plane and boat. Funeral services are expected to be held next week.

Moving Mountain Slithers Nearer Coast Highway

Gilroy, Calif., March 13 (AP).—Gilroy's moving mountain slithered to within 200 days' travel of the main coastal highway today, creeping over three yards of the barren countryside in 18 hours.

Trees, boulders and even small hills were torn up by the slow march of the moving mass of earth, a quarter mile wide and 100 feet high.

A forecast of dry weather and intervening flat lands and a ravine offered hope the "walking mountain" would be stopped before it covers the remaining half mile to the highway.

Funeral Rites For Rep. Daly Set Thursday

Legislator Dies In Philadelphia Of Heart Ailment

Funeral rites for Representative J. Burrwood Daly (Democrat), of the Fourth District in Pennsylvania, who died Sunday in Philadelphia, will be held in Philadelphia at 10 a. m. Thursday.

In ill health for several years, Representative Daly returned to his Philadelphia home to convalesce in January.

Born in Philadelphia, Representative Daly was educated at La Salle College and the University of Pennsylvania. He served on the La Salle faculty, practiced law, and was later city solicitor of Philadelphia for 12 years.

Elected to the Seventy-fourth Congress in 1934, Representative Daly was the only Democrat ever sent to Congress from the Fourth District in Pennsylvania. He was re-elected to the Seventy-fifth and Seventy-sixth Congresses. He was a member of the House Appropriations Committee.

He lived here at the Occidental Hotel. Surviving are his wife and five children; John J., Paul A., J. Burrwood, jr., James Gordon and Mary Anne, all of Philadelphia.

Barron Collier, Capitalist, Dies at 65

Ad Executive Claimed He Was Florida's Largest Landowner

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Barron G. Collier, capitalist, advertising executive and hotel magnate, died of a heart attack late today at the Medical Center. He would have been 66 March 23.

He had been ill for some time, but his death was unexpected. Until March 6 he had been at his Florida home on Useppa Island.

By his own statement, Collier was the largest landowner in Florida and at the time of his death was the head of several corporations and a director in many others.

He was president of Barron Collier, Inc., street railways advertising company; Collier Advertising Service, Inc.; Florida Gulf Coast Hotels, Inc.; Collier Florida Coast Hotels; Pacific Railways Advertising Co., and Philadelphia Advertising Co., among others.

Collier's enterprises were monumental. In 1923, when the State of Florida named a county for him, he announced he would spend $10,000,000 in West Coast improvements. A year later he signed a contract for advertising in the Brooklyn Motor Transit subway system here at a minimum of $15,000,000 a year.

At one time, he was owner of Luna Park, amusement center at Coney Island.

Also active in philanthropic and civic activities, he was acting president of the Boy Scout Foundation of Greater New York, a director of the Boy Scouts of America, a founder and director of the Museum of the City of New York, commissioner in charge of foreign relations of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and a member of other clubs and societies.

Born at Memphis, Tenn., March 23, 1873, he attended school and started his career in the advertising brokerage business there. He married Juliet Gordon Carnes, of Memphis, in 1907, and she and three son, Barron, Samuel and Miles, survive.

Backed Al Smith

Owner of the power schooner Florida, he often entertained former Mayor James J. Walker of New York at sea and, in 1928, paid $5,000 for the first bale of Georgia cotton at an auction to raise campaign funds for former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, then candidate for President.

From 1922-25 Collier himself held public office as a special deputy police commissioner in charge of the public safety bureau here.

He had been decorated by nine foreign governments and held the degree of doctor of commercial science from Oglethorpe University.

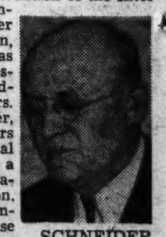
George Schneider, Ex-Representative, Dies in Toledo

Former Representative George J. Schneider, 62, of Appleton, Wis., died in Toledo, Ohio, Saturday while attending the convention of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers Union, of which he was second vice president and a leader for 33 years.



SCHNEIDER

Mr. Schneider, during 14 years of Congressional activity, was a supporter of labor legislation. He was a member of the House Committees on Labor, Mines and Mining, Invalid Pensions and War Claims.

A Progressive, he represented the Eighth Congressional District of Wisconsin from 1923 to 1933 and again from 1935 to 1939.

He was unmarried and is survived by a sister, of Appleton, Wis. The body was taken to Appleton yesterday for burial Wednesday.

3,390 Housing Loans Made Here in Year

Total Is $1,466,529; Bulk Lent by Banks; Demand Continues

By Thomas M. Cahill.

From February 3, 1938 to February 1, this year, 3,390 loans were made in Washington, under Title I of the national housing act involving $1,466,529, and these loans for repairs and improvements were almost all made by Washington banks.

Up to December 31, local banks had extended 3,170 of these repair loans, aggregating $1,392,937. Addition of 220 more in January indicates there is still a demand, even though winter is not regarded as good a time for repair and renovation work as the warmer months. Bankers say they are receiving a great many such applications every week and see a steady increase in requests for such loans as spring advances.

Banks Big Factor

Reports from the Federal Housing Administration indicate that local banks have had an important function in the property improvement program for Washington ever since the original national housing act became effective. Last year, local banks aided more than 3,000 borrowers in the betterment of their properties in the District under provisions of Title I of the act, and since 1934 these institutions have arranged more than 10,000 loans for alterations and general repairs.

From beginning of operations in 1934, up to and including December 31, Washington banks gave credit to 10,615 borrowers for property improvement amounting to $5,384,659.07.

It is also reported that 3,198 Title I loans were made by all lending institutions whose headquarters are in the District of Columbia for the amount of $1,395,726, from February 3, 1938, through December 31, 1938. In the same period, 2,409 Title I loans were made by all lending institutions on property located in the District proper for a total amount of $1,631,019.

To the District of Columbia Bankers Association through its advertising and publicity, is due a great deal of credit for popularizing these property modernization loans. Member banks of the association have also extended a large number of loans for new construction under Title II of the national housing act.

Honor for Lawton

Walter T. Lawton has just won the February trophy of the Washington agency of Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J. Although he has been a resident of Washington for only two years and a member of the agency only a year, Mr. Lawton is leading the unit. He has already qualified for the national leaders' convention of the company for the year ending June 30.

Liberty National Bank

Liberty National Bank was nationalized 19 years ago this month. In March, 1920, the bank as a savings institution had approximately $700,000 in deposits. Since then deposits have grown to more than $7,500,000. The late George O. Walson was founder and first president of the institution, and for many years was one of the best known bankers in the local field. The bank has made excellent progress under the present management, with President M. F. Calnan directing.

Building and Loan League

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League have received news from the national organization that the largest dollar volume of home lending in any January for nine years was done by the country's savings, building and loan associations this year. Their $55,567,000 estimated loan disbursements represented a net gain of 13.2 per cent over January, 1938, and more than half of the gain was accounted for by loans for building new homes, the rest of it by loans to buy existing properties.

A total of $19,488,000, or 35 per

Wall St. Trading Last Year Under Depression Low

New York March 13.—The number of shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange was less in 1938 than in any other recent year, falling 8 per cent lower than in 1934, the previous low year of the depression, and 74 per cent lower than in 1929. An analysis of the Wall Street situation made by the National Industrial Conference Board further reveals that trading volume rose above a million shares a day during only two months of last year. According to the general belief that most brokerage houses cannot make a profit when volume averages less than a million shares a day, July and October were the only months of last year that were out of the red.

Increased margin requirements, restrictions on trading by exchange members for their own account, and discouragement of trading by officers and large stockholders in stocks of their own corporations are factors that help to account for Wall Street's failure to recover from the depression.

The business of underwriting and selling medium-grade and speculative issues of bonds and stocks has almost entirely disappeared, and many of the organizations handling them have been disbanded. If this business should revive, new means of handling it would have to be found. Although a large volume of securities was issued last year, $4,384,000,000, only a small distributing force is needed for handling such business.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 13 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.). Wool was slow in the Boston market today, continuing the trend of late last week.

Buyers were making a few inquiries, but they were not inclined to make purchases except on limited quantities for immediate needs. Mills reported that they had taken some orders for fall goods. There was little inclination, however, to cover these orders for goods with immediate purchases of raw wools.

Good Weather Outlook Hits Wheat Prices

Weakness Overseas Argentina a Factor Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 13.—Wheat values were dragged another ½ cent lower today in a market depressed by weakness abroad and favorable weather for the new domestic crop. Uncertainty of traders concerning the Czecho-Slovak political situation and the future Argentine wheat marketing policy restricted trade.

Wheat started fractionally lower in sympathy with declines at Liverpool and, although this uncovered resting purchase orders along with hedge lifting by mills and elevators, buying was not in sufficient volume to bring about a rally. The decline was checked, however, although the market closed at the day's lows, ⅛@½ cent below Saturday's finish, with May 67⅛@67¾ and July 68@67⅞.

Other grains followed this trend, corn closing ⅛@⅜ off, May 48⅜@48¾, July 49⅝; oats ⅛@¼ lower; rye ⅛@1 cent off, soy beans 1½@1¾ lower and lard unchanged to 7 cents down.

Stocks Work Lower in Lighter Trading; Political and Foreign News Are Factors Bonds Lower; Treasuries Resistant

New York, March 13.—Stocks developed softness in restricted dealings today on appearance of new uncertainties in both domestic and foreign outlooks. Renewal of demands for more relief money at Washington bred doubt as to whether business recovery will, as recently promised, take precedence over political face saving. The latest Hitler interest in Czecho-Slovakia added another cloud to the international picture.

Coppers, steels, high-grade rails and power shares were weakest, while motors and manufacturing specialties showed fairly substantial losses. Small declines were the rule in aircrafts, rail equipments, stores, oils and foods.

Weakness in coppers was attended by a new burst of activity in this division which had been under heavy fire last week because of Chilean proposals to impose a burdensome export tax on the red metal which in that country is produced largely by American companies.

Selling in Coppers

Today, the reappearance of selling, which carried Anaconda and Kennecott to the top of the active list with losses of about a point each, may have represented trader tendency to discount in advance the February statistics on production, consumption and stocks of refined copper. The figures, which became available some time after the close of the stock exchange, revealed another increase in domestic stocks of the metal for the fourth consecutive month.

A small drop in domestic consumption could be accounted for by the shorter month, while the substantial cut in production failed to reverse the rising trend of inventories. Abroad, however, the position of the copper industry was well maintained in February, which stocks at the end of the month equal to only about two months' consumption at present rates.

The lower drift in utilities could not be accounted for by anything particular in the news. Wall Street continues to think well of prospects in this field and selling could be traced to the day-to-day crowd. Consolidated Edison, an active feature, was off half a point.

Declines

Allied Chemical sold off 4 points after publication in the morning of its 1938 earnings, showing a sharp decline from 1937. American Telephone gave up nearly 3 points of its recent gains and Western Electric finished 2¼ to the bad. Declines of a point or more appeared in Loew's, Johns-Manville, International Nickel, Chrysler, Chesapeake & Ohio, Bethlehem Steel and Atchison. Of 739 issues traded, 411 were down, 152 advanced and 176 were unchanged.

Bonds Lower

The decline in the stock market was accompanied by a slight setback in bond prices today. United States Government issues were irregular, with the advances perhaps exceeding the declines by a small margin, but in most sections of the list there was no great press of offerings.

The index of 30 bonds compiled by the New York Herald Tribune showed a decline of 0.28 of a point. The rail issues, which have come in for a good deal of speculation recently, were the softest department of the list, with the more speculative obligations showing the widest drops. Industrial bonds were only slightly lower, while the five utility issues included in the index closed unchanged on the day.

In the foreign bond section the outstanding feature was the weakness in Brazilian obligations, in which the speculative fires burned so brightly last week following the announcement that payments, if not at the rate called for in the bond, would be resumed at the midyear. The weakness extended from the Brazilian government issues to the obligations of the States and municipalities. Better grade corporation bonds were steady to slightly lower.

Denver Jury Indicts Eleven in Stock Frauds

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday the indictment of eight individuals by the Federal Grand Jury at Denver, Colo., for violations of the fraud provisions of the securities act of 1933, mail fraud and conspiracy in connection with the sale of stock of International White Cement Co., which leased a cement plant at Chula Vista, Calif.

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission also reported the indictment of Thomas G. Tripp, Ray F. Swett and Grant V. Hope, all of Denver, for violation of the fraud provisions of the securities act in connection with the sale of certificates in the Midland Mutual Life Association."

Nickel Profit Less Than 1937 But Over 1929

Net Is $32,399,470, $2.09 a Share for Year; $3.31 Earned in 1937

New York, March 13.—The report of The International Nickel Co. of Canada, for 1938, mailed to shareholders yesterday, shows a net profit of $32,399,470 after all charges. The comparable figure for 1937 was $50,299,623 which was an all-time record for the company. This decrease is the first sustained over the previous year's earnings since 1932 when a deficit of $135,344, was reported. The figure for 1938 compares with a net profit of $22,235,966 earned in 1929, the peak year of the pre-depression period.

After disbursement of $1,933,898 for preferred dividends, there remained $30,465,571, equivalent to $2.09 per share on the 14,584,025 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with $3.31 per share in 1937.

Westinghouse

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. operated at a profit every month of 1938, despite a 35 per cent decline in the volume of orders over 1937, A. W. Robertson, chairman, and G. H. Bucher, president, revealed today in the annual report.

Net income for the year was $9,052,773, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $3.38 a share earned on the 2,592,155 shares of common stock outstanding. In 1937 the net was $220,126,406, equal after preferred dividends to $7.86 a share on the common. Sales billed for the year totaled $157,953,216, compared with $206,348,307 in 1937, a decrease of 23 per cent.

Eastern Air Lines

After awarding a $40,000 appreciation fund to employes at Christmas, Eastern Air Lines, completed the first eight months of its corporate operations with a net income of $289,646, before deducting provision of $65,000 for Federal income taxes, Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, prisident and general manager, revealed today in the annual report.

The report covers an eight-month period because Eastern Air Lines, as a corporate entity, commenced operations on April 22, 1938. During the calendar year of 1938, operations of the company and its predecessor resulted in a net profit of $354,249 after making provision of $691,942 for depreciation and amortization and $96,000 for estimated Federal income taxes.

Southwestern Bell

St. Louis, March 13 (AP).—Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., which serves Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma, reported today its net earnings available for interest and dividends in 1938 were $19,811,562. This was a decrease of $277,739 from the 1937 total of $20,089,301.

The company had gross operating revenues of $87,863,254, an improvement of $1,453,712, but the increase was offset by operating expenses, which rose from $55,670,954 to $56,687,938, due principally to higher pay rolls and mounting taxes.

During the year $35,189,706 was paid out in wages to 24,867 employes. The 1938 taxes, said to be the highest in the company's history, totaled $11,722,712, compared with $10,751,381 in 1937. The year ended with 1,484,627 company-owned telephones in service, against 1,399,758 on December 31, 1937.

Commercial Loans Unchanged in Week

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that gains in some parts of the country were offset by losses elsewhere which prevented any change in the amount of commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by banks in the week ended March 8. In the preceding three weeks the banks recorded small increases in business loans following a long decline.

In the week ended March 8, the board reported an increase of $4,000,000 in the Chicago district, $2,000,000 in the New York district, and $1,000,000 in the Philadelphia district.

Living Costs Continue Fall For 15 Months

Food and Clothing Are Chief Factors in Drop After Four-Year Rise

The cost of living in the United States has shown a downward tendency since October, 1937, when the peak was reached in the rise which started in May, 1933, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The current recession began before the cost of living had regained the predepression level in 1929. The latest report shows that the cost of living in January of the present year reached a new low for the current movement. The cost of living in January was 4.6 per cent below the 1937 peak, 15.6 per cent below the 1929 peak but 19.1 per cent above the 1933 low.

The decline of 4.6 per cent in the total cost of living from October, 1937, to January, 1939, was due primarily to a drop of 8.7 per cent in the cost of food and a decrease of 7.6 per cent in the cost of clothes. Rents showed a reduction of only 3.4 per cent, while the combined cost of miscellaneous items, such as carfare, tobacco, candy and physicians' fees declined only 1.1 per cent. The cost of fuel and light combined showed a slight increase.

The cost of living in 1938 did not decline sufficiently to offset the drop in the average consumer's income. Per capita income declined from $536 in 1937 to $493 in 1938, a decrease of 8.0 per cent, whereas the annual index of the cost of living dropped only 2.4 per cent. As a result, the consumer's purchasing power in 1938 was 5.9 per cent lower than in 1937. As compared with the predepression level in 1929, it was 11.6 per cent lower.

Colorado Fuel to Pay Interest on 5% Bonds

New York, March 13 (AP).—Colorado Fuel & Iron Corporation directors today voted here to pay on April 1 the full 5 per cent interest for the year which will end March 31, 1939, on the 5 per cent income mortgage bonds due April 1, 1970.

The interest on these bonds, cumulative, is payable at the option of directors based upon current year's earnings. As of last June 30 there were $11,035,000 outstanding of the issue, created in accordance with the reorganization plan confirmed April 25, 1936. The company's main plant is at Pueblo, Colo.

duPont 1939 Budget To Reach $30,000,000

Wilmington, Del., March 15 (AP).—E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. will spend between $28,000,000 and $30,000,000 in 1939 on extensions and betterments, W. S. Carpenter, jr., chairman of the finance committee, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. Last year $21,000,000 was similarly spent.

Business of the company during January and February was from 25 to 30 per cent better than the same period in 1938, he said, but the 1938 period was "very bad."

English Dancer Out-Swings Americans

Pupils Pant Audibly As He Leads Through Old-Time Figures

An Englishman ruined his country's reputation for dignity and reserve last night by out-swinging 100 Americans.

Douglas Kennedy, director of the English Folk Song and Dance Society, hopped, skipped and jumped through a dozen tricky folk dances at the Wesley Heights Community Hall. His pupils, all Washingtonians newly converted to the art, followed as best they could but were panting audibly by end of the evening.

Last night's demonstration by Kennedy was given in the course of an eight-week American tour. Tomorrow morning he will appear at the Madeira School and tomorrow evening at the Sulgrave Club.

Accompanied by several New York members of the English Folk Dance Society, Kennedy went through the figures with a verve which proved contagious.

The Englishman finds little difference between American dance forms and those of his native land, he said last night. "The style may vary slightly, but after all English blood and American blood bound in the same tempo," he explained.

Kennedy admitted, however, that American groups respond to folk dancing more quickly than the English. "Despite your reputation for super-sophistication, you're all extremely natural underneath," he said. "The rouge may be there, but it peels off easily. English country people are the same way, but in the cities they're apt to be rather stiff."

Among the demonstration numbers were a longways dance, Nonsuch (dating from Elizabethan times); Soldiers' Joy, a morris dance and a sword dance. The audience joined in on Circassian Circle and Hunt the Squirrel. Kennedy presented an intricate "fool's jig" as a solo.

His visit was sponsored by the Washington branch of the English Folk Dance Society of America, of which Gene Gowing is director.

Citizen Seizes 3 Suspects in Home Burglary

North Beach, Md., March 13 (AP).—A citizen turned officer here today and in a one-man roundup put three men behind bars on charges of housebreaking.

Citizen Harry G. Beers said he saw three men enter the home of John Fortney, a neighbor. They came out with a radio, then Beers went into action.

Gun in hand, he ran from his home and arrested the trio. He ordered them into their car and directed them to Magistrate H. J. Fey's office.

The three identified themselves as Joseph and Walter Vermillion, brothers, and Joseph Edinger, all of Washington.

Vice Squad Parks At Headquarters, Nearly Gets Ticket

When is a police car not a police car?

This seemingly simple question has started a controversy between Capt. Milton D. Smith, of the Traffic Bureau, and the Vice Squad.

The Vice Squad uses a police car which has no distinguishing marks. Last week it was parked behind headquarters where a sign says: "For police cars only."

When the vice squadmen returned to their car they found a warning from Capt. Smith:

"The parking of private cars and squad cars on this space is in violation of orders of the major and superintendent. Any cars found parked here will be towed away. Capt. Smith."

Capt. Smith several weeks ago ticketed a policeman's motorcycle parked in the alley behind headquarters.

Mrs. Schwab Gives Bulk of Estate To Steel Magnate

New York, March 13 (AP).—The will of Mrs. E. Eurana Schwab, filed in Surrogates Court today, left the bulk of her estate, valued formally at "more than $20,000," to her husband, Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate. Mrs. Schwab died January 12.

Her sister, Minnie D. Ward, of New York, was left a life income from one-third of the residuary estate, and a niece, Mary Mock Walter, Bethelehem, Pa., was named to receive a remainder interest of the principal of the residuary trust.

A friend, Dr. Samuel A. Brown, of Port Washington, Long Island, was bequeathed $50,000.

G. U. Debaters To Oppose W.Va.

The Walsh Debating Society of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service will debate a team from West Virginia University at 8:15 o'clock tonight at Georgetown. The question will be "Resolved: That the United States should cease to use public funds, including credit, for the purpose of stimulating business." The Walsh Society, taking the negative side, will be represented by James H. Ennis, of Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and Wesley R. Fishel, of Cleveland.

Judges will be Dr. John W. Fisher and Arthur R. Murphy, Washington attorneys, and Charles E. Bish, assistant principal of Roosevelt High School. The chairman will be Richard Look, of New York.

For Maryland and Virginia—Fair Tuesday; Wednesday increasing cloudiness, followed by rain beginning Wednesday afternoon or night; not much change in temperature; colder Thursday.

Conditions

The disturbance that was centered on the Virginia coast Sunday night has moved northeastward with increasing intensity and is now central about 200 miles south of Nova Scotia, the S. S. Ile de France, 28.94 inches. This storm has been attended by heavy snowfall in New England and by rainfall in the Middle Atlantic States, lower lake region, and the upper Ohio Valley. The western disturbance is now located over western Nebraska, Chadron, 29.46 inches, with a trough extending northwestward to the semi-permanent low-pressure area over the Gulf of Alaska, Kallapell, Mont., 29.78 inches; Ketchikan, Alaska, 29.86 inches. Light rain or snow has fallen in connection with this disturbance over the North Pacific States and the northern plateau region. A center of high pressure is located over the District of Mackenzie, with a ridge extending southeastward to the lake region and thence southward to the Gulf of Mexico. Norman, District of Mackenzie, 30.80 inches, and Nashville, Tenn., 30.10 inches. Pressure is also high over the North Pacific States. Eureka, Calif., 30.24 inches. A large mass of cold air has spread southward over the Dakotas and the Northern Rocky Mountain States, attended by light snowfall. Temperatures have risen, however, over the central Plains States and the Ohio Valley. Temperature changes elsewhere have been small.

Barber Convicted Of Attempting to Fix Hines Jury

New York, March 13 (AP).—Salvatori di Sapio, 36-year-old barber, was convicted today of having tried to influence the jury that convicted James J. Hines, Tammany district leader.

A principal witness was Henry J. Ficke, former private policeman, who had pleaded guilty to similar charges, and said Di Sapio approached him about trying to influence Harry Coon, night manager of the police agency and Hines juror No. 6.

Di Sapio was released in $2,500 bail for sentence March 22, when Hines also is to be sentenced.

Lieut. Strange Added to Staff Of Third Precinct

The first precinct yesterday had three lieutenants assigned to it for the first time in its history.

Lieut. Clyde N. Strange, formerly of the detective bureau, was given orders to join two other lieutenants already working in the precinct.

His assignment will permit a lieutenant and two sergeants to be on duty on each eight-hour shift.

Capt. Harvey G. Callahan, in charge of the precinct, formerly was on duty with two sergeants for an eight-hour shift each day.

Thomas Attacks Reserve Board On Prices Policy

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday attacked the Federal Reserve Board for its statement vigorously criticizing bills and proposals advanced in Congress which would require it to raise the general level of prices and keep them stable by manipulating money and credit.

Thomas cited instances in which, he asserted, the Reserve Board exercised such powers. He pointed particularly to its cheap money policy of 1936-37 which he said finally culminated in a recession, when the Reserve Board ordered an increase in bank reserve requirements, to curb rising prices.

"If the present board does not have confidence in its ability to regulate the value of the dollar, then some other board with more confidence in its ability should be appointed to supplant the present board," he said.

Erases Nazi Label; Fined

New York, March 13 (AP).—Matthew Ury was fined $1,300 today by Federal Judge John C. Knox on his plea of guilty to a charge of obliterating "made in Germany" from electric batteries he sold to the city.

Sought Bed, Gets Jail

Frankfort, Ky., March 13 (AP).—William Mull told Federal Judge H. Church Ford he smashed the window of the Corbin, Ky., postoffice to "get a place to sleep." Judge Ford gave him six months.

600 on Hunger Strike

Cleveland, March 13 (AP).—More than 600 prisoners at Warrensville workhouse started a hunger strike today as a protest over "stew five days a week."

Bids and Proposals

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., Washington, March 10, 1939. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2 p. m., April 11, 1939, and then publicly opened, for constructing an overpass in line of Taylor Street N.E., between Brookland Avenue and 7th Street, over the right of way of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The bridge will consist of a cellular abutment at the west end, five steel girder spans supported by concrete piers, thirteen reinforced concrete spans of approximately twenty-two feet each, enclosed in concrete walls, and approximately eighty feet of earth fill retained by reinforced concrete walls. The attention of bidders is directed to the Special Provisions covering subletting or assigning of contract; to the use of domestic materials and to the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Department of Labor. All prospective bidders are hereby notified that any bid submitted in response to this advertisement must be accompanied by a statement of facts in detail of the business and technical organization of the bidder available for the contemplated work, including his financial resources. The Commissioners expressly reserve the right to reject any bid in which the facts as to the business and technical organization, financial resources or experience compared with the project bid upon and based upon past known performance of the bidder justify such rejection. Certified check for $10.00, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., to insure return in good condition, should accompany each request for proposals, specifications and drawings to the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building. Not more than three sets of drawings and specifications, etc., will be furnished to any one general contractor. The Director, District of Columbia Employment Center, is C. E. LAMSON, 808 E Street N.W.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans will receive sealed bids for the construction and completion of St. Thomas Street Housing Project La. 1-1 comprising 121 Dwelling Buildings, 1 Administration-Service Building, 4 Yard Stations, 1 Gas Meter-House and Local Authority Job Office (the work includes demolition of all existing buildings and clearing of the site, construction and completion of all structures, site improvements, landscape work, heating, plumbing, electric work) until 2 p. m. (C. S. T.) on the Twelfth day of April, 1939, at 226 Carondelet Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, and immediately thereafter all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud, in the Commission Council Chamber of the City Hall, New Orleans, La.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish satisfactory performance bond.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including Drawings and Specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority of New Orleans at 226 Carondelet Street, New Orleans, La.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $100.00 with the Housing Authority of New Orleans for each set of documents so obtained. The amount of the deposit will be refunded to each person who returns the plans and documents in good condition within 10 days after the opening of bids.

Plans or specifications, proposal forms or bid forms, will be issued only to "General Contractors" licensed by the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors," or to an authorized representative of a licensed contractor, and in no case will any proposal form or bid form be issued later than twenty-four hours prior to the hour and date set for receiving proposals or bids.

It will be necessary for the bidder to show evidence of license before a proposal form or bid form is issued, in accordance with Act 397 of the Regular Session of 1938 of the Legislature of Louisiana. The rules and regulations of the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors" will apply.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in bidding.

A certified check or bank draft payable to the Housing Authority of New Orleans, U. S. Government Bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and a surety company, in an amount equal to 2½ per cent of the bid shall be submitted with each bid.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of sixty (60) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of New Orleans.

HOUSING AUTHORITY OF NEW ORLEANS.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Few of us are accorded the privilege or the power of being seers, but R. F. Foster, gimlet-minded card wizard, hit the nail on the head when he predicted 37 years ago the growth and popularity of bridge.

Basing his prediction on the conclusion that the psychic condition of a nation is responsible for the types of games it enjoys, he wrote in his "Bridge Manual," published by Brentano's in 1902:

"There seems to be something in the development of the race, in the condition of society, or in the state of public morals, which induces a nation to take up certain games at various periods of its history.

"We are now in the era of trusts, of combinations of such strength that they can absolutely dictate terms to their competitors. If these combinations are unsound, they are expensive errors, but if they are founded on good judgment they overwhelm everything—a condition of affairs which is exactly represented in the game of bridge."

Today's hand played at the Brooklyn Heights Bridge Club is submitted by Foster to show how good duplicate players are overdoing the approaching theory. Even though honors are not scored at duplicate, no trump is a very desirable contract because of its higher point value to the suits, yet only two pairs out of a roomful of contestants were successful in reaching three no trump and making it, with South the declarer. Others played the hand at five diamonds for a smaller score or were defeated at three no trump when North became declarer.

♣ A K 3

1 ◇	Pass	1 NT.	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 6 ♡

Foster comments as follows:

"I am daily more and more forced to realize how little attention is paid to no trumpers when there is the required distribution and especially the carelessness of players in considering which hand should play them as declarer.

"Take the accompanying hand as an example. All players holding South's cards started with one (or two diamonds), overlooking the inevitable reply by North of one no trump. This forces South to lay his hand on the table, exposed, instead of getting his tenaces led up to. The result is that East leads and three no trump cannot be made, as the diamond, king brings in all the hearts.

"At one table North put himself in with a spade and tried the diamond finesse at once, going down two.

If South starts with a bid of no trump (three by my counting system) West leads a club, having two possible re-entries (diamond king, heart queen) and South clears the diamonds while he still holds the ace of hearts, making five odd.

One Was Successful

"Here are two other ways the hand was bid:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT.	Pass	3 NT.	Pass
Pass	Pass

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The hand is an ideal two or three no trump bid, depending upon the type of no trump bidding employed. North has enough to raise to three should South start off with two.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE CHANCES are that Congress will be asked soon to lift the secrecy that for years has made Federal personnel folders a device through which employes, thousands of them, are convicted without the privilege of a hearing.

The chances are, also, that Congress won't have anything to do with it—will call it a matter that should be attended to by the Civil Service Commission and administratively, otherwise, in the departments. If this turns out to be true then nothing will be done about it because the C. S. C. already has told the President that the records should be kept secret. And the departments think they should be kept secret. Only the employes—who are beneficiaries of the trouble arising from the secret folders—think otherwise in the matter.

The Federal Personnel Association holds a meeting tonight in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium to see how the folders can be opened, enabling the employes to read what charges—true and otherwise—have been brought against them through the years. The association knows how it could be done: either through the issuance of an executive order or through a rider on any personnel appropriation. The President would have to say no more than "open the files." The Congress would only have to direct that no funds can be expended for personnel uses until the files or folders have been opened.

But the chances are dim. And here is what is happening in the meantime:

Promotions are in many instances being held up because of charges against the individuals that were made in secrecy and held in secrecy in the folders. These employes never have had the opportunity to answer the charges and in many instances do not even know of the presence of the charges in the folders.

These charges, which often amount to nothing more than unsubstantiated accusations, can be made by anybody and at random. Supervisors can lodge them out of spite; outsiders can write them in. Into the personnel folders they go, to lie there in secrecy against the employe and to be used against him if anyone sees fit. Such are the folders—tiny courts where the defense isn't allowed to enter.

THE Interior Department's National Park Service is emphasizing to its concessionnaires that when they establish public resorts on Government land, all spirituous liquors must be dispensed under State regulations. This results from a lesson learned when the War Department once let out a hotel concession on a military reservation and permitted the operators to sell liquors under Federal laws. The State squawked.

SENATOR O'Mahoney gains the ex-officio title of "the stamp collectors' friend" by having restored the $6,000 item necessary to send the Postoffice Department's philatelic truck on the road. The tires of the vehicle—which have already been over a rough legislative road—were inflated yesterday and it is due for the road within a couple of weeks . . . The I. D. R. A. (which has about 1,800 members) is starting a baseball team with these feminine sponsors: Louise Kearney (PWA), Louise Metcalf (NPS), Helen Pawl (PWA), Adrienne Doyle (USHA), Evelyn Adams (Land Office), Dorothy Richardson (PWA), Nora McGinnity (PWA), Addie A. Hughes, Doris Rothwell, Sue Brady, Anita Reeves, Eva Gradijan, Texas Travis, Sophie Tritsch, Dorothy Burks, Dolores McCarthy, Betty Brunstetter, Velma Carter, Kitty O'Farrell, Nancy Pooler, and others. They will all be in attendance at the dance Friday night in the Press Club that the I. D. R. A. gives for the benefit of the ball team . . . How a retired Federal employe enjoys her retirement: Miss Rebecca Hyneman, formerly of the Veterans Administration, is in Washington for a month's visit after traveling in ten European countries and making an automobile trip across the United States. She drove the entire distance alone . . . The Treasury Chess and Checker Club has found permanent quarters in the Central High School and meets each Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Mabel E. McPherson writes in . . . Randall Jones, travel lecturer for a transcontinental railroad, who has twice appeared at the White House before invited guests, will give a lecture on "Western Wonderlands of Color," tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution avenue, under auspices of the NPS. There is no charge.

Bob Burns Says—

My Uncle Toot was braggin' the other day about his havin' worn a pair of suspenders fer 30 years. "I don't care what you say," he goes on. "That's a terrible long time fer a man to have his pants held up." I allowed it was, seein' as most men has gone to belts. "Why, Uncle," says I, "them dern suspenders has worn regular grooves right into your shoulder blades. Why don't you go modern an' throw the things away?"

"Bob, if you want to know the truth, unless I kin stick my thumbs under my suspenders an' pull 'em out an' snap 'em every now an' then, I jes' can't win no argument down at the democratic club. You ain't got no idea what self-confidence it gives a man to be able to pluck his suspenders when he gets in a tight corner. An' besides, I need to hold onto 'em fer balance when I'm aimin' at the old cuspidor! No, sir, Bob—I could part with my pants easier'n I could them! Why, without em, I'd be in an awful state!"

"Yep, Uncle," says I. "An' I know jes' what state that would be—the state of suspendered animation!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Love Song in the Sky

Peter Rabbit was watching Longbill the Woodcock, bowing and behaving generally in a way that was nothing less than silly. Anyway that is the way it looked to Peter. Sometimes Longbill's head was thrown so far back that he couldn't see where he was going. It was very funny.

Peter has seen Thunderer the Grouse strut and it was something worth seeing. You see, Thunderer has a handsome tail and when he spreads this above his back it is something to admire. But Longbill the Woodcock has a tail that is almost a joke, and when he spreads it and struts he has no dignity. Thunderer the Grouse has.

Peter knew that Longbill was not doing all this strutting for his own satisfaction. There must be someone there to watch him, although Peter hadn't seen anyone, and he had been sitting right there a long time and had looked everywhere.

"I'll just ask him what he thinks he is doing," thought Peter. "He doesn't know I am here, so he certainly isn't doing it for my benefit. It must be that Mrs. Longbill is somewhere around. I would just like to know if she is."

Just then Longbill stopped strutting and flew. Peter saw him disappear above the treetops, but long after he had vanished Peter could hear him whistling and by the sound he knew that Longbill was circling and going higher and higher as he circled. He knew this because the whistling kept sounding farther and farther away, yet still right overhead. Peter wondered how he did that whistling. He never had heard him whistle when on the ground. Did he do it with his wings?

"I wonder if he will come back," thought Peter. Just then there were two or three clear call notes from the darkness high up over Peter's head and then a song. Yes, sir, it was a song. It was a real song in which were joy, desire and sweetness. Peter remembered he had heard Teacher the Ovenbird sing up in the air much like that, but Teacher belongs to a family of singers. Somehow it was hard to think of Longbill the Woodcock as really singing, yet Peter knew that it was Longbill and none other to whom he was listening. Teacher the Ovenbird was still far away in the Sunny South.

"It is as hard to believe that Longbill can sing like that as it was the first time I ever heard him," thought Peter. "I don't believe many folks know he can sing like that, or sing at all. It was a long time before I found it out. Here he comes down now."

The song had ended and a moment later Longbill was on the ground calling "Peent, peent." There was nothing in that call to even suggest that he could sing. He began to bow and strut.

"Where is she?" asked Peter, stepping out from where he had sat motionless so long.

"Here I am, if you must know, although it is none of your business, Peter Rabbit," said a voice, and Mrs. Longbill arose from where she had been squatting in plain sight but still unseen.

Peter was unabashed. "I knew you were somewhere near or Longbill wouldn't be doing all those funny things," said he.

"He isn't doing funny things!" declared Mrs. Longbill sharply. "He knows I love to see him strut, and that is why he is doing it."

"And I suppose he was singing to you just now up there in the sky," said Peter.

"Of course I was singing to her. I certainly wasn't singing to you or to anybody else," interrupted Longbill. "Come on, my dear. Let's go where we can be by ourselves."

Together they flew off and almost at once disappeared in the Black Shadows. Later as Peter was leaving that swamp he again heard that love song in the sky and stopped to listen. "I suppose they will have a nest soon. I wonder where," he muttered.

Supreme Court To Review Bank Decision

Ruling to Involve Million Recovered by U. S. After Failures

The United States Supreme Court yesterday agreed to review lower-court decisions involving more than $1,000,000 recovered by Secretary of War Woodring and three semi-governmental agencies when two Washington banks failed in 1933.

Pledged Securities Sold

This money had been recovered by the sale of securities pledged by the District National Bank to secure deposits of Secretary Woodring for the Panama Canal, and by the Commercial National Bank to secure deposits of the Inland Waterways Corporation and the United States Shipping Board as well as further Panama Canal deposits.

Upholding the contention of the bank receivers that such pledges on the part of the banks were illegal, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals had directed Secretary Woodring and the agencies to return to the receivers funds recovered in excess of the amounts recovered by other general creditors.

Brief Involves U. S.

The Government brief said the United States was an indispensable party to the litigation since "the judgment takes the money not from the petitioners personally but from the Government they serve."

The amounts involved are $214,739 deposited in the District National Bank by the Panama Canal, being funds of the Canal Zone postal service; $711,622 of the same funds in the Commercial National Bank; $482,656 of Inland Waterways Corporation funds, and $405,291 of Shipping Board funds in the same bank.

Colonial Wars Society Elects Officers Tonight

Deputy governor and delegates to the general assembly will be elected by the Society of Colonial Wars at the Metropolitan Club tonight at 8 o'clock. Dr. Arthur Camp Stanley has been nominated deputy governor and Gilbert Lewis Hall, Harryman Dorsey, Col. Edward A. Harriman, William H. Somervell and Fulton Lewis for delegates.

Favor President's Proposal for Additional Relief

Harris & Ewing.

This delegation of four New Deal Senators, pictured outside White House yesterday, told President Roosevelt that they favored his proposal for an additional relief appropriation of $150,000,000. Left to right, Senators James M. Mead, of New York; Josh Lee, of Oklahoma; Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana and H. H. Schwartz, of Wyoming

Social Agencies Act to Halt Charity 'Rackets;' Street Urges Licensing to Safeguard Public

Laws requiring all philanthropic and charitable agencies to be registered and licensed were urged yesterday by Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, as the only way of suppressing charity "rackets."

Speaking at the monthly meeting of the Council of Social Agencies at the K street branch of the Y. W. C. A., Street declared that "simply giving the public information does no good." Licenses should be issued by the Board of Public Welfare, he said, as it is the board's function to set up standards for social welfare work.

Under the present law it is impossible to prosecute agencies that solicit funds by telephone, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Police Department, told the meeting, as soliciting was only illegal on public streets and highways.

Tens of thousands of dollars a year go to "spurious charities," according to Herbert Willett, director of the Community Chest.

The Rev. John Mixon, director of the Social Welfare Department of the Federation of Churches, declared "the problem of unregulated organizations collecting money touched every church in the city," as most people were inclined to give to any organization that was incorporated, thinking that a guarantee of honesty.

Commissions of from 25 to 50 per cent go to solicitors in some cases, Miss Sally Muchmore of the Better Business Bureau asserted, and an additional 10 per cent goes to the "runners."

Mrs. Pearl Kline, chairman of the council's legislative committee, reported a bill had been drawn up by the committee requiring every agency soliciting funds from the public to furnish the identity of the group sponsoring it; to keep public records of all funds and expenses, as well as of its purposes; and setting a definite limit to the proportion of the agency's funds going to the cost of solicitation and overhead costs.

Massachusetts Wins Fight for Green Estate

Declared Legal Home Of 315-Lb. Colonel; $5,000,000 in Taxes

By the Associated Press.

After a long legal struggle with three other States, Massachusetts yesterday won in the Supreme Court the right to the lion's share of inheritance taxes on the $36,137,335 estate of the late Col. H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green.

In a 6 to 2 decision, the court declared the Bay State was the legal residence of the 315-pound colonel, who died in 1936 after a joyous existence collecting whaling relics and first edition bank notes, pondering the subtleties of Kant and Hegel, jiggling pocketsful of diamonds, admiring pretty girls, distributing $5 gold pieces to New York policemen and flying his own dirigible.

The decision was interpreted as meaning Massachusetts could levy on the real property (such as real estate) located within its borders, and on intangible property, such as securities, wherever located.

Officials Overjoyed

The experts added, however, that other States could tax tangibles within their borders. Tangible property in the four contending States was fixed at: Massachusetts, $2,498,707; New York, $1,583,221; Florida, $222,276; Texas, $2,220.

Massachusetts officials were overjoyed. They differed on the sum they would collect, estimates running from $4,987,320 to $5,250,000.

The Federal Government already has collected $17,520,857 inheritance tax. Texas had sought $4,685,057; Florida, $4,663,857; New York, $5,910,301, and Massachusetts, $4,947,008.

Frankfurter's First Dissent

Justice Frankfurter wrote his first dissent as a member of the tribunal. Justice Black concurred in Frankfurter's view that the court did not have jurisdiction.

The court outlined as a yardstick to decide "whether a dwelling-place is a person's home" these points:

The physical characteristics of the place; the time spent there; the things done and the persons and things therein; mental attitude toward the place; intention to return when absent, and the facts about other dwelling-places.

Ex-Mayor of Kokomo Held With 10 Others for WPA Fraud

By International News Service.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 13.—Former Mayor Olin R. Holt of Kokomo and ten other persons, including five city officials under Holt, were named in Federal indictments today charging misuse of WPA labor for private gain.

The indictments specifically allege a conspiracy to defraud the U. S. Government over the period from July 15, 1935, to January 1, 1939, when the Kokomo city administration changed.

Among those named with Holt are George H. Morrow, his city engineer; Carl J. Broo, city attorney under Holt; Mel Good, former city clerk; George Mix, former assistant city engineer, and Lincoln F. Record, former WPA project superintendent.

Also included in the charges are Thomas C. Heady, president of the Sumption-Heady-Hunt Construction Co.; Lester E. Ratcliff, WPA county superintendent up to two years ago; James A. Harmon, a former WPA supervisor, and Joe Tarkington, an employe of the Governor's commission on unemployment relief.

One of the counts in the indictment charges the defendants bought a block of brick buildings, used WPA labor to raze them and clean the bricks which they then sold to the city for $10 a 1,000. The deal netted $10,000, it was alleged.

District Attorney Val Nolan declared the alleged conspirators had also bought a load of bricks from a glass company for $87 and used WPA labor to haul them to the city yards, where they were resold for $1,500.
